PREFACE.

THE idea of printing and publishing deeds of trust, and deeds of foundation concerning offices held in the University, originated with the Reverend William Webb, D.D., Master of Clare College 1815-1856. When he was Vice-Chancellor for the first time he printed documents relating to three Professorships, viz. the Plumian, the Woodwardian, the Lucasian, and to the Arabic Lectureship or Professorship founded by Sir Thomas Adams. Each of these four offices has a small octavo tract to itself, separately paged, without title-page, and without cover. Dr Webb's intentions are set forth in the following note, which precedes the account of the Plumian Professorship:

CLARE HALL LODGE,
April 7, 1818.

Some MEMBERS of the SENATE having expressed to the VICE-CHANCELLOR their wishes that he would print and circulate in the University the Wills, the Deeds of Foundations, and the Statutes of the respective Professorships, in order that the Professors may know what are required of them and the conditions under which they accept of their said Professorships: he complies with the wishes of these Members, not in the least intending by this compliance to interfere with the present professors of these Professorships, most of whom have been admitted into them in ignorance of the particular regulations by which they were to be governed.

With these modest contributions to history Dr Webb's labours ended; and no further steps were taken to continue what he had begun until 1857, when the Reverend Henry Philpott, D.D., Master of S. Catharine's College 1845-1861, published Trusts, Statutes and Directions affecting the Professorships of the University. It is an octavo volume of 112 pages, with no author's name on the title-page, but the ascription of it to Dr Philpott is rendered certain by the following letter, attached to the cover of the copy preserved in the Registry :

CATHARINE LODGE,
12 Jan. 1857.

MY DEAR ROMILLY,

I send you a copy of the little book of Trust Deeds etc. concerning Professorships which you have so kindly helped me to prepare for the use of the Council and of the Senate. It will be followed by two more, one concerning Scholarships and Prizes, and the other concerning certain other Gifts and Endowments. I will send you copies of them when they are ready.

Yours very truly,

H. PHILPOTT, V.C.

These subsequent publications duly appeared in the course of the year. The pagination is carried through the series, and they can therefore be readily bound together. In that condition they form a volume of 312 pages, but there is no general title or table of contents. It is noteworthy that while the words Trusts Statutes and Directions appear on the title-pages, the label on the back has the words Endowments of the University of Cambridge printed on it. The work is extremely well done. The documents have all been accurately transcribed and collated with their originals, with the help, as we are now informed, of Mr Romilly (Registry 1832-1862). I have used most of Dr Philpott's transcripts in the preparation of my own work, and have detected very few errors of importance.

In 1876 Dr Philpott's volume was reissued, with a new title-page, and new tables of contents, but the older portion was not altered in any way as regards new matter. The documents which had accumulated since 1857 were sorted into their proper places at the end of each division of the original work. This was done, I believe, by the present Lord Bishop of Bristol, the Right Reverend George Forrest Browne.

The preparation of new editions of the Endowments has now become one of the duties of the Registry; and I regret that through other engagements the completion of this volume has been so long delayed. This delay has been increased, to some extent, by the view which I have taken of the way in which the book ought to be produced; and I have to thank the Syndics of the University Press for allowing me a free hand in this important matter.

In the first place, I hold that mere documents, printed without notes or preface, are of very little use. I have therefore introduced each document, or group of documents, with a certain amount of explanation.

Secondly, I have given an account of several offices, as for instance of Professorships, which have not been endowed by external liberality, because, as they increase the usefulness of the University as a place of education, they may rightly be regarded as part of its general endowment.

Thirdly, every present made to the University ought, in my judgment, to be treated as an Endowment, and recorded in such a work as this, so that the benefactor who gave it may receive his proper acknowledgement. In this part of my work, however, I felt that some limit was necessary, and therefore I have recorded those gifts only which have been formally accepted by Grace of the Senate. I regret to find that in this important matter our practice has not been uniform. In the course of my work I have observed that numerous gifts, quite as important as those honoured by special thanks, have been placed in our collections without any public recognition whatever. This carelessness is not characteristic of any special period, but appears to have always been a part of our habitual practice.

Fourthly, I have included a few benefactions, which, having either been intended for a special purpose at the moment of donation, or made terminable after a certain period, run a risk of being forgotten altogether. I allude to the Buchanan Prizes, Dr Whewell's Moral Philosophy Prizes, and the like.

The table of contents shews that the documents here printed have been sorted under certain obvious heads, as, for instance, Professorships, Lectureships, Scholarships, Prizes, etc. This arrangement, though obviously unavoidable, stands in the way of any comprehensive view of what was being done in the University at a given time. I have therefore added at the end a chronological table in which the more important endowments are all recorded. By help of this table it will, I hope, be possible to use the book either as a cartulary, or as a history of the progress of education at Cambridge.

In conclusion, I wish to point out that the Book of Endowments is intended to be a companion to the Book of Statutes and to the Book of Ordinances, and, to a certain extent, to the Architectural History also. I have done my best, by the introduction of frequent references, to make this interdependence apparent.

I have to thank my friend the Rev. E. G. Swain, M.A., Assistant Registry, for kindly correcting the proofs of the Index.

JOHN WILLIS CLARK.

I. BENEFACTION OF KING HENRY THE SEVENTH.

In 1504 (20 November) a quadripartite indenture (A) was drawn up between the King of the first part; John Islip, abbot of S. Peter of Westminster, and the Prior and Convent of the same, of the second part; the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, of the third part; and the Mayor and Corporation of the City of London, of the fourth part: in virtue of which £10 was to be paid yearly at Michaelmas by the Abbot, Prior, and Convent of S. Peter at Westminster, to the University of Cambridge, in Great S. Mary's Church, "to be employed and disposed for the common wele of the same University."

In consideration of this sum, so paid, the University bind themselves to hold a service on February 11 in each year, for the good estate of the King, and for the souls of his late Queen, their children, and his father the Earl of Richmond, his ancestors, and his mother the lady Margaret, Countess of Richmond and Derby.

After the dissolution of monasteries a decree of the Court of Augmentations, dated 12 October, 1544 (B), confirmed the above grant; and the Statutes of Elizabeth (1572) directed that King Henry the Seventh should be commemorated on 8 May, when a sermon should be preached by the Regius Professor of Divinity¹.

2. RECTORY OF BURWELL, CAMBRIDGESHIRE.

The manor and rectory of Burwell, part of the property of the Benedictine House of Ramsey in Huntingdonshire, were granted by Henry VIII to Edward North 4 December, 1540², and confirmed to him by letters patent 29 January, 1541³. In the same year he was knighted, made treasurer of the Court of Augmentations, and elected as one of the representatives in parliament for the County of Cambridge. In or about 1544 he became Chancellor of the Court of Augmentations⁴.

In 1544 (4 October) a deed (A) was drawn up between him and the University, in virtue of which he engaged, on receipt of £600, to procure letters patent from the King, with other necessary documents, to enable the said University to appropriate the rectory of Burwell S. Mary. North further undertook to grant to the University the right of sheep-fold, and the advowson of the vicarage, the University paying £20 yearly to the vicar, and defraying two-thirds of the cost of repairing the chancel, and of the pension due to the Abbot of Ramsey⁵.

The King's Letters Patent (B) dated 28 November, 1544, confirm the provisions of North's grant, and further regulate the relations of the University to the Vicar and to the Crown. The bishop of Norwich (in whose diocese Burwell then was) assented to the transaction 5 December, and the archdeacon of Sudbury 6 December next ensuing. Thereupon Sir Edward North, by a deed dated 20 December, acknowledged the receipt of "a certain sum of money" from the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, acquitted them thereof, and confirmed to them, "all that the advowson" etc. of the Rectory of the Church of Burwell S^t. Mary¹. By a second deed, dated on the same day, he granted them a right of fold for 200 sheep².

There is no evidence that the Senate was consulted on this purchase. The only Grace referring to the matter is the following, which merely authorises the payment of the first instalment of the purchase-money. It was allowed in the course of the academical year 1544-45, but is not dated more precisely.

Item yt ys graunted y^t. M^r. Vicechancellor do carye vpp and pay to Sir Edwarde Northe Chaunceler of thawgmentacions at the delyuerye of the kynges lettres or other thynges requysyte acordynge to the purporte and effecte of the Indenture now red, the fyrst payment³.

The final payment to North was made in March 1545, as shewn by his receipt in full, dated March, 1544 (March, 1544-45) 36 Hen. VIII.⁴

In 1646 (11 June) the University bought "the Rectorie, Little Parsonage, or Priorye, of Burwell S^t. Andrew ... and all houses, edifices, buildings, barns, stables orchards gardens arable lands meadows pastures [etc] Tenthes and Tithes of Corne and haie and all manner of tithes of whatsoever Nature ... to the said Rectorie ... in aniewise belonging," for £1026. 13. 4⁵.

6. HOSPITAL OF S. MARY MAGDALENE, STURBRIDGE.

The small Norman church standing eastward of the site on which Sturbridge Fair used to be held, and known as the Hospital of S. Mary Magdalene, Sturbridge, or, more briefly, Sturbridge Chapel, was bought by the Reverend Thomas Kerrich, M.A., Fellow of Magdalene College, and principal librarian of the University (1797–1828), from Frederick Markby, Esquire, for £160, 19 January, 1816². The condition of the building had attracted attention during the previous year, for the following Grace passed the Senate 24 October, 1815:

The total amount subscribed, including £30 from Mr Kerrich himself, was £174.

In the deed dated 29 May 1817, by which Mr Kerrich conveyed the building to the University, it is described as:

7. PURCHASE OF PART OF THE SITE OF DOWNING COLLEGE. 1897-1902.

In 1895 Downing College was empowered under the provisions of the Downing College Act to sell their surplus ground; and shortly afterwards approached the Financial Board with a view to the purchase of certain portions of it by the University. Three pieces of ground were accordingly bought.

I. In 1896 (13 May) the Financial Board recommended the purchase of two acres fronting Downing Street, at a cost of £15,000, on the following conditions :

(1) The University to covenant that they will not for a period of fifty years from the completion of the purchase erect on the site or allow the erection thereon of any buildings for other than Academical purposes.

(2) The strips of land shewn on the Plan along the Downing Place side and the Tennis Court Road side not to be included in the two acres, but to be devoted to widening the roads.

(3) The purchase to be conditional on the College diverting that portion of Hobson's Conduit, which now runs under the College grounds from a point near the Fitzwilliam Street gate to the Downing Street gate at the end of the avenue—the University agreeing to pay one-third (being the proportionate share) of the whole cost of such diversion.

(4) The University and the College to covenant with each other not to erect any building above 15 feet in height within a distance to be agreed upon on either side of the southern boundary of the land purchased.

(5) The trees standing on the site to be taken by the University at a valuation as timber.

(6) The purchase money to be paid as follows: £5000 on obtaining possession, and the remainder by five annual instalments of £2000 each with interest at 3 per cent. on so much of the purchase money as remains from time to time unpaid¹.

This Report of the Financial Board was confirmed by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 11 June, 1896:

That the Vice-Chancellor be authorised on behalf of the University to enter into a contract with the Governing Body of Downing College for the purchase of two acres of the Downing College land adjoining Downing Street, as shewn on Plan B, at the price of £15,000 upon the terms stated in the foregoing Report.

II. In 1897 (10 November) the Financial Board, acting on the suggestion of the Sites Syndicate, recommended the purchase of a second piece². The following Grace, allowing this, passed the Senate 9 December, 1897:

That the Secretary of the Financial Board be authorised to enter into a contract with the Governing Body of Downing College for the purchase of an additional strip of land, 40 feet in width, along the southern boundary of the land already purchased; the price to be at the rate of £5000 an acre, and the purchase to be subject to the same conditions (so far as they are applicable) as those under which the previous purchase was effected³.

³ The price paid was £1972. See Grace to seal the conveyance, 16 June, 1898. Ibid. p. 1054.

III. In June 1901 the Council of the Senate invited the Financial Board to take into consideration the possibility of acquiring by purchase or lease or otherwise a further portion of the Downing College Estate which the College had begun to develop for building-purposes by constructing a road with a sewer in a direct line from Fitzwilliam Street to Regent Street. Negotiations were accordingly set on foot, and in the Michaelmas term the Master of Downing College communicated the following resolution to the Vice-Chancellor, dated 19 October 1901 :

That the College would be willing to sell the land (six acres more or less) to the University for Academical purposes at the price of £4000 per acre if the land be conveyed and the price paid at once ; or, in case of deferred payment, at such a price per acre as would correspond to the present investment of £4000 in English Government Securities, the interest during the period of delay to be reckoned at one per cent. per annum during the first two years, two per cent. during the second two, and three per cent. thenceforward.

This proposal was accepted by the Financial Board as a basis for further negotiation, and a provisional agreement was arrived at with the College¹, when the Board of Agriculture declined to give their assent partly on the question of price, partly on that of the proposed mode of payment. The point finally insisted on by the Board was that an annual income at the rate of at least £120 per acre should be secured to the College by the sale of the land.

After a long discussion with the Board of Agriculture the Financial Board recommended in a Report dated 15 March, 1902², that the following conditions of purchase should be accepted by the Senate :

(1) That the price shall be fixed on the basis of an annual rent-charge of £120 per acre, the rent-charge to be redeemable by the University at any time (in such instalments as may be agreed upon) by the transfer to the College of such 'Trustee' Securities, to be selected by the University and approved by the College and the Board of Agriculture, as will produce an income equal to the amount of rent-charge redeemed.

² Ibid. p. 627.

Site of Downing College

(2) That the purchase shall be effected in three portions, namely, one-third as on January 1, 1902, one-third as on January 1, 1904, and the remaining one-third as on January 1, 1906.

(3) The University to covenant that they will not erect on the site or allow the erection thereon of any buildings for other than Academical purposes, this covenant to be limited, in respect of the northern half of the site, to a period of 50 years from the date of contract.

(4) The University to pay the cost of such portion of the sewer as is not essential for the purposes of Downing College; the right of use of the sewer to be reserved to the College.

(5) The University to pay a reasonable compensation to the contractor in consequence of the construction of the road not being proceeded with.

(6) Both parties to covenant that if any road is made by either of them within 5 feet of the boundary, the party making such road shall indemnify the other party against any liability in respect thereof.

(7) The University and the College to covenant with each other not to erect any building, any part of which within 20 feet of the boundary shall be above a plane drawn at an angle of 45 degrees to the horizon cutting the vertical plane of the boundary at a height of 10 feet from the ground.

(8) The boundary line from A to B, as shown on the plan, to be at a distance of 10 feet to the south of the central line of the sewer.

(9) The University to be released from the restrictive covenants with reference to the strips of land on the south, the east, and the west sides of the site already purchased.

The following Grace passed the Senate 22 May, 1902:

That the Recommendation contained in the Amended Report dated 15 March 1902, of the Financial Board on proposed Purchase of Downing Site, namely,

That the Vice-Chancellor on behalf of the University be authorised to enter into a contract with the Governing Body of Downing College for the purchase of the site shown on the plan accompanying this Report, comprising about six acres and a quarter, upon the terms stated in the Report be approved.

14. An Act for disannexing the Rectory of Somersham from the Office of Regius Professor of Divinity in the University of Cambridge, and for making better provision for the Cure of Souls within the said Rectory; and for other purposes. 18th August, 1882.

Preamble.

Whereas His late Majesty King James the First, for the increase of the stipend of the regius professor or reader of divinity in the University of Cambridge, did by his Letters Patent bearing date the twenty-sixth day of August, in the third year of his reign, grant to the chancellor, masters, and scholars of the said University of Cambridge and their successors all that his advowson, donation, free disposition, and right of patronage of the Rectory of Somersham (together with Colne and Pidley, and other chapelries, rights, members, and appurtenances) in the county of Huntingdon, and did by the same Letters Patent signify and declare it to be his royal will and pleasure that the said rectory should for ever thereafter be held and enjoyed by the said professor for so long time as he should continue in the said office, and did thereby further signify and declare his royal will and intention to be that an Act of Parliament should be obtained for that purpose :

p. 43).

And whereas by an Act passed in the tenth year of Her late Majesty Queen Anne for, amongst other things, confirming and rendering more effectual the said Letters Patent, it was enacted that the canonry and rectories in the said Act mentioned should be annexed to the offices or places also in the said Act mentioned, namely, among others, that the said Rectory of Somersham, and all members, tithes, lands, tenements, hereditaments, profits, and emoluments whatsoever thereto belonging, or in anywise appertaining, or with the same used or enjoyed, was and should thereby be united and for ever annexed unto the said office or place of regius professor of divinity, and should be held and enjoyed by the person already placed in the said office or place; and by such other person or persons as should from time to time for ever thereafter be placed and put into the said office or place in as full and ample manner to all intents and purposes as if they were duly presented, nominated, admitted, instituted, and inducted thereunto; and the said professor or reader and his successors for the time being, during such time or times only as they should continue in the said office or place, should by virtue of such office or place for ever thereafter have and hold the said rectory without any presentation, admission, institution, or induction, or any other act or thing whatsoever to entitle them thereunto, and should be and were thereby declared to be during their continuance in the said office or place full and perfect incumbents of the said rectory to all intents and purposes whatsoever; and that so often as it should happen that the said office or place should become void by death, resignation, or otherwise, the said rectory should at the same time become void, and the person that should be placed in such office or place so become void should by virtue of such office or place only have and enjoy the said rectory for so long time as he should continue in such office or place and no longer: And it was thereby provided that the said professor should celebrate divine service and perform all other parochial duties relating to the cure of souls within the said rectory which any other rector of the said rectory had theretofore done and performed, and were by law obliged to do and perform, or should allow to learned and able curates to be licensed by the bishop or ordinary of the diocese who should be constantly residing within the said rectory such competent salaries and stipends as the said bishop or ordinary should judge sufficient: And it was thereby also provided that neither that Act nor anything therein contained should excuse or be construed to excuse the said professor from the payment of first fruits and tenths, or from the payment of all dues of what kind soever to the bishop or other ordinary who before the making of that Act had lawful right to claim the same, or from canonical obedience to the bishop or ordinary of the said diocese, but such professor should be obliged to make payment thereof:

And whereas it has been found that by reason of the duties belonging to his office of professor the said regius professor is unable to celebrate divine service and to perform in person the other parochial duties relating to the cure of souls within the said rectory, and it is expedient that the said regius professor should devote himself entirely to the duties of his office of professor, and that divine service should be celebrated and all other parochial duties performed within the said rectory by some person appointed for that purpose with permanence of tenure:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Regius professor cannot perform parochial duties.

First fruits to be payable on collation of vicar.

13. All first fruits and other dues which before the passing of this Act have been payable in respect of the rectory upon the appointment of any person to the office of regius professor shall after the commencement of this Act become due and be payable upon the collation of a vicar to the vicarage, and first fruits or other dues shall no longer become due or be payable in respect of the rectory upon the appointment of any person to the office of regius professor.

FOUNDATIONS WITH MORE THAN ONE OBJECT

1. BENEFACTIONS OF THE LADY MARGARET¹.

1502—1504.

(a) Readership or Professorship in Divinity.

(b) Preachership.

Margaret Beaufort, Countess of Richmond and Derby, mother of King Henry the Seventh, founded a Readership or Professorship in Divinity (Lectura perpetua unius lectoris perpetui sacre theologie); and also a Preachership (Cantaria perpetua unius predicatoris verbi dei)¹. She obtained a license to found the former 10 December 1496, but did not complete the foundation until 1502, when by deed, dated 8 September (A), she declares the Readership to be established, prescribes statutes, and appoints John Fisher, D.D., to be the first Reader. The licence to found the Preachership is dated 7 February, 1504, and her own deed of foundation (B) 30 October, 1504, in which John Fawne, B.D., is nominated the first Preacher, and statutes are prescribed. The stipends of both the Professor and the Preacher are to be paid by the Abbot of S. Peter's, Westminster, out of the revenues of certain lands conveyed to him by the Countess for that purpose. The deeds providing for these stipends are dated respectively 1 July, 1503 (C), and 6 November, 1505 (D). After the dissolution of the monastery both stipends were continued by decrees of the Court of Augmentations, confirmed by letters patent of King Henry the Eighth, dated respectively 26 June and 16 June, 1542 (E, F).

King James the First, by letters patent, dated 6 August, 1605, granted to the University the Rectory of Terrington in Norfolk, for the augmentation of the revenue of the Lady Margaret's Professorship². This grant was not confirmed by Act of Parliament until the 10th year of the reign of Queen Anne (1711—12). It received the royal assent 22 May, 1712³.

In 1625 Mrs Alice Davers, widow of Jeremy Davers, M.A., conveyed to Samuel Ward, D.D., then Lady Margaret's Reader, and to his successors for ever, a "garden, place, or parcel of ground" in S. Edward's parish, on the south side of Bene't Street, for reasons which are set forth at length in the conveyance (G)¹.

In 1856 an offer made by the Rev. William Selwyn, B.D., elected Reader 29 June, 1855, to give £700 a year to augment the salary of the Norrisian Professorship, so long as he and the then Norrisian Professor retained their offices, was accepted by Grace (14 May); and the principle was embodied in a statute which was accepted by Grace, 26 November, 1857. This statute, with a new statute for the Readership, was approved by the Queen in Council, 1 August, 1860².

In 1679 King Charles the Second sent a letter to the University, excusing the preacher from the sermons prescribed by the Foundress to be delivered in places other than the University (H).

A new statute for the Preacher, framed by the Council of the Senate, was accepted by Grace 10 December, 1857, and approved by the Queen in Council, 6 April, 1858³.

H. Letter of King Charles the Second, dispensing the Lady Margaret's Preacher from delivering sermons except in the University, 30 October, 1679.

CHARLES R. Trusty and welbeloved, wee greet you well.

Whereas the Lady Margaret, late Countisse of Richmond and Derby, in her Foundation of a Preacher in that Our University, did oblige him to preach at twelve or thirteen severall Townes in severall Counties, and accordingly did allow him what was in those days a competent Salary and sufficient for the discharging of the expences of his journey: Wee, understanding that the Salary of the said Preacher is now very small and inconsiderable, and therefore being disposed to free him from the said expensive duties, have thought fitt and accordingly do hereby dispenche with all those that shall be her Preacher for the future, for their not preaching at the places aforesaid. Provided that they doe all other exercises in the University unto which by the said Foundation or Custome they are obliged. And Our pleasure also is, that you alter the Oath, which the said Preachers at their entrance were to take according to these Premisses: And that you cause these Our Royall Letters of Dispensation to be registred in the University Register as the Rule to be observed for the future as to the Foundation aforesaid. And for soe doing this shall be your warrant. And soe wee bid you farewell.

Given at Our Court at Whitehall, the 30th day of October, 1679, in the 31st yeare of our Reigne.

By His Majesty's command,

SUNDERLAND¹.

To our Trusty and welbeloved the Vicechancellour of Our University of Cambridge to be communicated

2. BENEFACTION OF THOMAS PLUME,

- a. Observatory.
- b. Professorship.
- c. Provision of instruments.

The Reverend Thomas Plume, of Christ's College, A.B. 1649, B.D. (by royal mandate) 1661, D.D. 1673, Vicar of Greenwich and Archdeacon of Rochester, by Will (A) dated ¹ From a copy in the Registry of the University, "Tabor's Book," p. 681.

2 September, 1704, bequeathed about £1900 for the following objects: (1) to build an Observatory; (2) to maintain a Professor of Astronomy and Experimental Philosophy, for whose use instruments were to be bought, and a house in or near the Observatory bought or built. Orders for his lectures are next given; and lastly, the care of composing statutes, if the testator does not do so himself, is entrusted to Dr Francis Thompson, Dr Covell, Master of Christ's College, the Lucasian Professor for the time being, Dr Bentley, Master of Trinity College (with the advice of Sir Isaac Newton), Sir John Ellis, Master of Gonville and Caius College, and Mr Flamsteed, the Astronomer Royal.

Plume died 20 November, 1704, and his Will was proved 3 March, 1704-5. Before the end of the year 1705 the trustees were able to assure James Plume (executor to Dr Plume) that a suitable estate had been found at Balsham in Cambridgeshire, in consequence of which representation he supplied them with funds to pay for it¹.

The trustees next turned their attention to the Observatory, and in February 1705-6 the Master and Seniors of Trinity College granted the rooms and leads over their Great Gate as a dwelling and Observatory for the Professor (B)². It had evidently been already decided that the office was to be conferred on Roger Cotes, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College; for in the above document he is described as "nominated to the Professorship," and in the instrument of his election, dated 16 October, 1707, the trustees speak of themselves as "impowered by Her Majesty's Letters Patent³." It may therefore be assumed that they waited for this formal recognition of their powers before proceeding to the first election.

The statutes, drawn up as the Will directs, regulate the mode of electing the Professor, his duties, observations, and teaching. Among other things he is to bestow £5 yearly, with board and lodging, on a scholar, who is to be a proficient in Astronomy and assist him in his work. He is also to keep the Observatory and dwelling-house in repair at his own charges, and to spend £5 yearly on instruments. When the trustees had finished their work, they petitioned Queen Anne for an expression of her approval. She accordingly issued letters patent (C), dated 11 June, 1707, in which the statutes, and other things, done by the trustees, are rehearsed and ratified.

In 1710 (1 July) a Grace passed the Senate that Dr Plume's name, as founder of a Professorship of Astronomy, should be included in the list of benefactors; and a similar Grace, but more detailed, passed in 1718 (9 June)¹.

In 1768 the salary of the Professor was augmented by a benefaction under the Will of Robert Smith, D.D., Master of Trinity College, who had been Plumian Professor 1716-1760².

In 1832 (2 November) the purchase of two closes of land at Balsham, adjacent to the Plumian estate, for £420, was authorised by the University³.

The extent of the estate is given in the Schedule printed below (D)⁴.

In 1869 the University Property Syndicate, in a Report dated 1 May, recommended "that an application be made to the Court of Chancery to convey the legal estate of the Plumian property at Balsham to the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University, to be held in trust for the Plumian Professor." This recommendation having been confirmed by Grace (13 May), an order of the Court, dated 3 July, granted the prayer of the petitioners⁵.

A new Statute for the Professorship was framed by the Council of the Senate 21 October, 1857, and re-issued

⁴ From the deed executed by Rev. Ja. Challis, 1873: see below.

16 November, 1857. It was approved by the Senate 26 November, and having been adopted with some changes by the Commissioners, was approved by the Queen in Council 7 March, 1860¹.

Mr William Worts of Catharine Hall, A.B. 1698, A.M. 1702, who died in 1709¹, by Will dated 21 June, 1709 (see below), bequeathed his estate to five trustees for the following purposes: (1) to pay £30 yearly to the Charity Schools in Cambridge; (2) to build galleries in Great S. Mary's Church for use of Bachelors and Undergraduates; (3) to make a causey from Emmanuel College to the Hills; (4) to pay £100 a year to each of two Bachelors who are to travel in foreign countries and send home reports of what they observe; (5) the residue to be paid to the University Library.

A new statute for the Travelling Bachelors was approved by the Queen in Council 16 April, 1861²; and by Statute B, approved 29 June, 1882³, it was provided that the management and administration of the property of the endowment should be vested in the University. In 1884 (6 Nov.) the following Grace passed the Senate:

That on the recommendation of the Worts' Trustees and the Financial Board, the necessary steps be taken for obtaining the transfer to the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of the legal estate in the property belonging to the Worts' Trust, now vested in the Trustees.

In 1887 however (14 March) the Vice-Chancellor informed the Senate:

that in pursuance of Grace 1 of November 6, 1884, application was made on the 26th ultimo to the Chancery Division of the High Court

Will of William Worts, dated 21 June, 1709.

IN the Name of God, Amen. I William Worts, of Cambridge, in the County of Cambridge, Esqr., being of a perfect, sound, and disposing Mind and Memory, do make this my last Will and Testament in manner and form following :

* * * * *

Will to be proved in Vice-Chancellor's court.

Item, I will and appoint that my Executrix prove this my last Will and Testament in the Vice-Chancellor's Court of the University of Cambridge within a month after my decease, and that she there and then deliver in upon oath a true and perfect particular and valuation of all the Lands, Moneys, Bonds, Mortgages, and Debts owing to me from private persons, and from the Exchequer....

And I also will and appoint that my said Aunt Anne Daye shall every year, during her life, by equal quarterly payments, pay the sum of £30, without any deduction of Taxes by Parliament or otherwise, to the use of the poor children, which now are or shall hereafter be taught in the several schools in Cambridge aforesaid, commonly called The Charity Schools, lately set up chiefly by the care of the pious and learned Mr. Whiston, the first payment to be made on such of the Quarter-days abovementioned, as shall next happen after my death : the said payment, and all the subsequent payments to be made to the person, who, for the time being, collects the subscriptions to the said Schools, and the said £30 a-year to be applied in the same manner as the money collected from the said subscriptions is and shall be applied.

Appointment of trustees to hold the testator's real estate.

And from and after the decease of the said Anne Daye,...I give, devise, and bequeath all my Manors, Messuages, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments in Landbeche aforesaid, and also my two houses in King's College Lane, to Dr. Roderick, Provost of King's College ; Dr. Bentley, Master of Trinity College ; Dr. James, Master of Queens' College ; Dr. Covell, Master of Christ's College ; and Sir John Ellis, Master of Gonville and Caius College in Cambridge ; and their Heirs and Assigns for ever ; nevertheless upon such special trust and confidence in them reposed, as shall be hereinafter declared concerning the same.

Item, I give and bequeath unto the said four Doctors and Sir John Ellis the sum of £3,000, to be paid them by my Executrix, within six months after my death, in ready-money, or by assignment to them of any of my Mortgages, Tallies, or Orders or in any other manner as to them shall seem good and effectual payment; upon such special trust and confidence nevertheless reposed in them as shall be hereinafter declared concerning the same: That is to say, as for and concerning the said £3,000, upon this special trust and confidence, That the said four Doctors and Sir John Ellis, or the survivors of them, or the Executors or Administrators of the survivor of them, out of the Interest Money and Improvement made thereof, shall, in the first place, pay or cause to be paid unto my said Aunt Anne Daye every year during her natural life the sum of £150 at two payments in the year, that is to say, on the Feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, and on the Feast of St. Michael the Archangel, by equal portions, the first payment thereof to be made on such of the said Feasts as shall next happen after I have been dead a full year: and from and after the decease of my said Aunt Daye, then, as well concerning my real Estate in Landbeche and King's College Lane, and also my personal Estate, which I have devised to the four Doctors and Sir John Ellis, and the Trusts thereof, I do hereby declare and appoint, That they, or the survivors of them, or the Executors or Administrators of the survivor of them, so long as the said Charity Schools shall endure and be kept up in any reputation, shall, in the first place, constantly pay the said sum of £30 a year to their use, in such manner as my said Aunt Anne Daye is herein before appointed to pay the same; and also all the Annuities herein before by me given that shall remain due and payable after the death of my said Aunt Anne Daye, except those that I have obliged my said Aunt to give bond for.

And also £3000 personalty.

The annuity to the Charity Schools to be

In the next place I appoint and desire that the annual income both of my said Lands and Money and the Improvement thereof be managed to the best advantage till the sum of £1,500 be raised therefrom, with which I desire that with all convenient speed after the same is so raised Galleries be built in Great St. Mary's Church in Cambridge, for the use of the Bachelors of Arts and Under-graduates in the University, that they may the more decently and conveniently hear the Sermon¹.

And when it is finished, I desire that £40 a-year be laid aside for the maintenance and repairs of that and the said Galleries in St. Mary's Church, and expended from time to time as there shall be occasion, in such proportions to each as the Trustees or major part of them shall think fit;

And as soon as the said Galleries are finished, I further appoint and desire that there be allowed annual Pensions of £100 a-year each to two young Bachelors of Arts, who shall be sent into foreign countries soon after they have taken that Degree, and shall continue there for the space of three years, but be obliged to take different roads, as they shall be appointed by the said Trustees, or the major part of them. They shall each of them likewise be obliged to write once in a month a letter in Latin to the Vice-Chancellor of the said University, who shall communicate them to the Regent-House, and leave them fairly written to be lodged in the Public Library among the MSS. there. In those letters they shall give an account to the University of the religion, learning, laws, politics, customs, manners, and rarities, natural and artificial, which they shall find worth observing in the countries through which they pass. They shall be chosen out of two different Colleges: they shall begin with King's and Trinity, each of which shall present two young Gentlemen to the Congregation, which shall choose one out of each of the two Colleges. The rest of the Colleges shall take it by turns to present in the same manner in the order as they do for the choice of Proctors, as often as there shall be occasion to supply the place of them, or either of them, by reason of death or return into their own country: And my Will is, that these Pensions shall be continued but for the space of three years. The Master in every College shall present, and at the presentation of them shall be obliged to take the following Oath, which shall be read to him by the Senior Proctor in the Regent-House, before the University, at a Congregation:

Dabis fidem Almae Matri Academiae, quod tu probe noveris religionem, mores, et doctrinam juvenum, quos modo praesentasti, et eos sane dignos existimas, quos foras emittat Alma Mater; Sic te Deus adjuvet.

The residue and overplus of what I have given to the said four Doctors and Sir John Ellis, after these things are performed and all reasonable expenses have been allowed for the management of all matters relating to this my Will, I desire may be applied to the use of the University Library.

When two

And my further Will and desire is, that when any two or more of the Trustees shall be dead, then the surviving Trustees shall assign and convey all the said Lands and Moneys remaining in them by virtue of this my Will to some person or persons, and their heirs, to the use of them the surviving Trustees and of some other fit persons such as they shall choose or name to be Trustees with them to make up the number of five, and of their heirs for ever, upon trust for the further performance of this my last Will and Testament. And then my Will is, that the old and new Trustees, and the survivors of them, shall to all intents and purposes have the same power and authority and be in the place of my said Trustees, Dr. Roderick, Dr. Bentley, Dr. James, Dr. Covell, and Sir John Ellis, as if they were all living: and that from time to time, as often as there shall be occasion, the surviving Trustees, two or more of their number being dead, shall take the like course as aforesaid to make up the said number with other fit persons, who shall successively for ever have the same power and authority to perform this my Will.

dead the survivors shall appoint successors.

Lastly, I give all the Money in the purses for the poor to make up what is lost from St. Mary's Parish in my Grandfather Daye's gift.

Money for the poor.

All the rest and residue of my Goods, Chattels, and personal Estate whatsoever herein before not disposed of, my debts, legacies, and funeral charges being first paid, I give and bequeath to my said Aunt Anne Daye, to her own proper use; and I make her the full and sole Executrix of this my last Will and Testament; hereby revoking all former Wills and Testaments by me at any time heretofore made, publishing and declaring this to be my last Will and Testament.

Residue given to executrix for her own proper use.

In witness whereof, I have to this my Will, consisting of five sheets of paper, set my hand to every sheet, and my hand and seal to the last sheet thereof, the one and twentieth day of June, in the eighth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Anne, by the Grace of God of Great Britain, France, and Ireland Queen, Defender of the Faith, &c., and in the year of our Lord God 1709.

4. BENEFACION OF ROBERT SMITH, 1768.

- a. Salary of Plumian Professor.
- b. Mathematical Prizes.

Robert Smith was admitted pensioner at Trinity College 28 May, 1708. He graduated B.A. 1711, M.A. 1715, LL.D. 1723, and D.D. (per literas regias) 1739. He was elected ¹ From an office copy of the Will in the Registry of the University (Vol. xlii. 1. 1).

Fellow 1714, and in 1716 (16 July) Plumian Professor in succession to Cotes. He succeeded Bentley as Master 20 July, 1742. He died 2 February, 1768.

By Will dated 6 May, 1766, proved 19 April, 1768 (see below) he left £3500 to the University, the interest of which is to augment the salary of the Plumian Professor, and to found two Prizes for the best mathematicians among the "Junior Bachelors of Arts," that is, those who have become Bachelors designate in Arts by the Mathematical Tripos.

By deed dated 2 November, 1867, the funds bequeathed by Dr Smith were conveyed to the University by the Rev. James Challis, Plumian Professor, the sole surviving Trustee¹; an arrangement which the Senate had approved by Grace 31 October, 1867, in virtue of which the deed was directed to be sealed.

In 1878 (29 March) a Syndicate appointed "to consider the Higher Mathematical Studies and Examinations of the University" recommended, among other things, that the Prizes founded by Dr Smith, instead of being awarded as now by the result of a special Examination, be given for the best two Essays on a subject or subjects in Pure Mathematics or Mathematical Physics, the candidates being Bachelors of Arts of not more than one year's standing, and that with this view, steps be taken to obtain the necessary alterations in the terms of the Trust².

This change was accepted by the Senate (the numbers being 40 Placet, 34 Non-placet); but no change was made till the Statutes of 1882 gave to the University the requisite power³. In 1883 the Special Board of Mathematics proposed the scheme now in force⁴.

Extract from the Will of Robert Smith, dated 6 May, 1766.

I give to the University of Cambridge, Three thousand, five hundred pounds stock being part of my Capital stock in the Old South Sea annuities and I empower either of my executors to transfer it as soon as conveniently practicable to the Chancellor or Vice Chancellor, the Master of Trinity College, The Lucasian, the Plumian, and the Lowndean Professors all of that University for the time being and to their successors in the same offices and I constitute and appoint them perpetual Trustees to receive and annually to distribute the interest of the said Stock in the following manner.

£3500 stock given to University.

Trustees.

First, I desire them to accept of a handsome dinner once a year as a small acknowledgment for their trouble in discharging this Trust the expence of which and all other necessary expences being deducted from the annual interest of the stock.

Annual dinner.

I give annually half the remainder upon a condition hereafter named to the Plumian Professor as an addition to the small revenue of that professorship, which I have had the honour to hold for many years.

Salary of Plumian Professor.

And the other half of that remainder I give in equal portions as premiums to two Junior Batchelors of Arts of the said University, which, after all the candidates of that year for those premiums have been examined by the Trustees, shall appear to them the best proficient in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy, and ceteris paribus I give the preference to the candidates of Trinity College. Every year while the Questionists are sitting for a Batchelors degree, I desire a printed advertisement may be fixed at the gate of every College specifying the value of the premiums and the time and place of examination of the candidates. And, as soon as the examination is ended I would have the premiums paid to the two best proficient in Mathematics and Natural Philosophy they giving their receipts in a Book of Accounts of the receipts and payments of the interest of the said Stock; after which, but not sooner, the Plumian Professor shall be intituled to the other half of that years interest.

Annual Prizes to two B.A.s.

If at any time the trustees shall think it advantageous to this Benefaction to sell out the said stock and with the price of it to purchase a freehold Estate or Estates in Land I empower them to do so, and to apply the rents of it annually to the purposes above mentioned¹.

Trustees may invest in land.

5. BENEFACTION OF SIR WILLIAM BROWNE, 1774.

- a. A Classical Scholarship.
- b. Medals for Greek and Latin Composition.

William Browne was born in the county of Durham 3 January, 1692¹. His father was a Physician. He matriculated at Peterhouse as a pensioner 5 July, 1707, proceeded B.A. 1710—11, M.A. 1714, M.D. 1721. In 1726 he became a Fellow of the College of Physicians, and in 1765 and 1766 was President. He was knighted in 1748. He died 10 March, 1774¹.

By his Will (A) dated 11 February, 1772, he charged his estates with a perpetual rent charge of £21 a year to found a classical scholarship tenable for seven years, the candidates to present themselves for examination within one year from their matriculation, and, if successful, to remove to Peterhouse; with the cost of two gold medals, each of five guineas in value, for the best Greek Ode and the best Latin Ode written by undergraduates; and, by a codicil, with the cost of a third medal of the same value to be given in each year to the undergraduate who writes the best Greek and the best Latin Epigram.

The Scholarship.

The founder having left no precise directions for the choice of the scholar, the first nomination was granted by Grace (8 May, 1775) to his grandson, Sir Martin Folke (B). In 1782, a second vacancy being imminent, a Syndicate was appointed (10 April, 1782) to frame regulations for the choice of a scholar (C). The regulations which they drew up are dated 18 April, 1782 (D).

A statute for the scholarship was framed by the Council of the Senate 23 November, 1857, accepted by the Senate 3 December, 1857, by the Commissioners 30 December, 1857, and approved by the Queen in Council 6 April, 1858¹. This statute abolishes the admission and residence at Peterhouse, with some other regulations imposed by the Will, and empowers the University to frame regulations from time to time.

The Medals.

These Medals were adjudged first in July 1775. The successful exercises, as directed by the Will, were written out, usually by the authors themselves, in a folio volume. Three of these, containing the successful exercises from 1775 to 1829, are preserved in the Registry.

A statute was framed by the Council of the Senate 4 December, 1857, accepted by the Senate 10 December, by the Commissioners 30 December, and approved by the Queen in Council 6 April, 1858².

As this statute authorized a division of the prize into two Medals of half the original value, should the best Greek and the best Latin Epigram be not written by the same person, the Earl of Powis³, soon after he became High Steward, conveyed to the University £200, in order that each medal might be of the uniform value of five guineas (£). This gift was accepted by Grace, 1 November, and thanks given to the donor 15 November, 1866.

² Ibid. p. 104. The Council had issued a draft statute 23 November 1857, in which it was proposed that "the Medal shall be given alternately, in one year for the best Greek epigram and in the next year for the best Latin epigram." This clause excited considerable opposition when the Statute was discussed in the Arts School, 30 November, especially from Professor Selwyn, who made a brilliant speech in favour of the old arrangement. This was subsequently printed in an 8vo. pamphlet called The Battle of the Epigrams. The Council immediately proposed a new statute.

A. Will of Sir William Browne, Knight, M.D., dated 11 February, 1772; and a Codicil thereto, dated 21 July, 1773. The Will and Codicil were proved 12 April, 1774¹.

The Will. The last Will of Sir William Browne, Knight, M.D., of Queen Square, in the Parish of St. George the Martyr, Middlesex.

Preamble. My Soul, divinae particulum aerae, under the deepest Sense of Duty and Gratitude for a plentiful Possession of the Blessings and merciful Preservation from the Accidents of this Life, I most devoutly resign into the Hand of Our Almighty and Almerciful Creator, most humbly hoping for a Future Life of Felicity and Immortality through the Merits and Mediation of Jesus Christ, his beloved Son, Our Gracious Saviour, under whose Banner Nil desperandum est Christo Duce et auspice Christo. EN ΤΟΥΤΩ ΝΙΚΗ. Whose Revelation however incomprehensible, in its plan and Execution, is demonstrable, in its End and Intention, to make Men Virtuous and Happy: which must therefore necessarily build Christian Faith upon its onely Foundation Reason. Detestable are all Attempts to set These Two at Variance: on the One Side, by certain Minute Philosophers absurdly assuming the Name of Free-thinkers, and yet denying the Existence of Liberty itself, who set up Reason in Opposition to Faith: on the Other Side, by certain Enthusiastic Divines, as absurdly claiming the Character of Just-reasoners, and yet denying the Jurisdiction of Reason itself, who set up Faith in Opposition to Reason. Both parties, how different soever in Principle and Design, concurring in Consequence and Effect, to sap the Foundation of Christianity; to Cancel our Divine Magna Charta; and to rob us of our Sheet-Anchor of Security, with regard to the Evils of this Life, and of Hope, with regard to the Injoyments of a Life Aeternal.

His body to be buried privately. My Body, Mors sola fatetur quantula sint hominum corpuscula, on Signs of Putrefaction, I direct to be deposited in the Bosom of my Mother Earth, close by that of Dame Mary, my Wife for Forty Five years, in the most private manner, without Pall-Bearers, Escutcheons, or Equestrian Ornaments, or any Attendants, except my Men-Servants: that my Funeral may neither be an Object of Entertainment to Spectators and Strangers, by attracting their observation, nor of Concern to Friends and Relations, by requesting their Attendance. On my Coffin, when in the Grave, I desire may be deposited in its Leather Case or Coffin my Pocket-Elzivir-Horace comes viae vitaeque dulcis et utilis, worn out with, and by me. Having erected my own and Lady's Monuments in Hillington Chancel, I appoint a Marble Monument to be erected for me, in Westminster Abbey, (where I designed to have been interred if I had died first,) according to my Draught, Inscription, and Directions left for this purpose. I desire it may be placed as near His pocket Horace to be buried with him.

A monument to be set up to him in Westminster Abbey near that of Dr Mead.

that of my Master Doctor Mead medicorum facile principis, as any vacant Arch may admit, otherwise in the Poets Corner over against that of Mr Prior. Monuments furnishing a memento vivere, as well as memento mori, deserve to be regarded, not as insignificant and lying Memorials of the Dead, but as beneficent and truth-telling Lectures to the Living: the most mendacious of them all being a Panegyric on Virtue, and Satire on Vice, and consequently perpetuating their proper Distinction. Virtutem et vivos spernit qui non habet urnam.

My Estate, with which God hath been pleased most bountifully to bless me, far beyond my Wants and Expectations, even up to a Rental of Eleven Hundred pounds a year, ET AVITUM APTO CUM LARE FUNDUM ET PROPRIO MARTE PARTUM, I dispose of in manner following.

[The estate is bequeathed to his "daughter Mary wife of William Folkes Esq.": her husband, and her son; and to their descendants. Among the charges to be paid out of the estate is the following:]

A perpetual Rent-charge of Twenty Guineas a year, which I devise to be paid yearly from my Decease, clear of Taxes and Disbursements, to the Chancellour, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, and their Successors, In Trust for Founding a Classic Scholarship: by electing the Best Classic Scholar, who shall offer himself for Examination within a Year from his Matriculation, public Notice being given by the Vice-Chancellor a Month before such Election. I will that my Scholar, so to be elected, shall enjoy the Rent-charge, with Arrears which may happen by Vacancy, for Seven Years on these Conditions; That he shall admit himself at Peterhouse, and reside there every intire term during his Under-Graduate-ship: That he shall behave well, studiously, and religiously, and give up to the Fellows Table every Sunday a Copy of Greek or Latin Verses: That he shall go to Lectures with the Mathematic Professor for Three years, being sensible from depending on my own sole strength how much Labor improbus may be saved by such Assistance; That he shall regularly and reputably perform all his College and University Exercises, an Act, first, second, and third Opponencies, in the Sophs Schools, and take the Degrees of Batchelor and Master of Arts.

* * * *

And for want of such Issue¹, QUOD AVERTAT DEUS OPTIMUS MAXIMUS, it is my most melancholy Will to devise all my said Manors, Messuages, [etc.] to the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, and their Successors In Trust, for Founding two Physic Fellowships: Homines ad Deos nulla re propius accedunt quam salutem hominibus dando. The Candidates to be Batchelours of Arts between four and seven years standing, and strictly examined in Physic, and Disposal of his estate.

A classical scholarship at Peterhouse.

In default of issue his whole estate is to be left to the Chancellor [etc.] of the University of Cambridge in trust, to found two Physic Fellowships.

general Learning, by All the Electors, whom I appoint to be not Ministers of State, but the Vice Chancellor, Master of Peter-house, Regius Professor of Physic, Doctors of Physic resident in the University, the Praesident and three Senior Elects of the College of Physicians London, all for the time being: by the Majority of whose suffrages in Person, or in Writing, on a Day to be named, with public notice one Month before, by the Vice Chancellor, all Elections shall be made.

Conditions of tenure.

The Vice Chancellor to decide, in case of equal Suffrages. I trust to the Conscience of each Elector, and adjure him most solemnly, that his Rule be, Detur digniori. My Fellows residing in Peterhouse for at least Three Months together in each of the first Five years shall enjoy their Fellowships Ten Years: and shall attend courses of Anatomy, Botany, Chemistry, and Materia Medica, and the Practice of Physic in St Thomas's, or St Bartholomew's Hospital at London for Two years: and shall regularly take the Degree of Doctor, by keeping two Acts and Opponencies, on forfeiture of their respective Fellowship for non-performance of any one of these Directions. They shall not go out of the Kingdom: as I am certain that, by the infinitely superior Public Libraries, Regulations, Studies, and Disputations of our Two Universities, over all others, and the much more rational and simple Practice of Physic in England, than elsewhere, (and particularly better suited to an English Constitution, as each Nation has peculiar Diseases from its Climate and Customs,) far more excellent Scholars and Physicians must always be formed there, than any where else upon the Globe. Therefore I desire, that Mine may be called, κάτ' ἔξοχην, Non-travelling Physic Fellows.

His Fellows may not leave England.

To be called Non-travelling Physic Fellows.

The Rents and Profits of my Estates shall be aequally divided between my Fellows, by half yearly Payments on the first Tuesdays of January and July in each year, so far as to Three hundred pounds a year to each.

Each is to receive £300 a year.

The residue of my fortune to be spent in gold medals worth £5. 5s. each, to be given to Bachelors of Arts and Undergraduates for performances in verse or prose in Greek, Latin and English.

All Overplus beyond that shall be distributed by the Vice-Chancellor, at every Commencement, in Gold Medals of Five Guineas value (to be struck by a like Die to that hereinafter mentioned) to such Batchelors of Arts, and Undergraduates, who shall deliver to Him the best Performances in Verse and Prose, and in Greek, Latin, or English, on Subjects to be published by Him in January before. All which Performances shall be fairly written, dated, and subscribed by the Authors in a Book, to be laid upon the Register's Table, at every Commencement, for public Inspection. The Annual Account of the Rents and Profits of my devised Estates, fairly entred in a Book, shall also be laid on the Register's Table, for the same purpose.

Medals to be given for a Greek Ode and a Latin Ode.

I direct my Executors to procure a Die to be engraved, proper to strike Medals of Gold of Five Guineas Value. The Obverse to be an imitation of my Marble Medallion Bust. The Motto, ESSE ET VIDERI.

E. AUGMENTATION OF THE MEDALS BY THE EARL OF POWIS.

The Vice-Chancellor desires to inform the Senate that the Right Honourable the Earl of Powis, High Steward of the University, has signified his wish to increase the value of the Browne Medals now given as annual Prizes for the best Greek and Latin Epigrams.

Sir William Browne, by his Will, provided that one Gold Medal of five guineas value should be given annually for the best Greek and Latin Epigrams, considered together.

By the Statute of 1858 it was directed that "if in any year the best Greek Epigram and the best Latin Epigram shall not be produced by the same Candidate, two Medals shall be given in that year, each of the value of two guineas and a half, one to the Candidate who produces the best Greek Epigram, and the other to the Candidate who produces the best Latin Epigram."

The High Steward proposes to increase the value of each of these Medals to five guineas; and offers to convey to the University so much Stock in the Public Funds as will produce a sufficient annual income for that purpose.

His Lordship does not desire to have the designation of the Medals altered, nor in any other respect to interfere with them.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE LODGE,

6. BENEFACTION OF JOHN NORRIS,
1770.

- a. Professorship of Divinity.
- b. English Essay.
- c. Sermon.
- d. Gift of Books.

John Norris, of Gonville and Caius College, A.B. 1761, by Will dated 26 June 1770 (A) bequeathed to the University an annuity of £120 for the purposes fully set forth and explained in a very curious document (B) drawn up in his own handwriting, and referred to in the Will. A copy of this book was directed by the Senate to be sealed, 9 February, 1780, a decision which implies acceptance of the bequest.

Mr Norris died 5 January, 1777, and in the following year litigation ensued between his heirs and the University¹; but a decree of the Court of Chancery 3 November, 1781, ordered that the prescribed annuity should be paid to the Professor². The first Professor was elected 1 May, 1780.

The Rev. Benedict Chapman, D.D., Master of Gonville and Caius College, by Will dated 8 October, 1846, bequeathed £500 to augment the Professor's salary; and, by a codicil dated 16 August, 1852, a second £500 to the same trust (C).

In 1850-51 Geo. Elwes Corrie, B.D., Master of Jesus College and Norrisian Professor, being also Vice-Chancellor, was unable to lecture. His salary therefore reverted to Lord Wodehouse, as owner of the estate. Lord Wodehouse, however, offered the sum to the University in augmentation of Dr Chapman's benefaction; and in 1853 (13 April) a Grace passed the Senate to accept the same and to thank Lord Wodehouse (D)³.

In 1860 a new statute for the Professorship was confirmed by the Queen in Council, together with a statute appropriating part of the revenue of the Lady Margaret's Professorship to the Norrisian endowment⁴. The idea of this increase originated with Wm. Selwyn, B.D., who shortly after his election in 1855 as Lady Margaret's Professor, offered to pay £700 a year to augment the Norrisian Professor's stipend; an offer which was accepted by Grace, 14 May, 1856.

In 1857 the Council of the Senate proposed a new statute for the Prize for an Essay, which was confirmed by the Queen in Council 6 April, 1858⁵; and in 1864 (18 November) new regulations, which were accepted by the Senate 8 December, 1864⁶.

¹ A Syndicate was appointed 10 April, 1778, to consider what ought to be done; and their report in favour of defending the action was accepted by Grace, in May, 1778.

B. A Copy of what is written in the Book covered with Marble Paper all of the Testator's own handwriting.

It was a great pleasure to me to find (in one of the Reviews) the following Extract from Dr Porteus's Sermon in 1767, preached at Cambridge :

"If there be any defect in the Plan of Education adopted in this place, it is perhaps in this—that Revealed Religion has not yet a proper Rank assigned it here amongst the other initiatory Sciences, is not made an indispensable qualification for academical honours and rewards, has not, in short, all that regard paid to it which its own intrinsic worth, and the peculiar circumstances at present attending it, may seem to demand."

These sentiments corresponded with mine, formed many months earlier than the date of my first seeing this Extract. And I hope it will please the Lord Jesus Christ to prosper an Institution designed to promote His pure and holy Religion, and to accept my praise and adoration for the bias on my mind to the formation of such a design, and bestowing on me the pecuniary means of accomplishing it.

It is my fixed purpose to secure by Will an Annuity of One hundred and twenty pounds unto the University of Cambridge, out of my Estate or Farm, called the Abbey Farm or Bromholme Priory, tenanted by Richard Gaze, situated in the Parish of Bacton and adjacent parishes, and let under a lease granted by the late Mr Branthwait or his Executors, at a rent of £190, to secure the said annuity of £120, (but always subject to, and dependent upon, the accomplishment of the conditions hereinafter explained) as a perpetuity. persons unto whom I shall give by Will the said Farm of £190 a year, in trust for the payment of the above Annuity of £120 will be inserted in such Will; and the persons whom I would conjoin with them for the better carrying the plan into execution, and who may be called the Stewards of the Institution, as the others are the Trustees, are

Be it also always understood, and ever kept in view, that the owner of this Estate, whoever he or she may be, shall have perfect liberty to lodge an Appeal in some of our Law Courts, setting forth or complaining that the terms or conditions made necessary by the Institutor of this Annuity or Grant, to the obtaining of the whole or parcels of the said Annuity or Grant, are not properly observed and fulfilled, and praying that the sum or sums, the conditions of which are or have been thus infracted, may no longer issue from such Estate: And my express meaning is—that the truth of such Appeal shall be judicially tried; and that in case of a verdict, judgment, or decree, in favour of the Appellant, the said Annuity, or such parcels thereof, the conditions of which are or have been thus infracted or neglected, and so adjudged, shall thenceforward cease for ever. And that my words may be interpreted in the sense in which I employ them, I shall be a little more explicit here, and shall divide the annuity or grant into four parts: The first comprehends the Professor's salary, £105: The second, the Academical honour or reward of £12: The third has only the small sum of 2 Guineas, for an Annual Sermon: And the last a still smaller, 18s. for Books:

Reservation of rights of the owner of the estate.

Now my express meaning is, if the conditions respecting the first be judicially determined to have been violated, that such first shall not only henceforward for ever cease, but that the salary for the three remainder shall cease for ever with it: that is, the whole Annuity become void, and be as if it had never taken place: but if the conditions of one or all of the three last be only adjudged to have been not duly performed, that then the first shall continue in unabridged force, and that one, or more than one, so violated, shall only cease and become for ever void. And the better to support this Institution (for as on the one hand, I would cautiously fence this Institution against frauds, so on the other I would not with less zeal uphold what it is so much my wish to establish, I would not with less wariness secure the Institution against the sordidness or troublesomeness of an Appellant,) I ordain and appoint that no prosecution shall be commenced by the owner of this Estate, without a previous notice of four calendar months, and without such notice expressing fully the parts of the Institution that seem to be violated: And my express meaning is, that if two of the three former mentioned Stewards shall within the four months return for answer under their hand, that such neglects or mistakes shall forthwith be rectified, and they be accordingly rectified, that then such Appeal shall not be made, but all litigation terminate. But for a second offence (if due notice of an intentional Appeal has been once given,) no notice from the same owner shall be necessary. I should suppose it to be obvious, but lest it should not be, I desire to observe—that where a penalty is annexed to a transgression or neglect, the legal conviction of such transgression or neglect shall not cancel the Institution in any part of it, but only create an obnoxiousness to the penalty.

[a. The Professorship.]

The first and principal part of the Institution is the Establishment of a Professorship of Revealed Religion, the Professor to be styled Revelation Professor; or, as that phrase seems to me to be very objectible, the Norrisian Professor¹; who shall be subject to each and all of the subsequent conditions and covenants. The Candidate or Candidates shall notice to the three former mentioned Stewards, under hand within the first 14 days of November, the design of supplying this Professorship; and the said three Gentlemen or Stewards shall select two out of the whole number of Candidates, and shall signify their names, on or before the first day of February then next ensuing, to the respective Masters, Heads, or Presidents of all the respective Colleges and Halls in this University of Cambridge; and the day of election, or final appointment of one person to the trust, shall be within the first 14 days of the succeeding May: and the Election or appointment shall be wholly vested in the suffrages personally given, of all the aforesaid Masters, Heads or Presidents; and the majority of votes shall decide the Election; not less than ten votes shall constitute this mode of Election. And upon the supposition that there is no agreement as to the selection of two Candidates, but warm disputation, such selection shall be referred to a majority of all the Heads, Masters or Presidents, due regard to be ever paid to the virtuous conversation and abilities of each Candidate; as to the latter, an examination, if required, to be passed by each Candidate before the Stewards, or their Deputy, both antecedently to the nomination, and to the Election. To bestow on the Master of Trinity an additional influence, he shall, if he pleases, defer his vote to the last, and if the numbers are even with his vote, his vote shall carry the Election, as if he had two votes, and could use them both in favour of one person. If required by two of the three Stewards, any Candidate shall take and subscribe to the Oath hereafter drawn up, on or before the twentieth of January: but I make it an indispensable condition, and no matter of option, that the Candidate or Candidates shall (each) take and subscribe to the oath afore mentioned in the presence of at least ten of the Heads, Masters, or Presidents in the morning of the Election: the words and all the words of such Oath shall be spoken articulately and audibly, then signed and then attested by each of the aforesaid ten Heads, Masters or Presidents. If such Oath be not thus formally taken, subscribed, attested, the Election shall not take place, at least shall be void, shall not entitle the person elected to a farthing of the salary.

Candidates must take the prescribed oath.

The Professor shall give or read, and not out of Term time, nor oftener than thrice in one week, fifty Lectures, on fixed days, and at fixed hours, so that the omission of a Lecture in one part of the day shall not be atoned for by a Lecture in another part of the same day, nor the omission of a Lecture on one day of the week be atoned for by a Lecture on some other day of the same week; but these omissions shall be atoned for at the end of the whole Course of Lectures, and the Lectures be then also subject to the above regulation of being delivered within Term time, and of not exceeding three in a week. I make it essential, that to constitute a Lecture there shall be at least six pupils or auditors, and that there be not a less time than one full hour employed in the discharge of each Lecture; for the omission of every Lecture under 50 and above 45, there shall be a deduction of one pound from the said salary of £105; for the omission of every Lecture above 40 and under 45, there shall be a deduction of two pounds; if the Lectures be under 40 and above 35, the salary shall be diminished one half (i.e. it shall be only £52. 10s. instead of £105) in every year which has this deficiency: if the Lectures amount not to 35, all salary for that year shall cease. The actual illness or real indisposition of the Professor, if it be certified under his hand, or the hand of some of the Medical Faculty attending him, unto two of the three Stewards, shall excuse or annul the deduction of one pound as above named and explained, and the deduction of two pounds as above named and explained, provided always that the Professor appoints a Deputy, and such Deputy be approved by two of the three Stewards, the Master of Trinity to be one of the two so consulted: and the appointment of such Deputy shall do more than make up for the omitted Lectures: under 50 and above 40, it shall atone for the omission of all above 35; so that the salary shall not be diminished unto £52. 10s. as before named and explained; thus the Deputy may read 15 Lectures, provided always that sickness is the Professor's true reason for appointing such Deputy: the Deputy to be subject to the same restrictions as the Professor, with regard to the time of reading his Lectures, and everything else relating to them. If the Professor voluntarily relinquishes his office in any part of the first year after election or re-election, he shall forfeit (although he may have gone through the whole Course of Lectures) the whole year's salary; if in the second year, his salary shall from £105 be reduced to eighty-four pounds; if in the third year, his salary shall be reduced from £105 unto ninety-four pounds and ten shillings: equally subject too in both these cases to all the terms and covenants relating to this Trust or Institution.

Who may be Professor.

The Professor may have been educated at either of our English Universities; may be Lay or Clerical, but he shall not be elected into the office under his 30th year, nor re-elected after his 60th. He shall be obnoxious to dispossession at any time by a majority of the Heads, Masters, or Presidents of the respective Colleges and Halls in this University of Cambridge: but then the objections or objection to him shall be testified under the hand of each of such majority. The Master of Trinity shall have the same privilege here, as given him at the Election. Of the pupils or auditors attending these Lectures, or any of them, no gratuity whatever shall be accepted by the Professor, or to his advantage in any respect. The receiving of any money, gratuity, or compliment, shall if proved upon oath before the Trustees, or two of the three Stewards, within four Kalendar months after the trespass, invalidate entirely the Professor's claim for that year for a whole year to any salary whatever, (unless in instances of ampler fortune than usual, and these instances or exceptions have been submitted to all the three Stewards, and have received the sanction of all three). The persons first admitted, received and numbered as pupils, shall be those intended for Orders: I say only first admitted, for I would not wish any exclusion. A second proof of corruption in office shall not only cancel, as the first, all claim to one year's salary, but shall vacate the Professorship, a new Election shall ensue, and the late Professor be ever afterwards ineligible. No pupil or auditor shall be admitted into the Lecture Room unless he be provided with the Old and New Testament, and with Pearson on the Creed; if any one, not thus provided, be admitted, the Professor shall forfeit to the owner of the heretofore mentioned estate, out of his salary, 21 shillings for every such person so received.

No fee from pupils.

Penalties for taking money.

Qualifications of pupils.

Lectures on the Creed.

I make it essential to this Institution, that the Professor reads, or causes to be read during the Course of Lectures, the following articles in the said Exposition of the Creed: viz. The whole article relating to our Blessed Saviour, beginning with—"And in Jesus Christ his only Son, our Lord,"—and ending with—"The Quick and the Dead;" the article relating to the Holy Ghost,—“I believe in the Holy Ghost,” and the article—"The Resurrection of the Body, and the Life everlasting." At other times, it is my express meaning that the Professor shall make the Bible, particularly the Prophecies and the Evangelical History, the chief source and subject of his Lectures; and that he points out and enlarges upon the various beauties of the sacred composition, (for infinite beauties there are,) paralleling them with admired passages in profane authors: that he shews the necessity of Revelation, and yet at the same time that it enjoins no practice, lays no restraint that is not entirely consonant with right reason.

No Professor shall be allowed to continue in his office, without a fresh Election, for more than five successive years. The Oath hereinafter inserted shall be as necessary to the validity of a re-election as of the first Election. The Stewards are to have power to reject any Lecture Room which they shall judge incommodious. The time which I appoint for the payment of the salary is the 24th day of every June (supposing the conditions necessary to claim it are fulfilled), that June excepted which shall succeed the May in which the first Election under this Institution shall take place. Before the owner of this Estate shall be compellable to pay the Annuity, a state of the account, that is, how many omissions there have been in the number of Lectures, whether there has been a Deputy, in short, how far the conditions have been discharged, such a state of facts shall be delivered, if required, to the Trustees of this Annuity or the owner of the Estate, his or her Agent, under the hand of the Professor—in these words: I assert that the above account of my proceedings in my Professorship is most truly and fairly stated: but whether demanded or not, the Professor shall, before the 20th of May in every year, send such a state of his proceedings, so worded and subscribed, to each of the three Stewards; to one of whom, and not to the Professor himself, shall the Annuity be paid: and the receipt taken shall run in the names of all the three Stewards, shall be subscribed by all three (when it happens otherwise—from some necessity—the reason of the omission of such name shall be assigned), and shall close with these words: For the use of the Professor under this grant: of all the conditions of which we are to the best of our ability faithful Guardians.

Professor to hold office for 5 years.

Restrictions on payment of salary.

As I profess to believe that the Godhead or the Divine and one only independent Essence, comprehendeth three persons, the Father, and the Son, or "the Word, who was made Flesh, and dwelled amongst us," and the Holy Ghost, or Holy Spirit—so I swear that I will not knowingly and designedly, if I shall be elected into that trust to which this Oath is made preparatory, either inculcate or countenance in my discharge of the said Trust any doctrines contrary to my present sense of the Profession which I have now thus publicly made of my Religious Belief. Amen. So help me God.

Oath to be taken by candidates for the Professorship.

As I profess to believe in one God the Father Almighty, and in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only-begotten Son of God, God of God, Light of Light, very God of very God, and in the Holy Ghost, the Lord and Giver of Life, proceeding from the Father and the Son, and together with them worshipped and glorified, so I swear that I will not knowingly and designedly, if I shall be elected into that trust to which this Oath is made preparatory, either inculcate or countenance, in my discharge of the said trust, any doctrines contrary to the Profession which I have now thus publicly made of my belief in the "Holy, Blessed, and Glorious Trinity, three Persons and one God." Amen. So help me God.

[b. The English Essay.]

Rules for
Essay.

The second part or parcel of the Annuity relates to a premium for the encouragement of application in the Students of this University of Cambridge. I allot Twelve Pounds out of the Annuity of £120, as a reward for the best Prose English Essay, on some such subjects as the following: The great advantages of Revelation—(shewing amongst other proofs, the insufficiency of human reason, by the preposterous opinions of those nations "who have not yet learned Christ")—The goodness of our Father to give his only-begotten Son for us—The necessity of a Redeemer, with the sufficiency of his merits, and the insufficiency of our own—His perfect example and amiable character—The astonishing and most gracious reward of Eternity—no reason to expect such a reward, if we continue in the practice of any one known sin, however scrupulously exact we have been in performing all our duties, any single one only excepted—The necessity of the co-operation of the Holy Spirit with our endeavours after righteousness, the pleasing contemplation of a continual Comforter—The literary beauties of the Scriptures, &c. &c.

medal.

Two Three pound twelves, or £7. 4s. of the aforesaid sum of Twelve pounds, shall be expended upon a gold medal, one side of which shall represent the New Testament, and the Cross with this Inscription around it, The wisdom of God unto salvation; the reverse shall represent—in as few figures as possible, in order that they may be more distinct—the Resurrection, with this Inscription upon it Death is swallowed up in victory; upon the edge (where the milling in our current coin is impressed) shall be these words *The Norrisian Prize*¹, and if there be room, the name of the successful candidate, and the date of the year. I would have the medal executed in a very masterly manner.

prize is to be adjudged.

And I leave the adjudication of superior merit in the Essays to the opinion of the three Stewards; and if they are not agreed, to a majority, when the Professor under this Institution, and the Hebrew and Greek Professors, have been first called in.

Books.

The residue of the Twelve pounds, viz. Four pounds and sixteen shillings, is to be disposed of in books; amongst which I make it essential that there be the following: a Bible, or the Old and New Testament—Sherlock's (Bishop of London) Discourses, vols. 4—Leland's View of Deistical Writers, last edition—Pearson on the Creed:—(but if the Bible and Pearson be already had, there is no occasion for duplicates).

¹ Or, The Revelation Prize, accordingly as the Professor's appellation shall be settled.

The surplus after this purchase shall be expended in such books as the Professor shall choose: upon the inside of the left-hand cover (as the book is opened) of each book shall be pasted a copper-plate impression of one of the sides of the medal.

Employment of surplus.

The qualifications of the Candidates, for the first three years after the commencement of this Institution, shall be only these: Their age not to exceed 30, nor to be under 20—to be, or to have been students of this University: after the first 3 years, there shall ever henceforward be essential this additional qualification, namely, attendance at these Lectures for 20 times in the course of one year; and moreover, this attendance is to be signified to the Stewards under the Professor's hand.

Who may be candidates for the Prize.

The Professor shall propound each year's Thesis, and he shall cause it to be published in one of the most public London papers, and such publication shall be always within the first ten days of every November: the Essays to be sealed up as customarily in other probationary exercises, and sent to one of the three Stewards, on or before the tenth day preceding the Sunday in every Passion-week, and on the Thursday morning preceding every Good Friday shall the successful Candidate know the Adjudication, and shall within fourteen days receive the medal and the books. Provided always, that at the time of receiving them he gives a promissory note for the payment of Twelve pounds to the Trustees, or owner of the Estate whence arises the Annuity, in case he does not cause such Essay so rewarded to be publicly printed and published within two calendar months. Any opinion advanced in such Essay, contrary to the National Church's Articles, with respect to our Saviour's Divinity, and the personality of the Holy Spirit, shall as utterly disqualify a Candidate from receiving the reward, as the absurdity and weakness of the composition itself; and whether such Essay does advance such opinion or opinions, is hereby left to the decision of them who are constituted Judges of the merit of the Essays. The payment of the aforesaid portion of Twelve pounds out of the Hundred and twenty pounds, is to be made at the same time with the payment to the Professor, and unto the same receivers, who are to give a distinct receipt for the same. The medal and books are annually to be ordered by the Stewards, and whatever expence may arise from the publication of the Thesis in the London paper, and from the copper-plate impressions, is to be defrayed out of the £4. 16s. allowed for books.

Subject of Prize. When to be announced, and when adjudicated.

Essay to be printed and published within one year under penalty.

[c. The Annual Sermon.]

The third division compriseth only the small sum of two guineas, for an Annual Sermon in the University Church, (the subject to have always some reference to Revelation,) to be preached upon every Good Friday, unless it be a constant custom already to have a sermon in the morning of that day; (for I would have this sermon preached in a morning;) and if such be the present custom, then this sermon shall be preached in the morning of one of these days, (whether it happen to be Sunday or not,) viz. the 14th of November, or the 1st of December, or the 10th of the same month, in every year: and a notice of seven days previously to the preaching of it shall be given in the Cambridge Newspaper, or that paper which circulates most generally in the University and Town: if the Professor under this Institution be in orders, he has his choice to preach it, and if not in orders, or chooses not to preach it, he shall have the appointment of the person. But be it always understood—That if the sermon be not publicly published in print, within four weeks from the day of preaching it, the money, viz. the two guineas, shall not be received by the Trustees or Owner of this Estate; it shall for every such year so omitted not become due. The advertisement in the paper of such sermon to be so preached shall be paid by the Professor, who (if the sermon be published) may deduct it from the two guineas. The Stewards who give the other before-mentioned receipts are also to give a receipt for this money, observing in such receipt “that the sermon has been printed and published,” and when the other sums (if due) are to be paid into the hands of the already named Stewards, this sum (if due) is likewise to be paid.

Sermon to be printed and published.

[d. Annual gift of books to prisoners in University Gaol.]

Eighteen shillings to be spent annually in books to be given to prisoners in a University gaol.

The fourth and last particular includes only the sum of eighteen shillings (for add £105, and £12, and £2 and 2s. there will only want 18s. to complete the annuity of One hundred and twenty pounds); and this sum of eighteen shillings is by my express order to be laid out in books—The New Testament, and (a shilling book) the Great Importance of a Religious Life: which books are annually to be sent by the Professor unto one of the Proctors of the University, who is to distribute them amongst such delinquents (who can read) as shall happen from time to time to be confined or imprisoned in some gaol, spinning or workhouse, or cage, belonging to the said University of Cambridge. Before this sum of 18s. shall become due from the Trustees, or Owner of the Estate, whence the Annuity arises, an account under the Proctor's hand, That such books (to the amount aforesaid) have been distributed, shall be transmitted to one of the Stewards already named, who shall produce the same when the receipts for the other sums are delivered; at which time this sum (if due) shall be likewise paid.

If this Institution do not take place, from any non-conformity in the University, within twenty-four months from the day of my decease, it shall not afterwards: but the whole Annuity of £120 shall lapse, and be ever afterwards irrecoverable.

JOHN NORRIS.

This is the Paper or Book to which my Will (bearing date, June 26th: 1770) refers.

Oh my sister! (or whoever shall succeed me) should there be any legal defect in this Institution, avail not yourself of it, but fulfil my meaning: depend upon it, you will never be happy (for who bestows happiness?) if you do not act in this instance agreeably to my intention.

This is the Paper, or Book, to which my Will (bearing date, June 26th, 1770) refers.

I remember that at the end of the extract from Porteus's sermon, (which extract I have cited) the Reviewers, those pious Annotators, make some such reflection as this: "We hope that if ever such an Institution does take place, it will be grounded upon a freedom of enquiry." What the end of this freedom of enquiry is, the Infidelity of the age loudly and clearly explains. A freedom of enquiry is indeed recommended to us, but it is an unprejudiced freedom of enquiry; and in what heart—in this æra of intellectual pride—shall we find no previous bias? The folly and arrogance is, that the modern free-thinker imagines there can have been no freedom of enquiry where the result of it corresponds not with its own creed: as if the man whose enquiry led him to the same opinions with those of Burnet of the Charter-house, Pearson, Addison, Nelson, Sherlock, must be more narrowminded, more fettered than he who coincides with Clarke, Clogher, and the liberal translator of the New Testament, &c. &c. But why should I seem to wish to apologize for restrictions which I judge proper to be put upon an Institution that is wholly my own? There can be but one system of Divinity, according to the truth; and this true system is I think contained in one of the petitions of the Church of England—"O holy, blessed and glorious Trinity, three persons and one God," &c.; wherefore I very naturally established this Institution upon what I esteem to be the language of Scripture. It is easily discoverable, even by Harwood's liberal Translation of the New Testament (so liberal as to preserve no Original Text) what falsehoods a Libertine Lecturer might introduce, what a wrong bias upon young minds he might permanently impress. Certain it is, that every seriously thinking man would, upon establishing such an Institution as this, require of its Professor the sanction of an oath not to inculcate principles contrary to those entertained by the Institutor. Not that I desire, nay, it is of all things opposite to my desire, that controversial topics should be debated in these Lectures: The necessity of a Revelation,—The noble precepts of morality, which it has conveyed to us,—The beauties of the Sacred Writings,—these are the things which I wish to be illustrated; only as there must unavoidably be explanations of difficult passages, and seeming contrarieties, and as there will too be sometimes curious questions asked, I would warily guard against notions derogatory from Him who made us, and from Him also, who if this Institution be a righteous one, has influenced me to establish it— notions derogatory from the Son, and the Holy Ghost, both of whom live and reign (in what manner 'tis most true we know not,) with the Father, as one Lord God, to an eternity of ages. Hallelujah!

One word more—I apprehend that none of our Universities, however so disposed, could permit the establishment of an Institution (of this nature) contrary to the Articles of the Protestant National Church. What objection then can Cambridge in propriety have to my prescribed Oath? The reason why I particularized the oath is obvious—That he who should take it might know its compass: for a general oath, such as would have enforced an unspecified conformity to the Articles of our Church, would have been, I think, abundantly too comprehensive. Infallibility belongs to no earthly communion; there are some of the 39 Articles (as much as I at this juncture recollect of them,) which, if true, would abate my love towards Him who I am now convinced is the only proper object of it.

If this Institution takes place, I would wish that the three Stewards should be presented with Ten guineas each, and that the same sum should be given to each of the Trustees, over and above what may be left to them by my will.

The Will.

From a high sense of gratitude for the great advantages I have derived from having been educated at the University of Cambridge, I leave and bequeath unto the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of that University five hundred pounds 3 per Cent. Reduced Bank Annuities, the dividends of which I direct shall be paid unto the University Chest till the legacy duty shall have been repaid to the Chest, my object of which is that the foundation for which I give it may eventually have the full interest of my benefaction; and after the Chest has been thus satisfied my Will is that the dividends as they become due should be paid to the Norrisian Professor of Divinity for the time being as an augmentation of his stipend under the same conditions as are prescribed in the original foundation.

The Codicil.

And whereas I have by my said Will left and bequeathed five hundred pounds 3 per Cent. Reduced Bank Annuities to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge for the augmentation of the salary of the Norrisian Professor of Divinity in that University; now I hereby leave and bequeath unto them another five hundred pounds 3 per Cent. Reduced Bank Annuities in addition to my former bequest, and I hereby direct, as in the former case, that the legacy duty thereon may be repaid to the University Chest in the same manner as mentioned in my said Will, and that the Professor receive none of the dividends till the University Chest has been repaid what it has advanced, so that the Professor may eventually receive the full benefit of the interest of the whole legacy of one thousand pounds 3 per Cent. Reduced¹.

for and towards the maintenance and support of one such learned and ingenious person of the degree of Master of Arts or of Bachelor or Doctor of Divinity, and of the age of thirty years or upwards, and then resident in the said University, as shall be by them [the trustees] or any two of them on Christmas-day, or within seven days after, thought the best qualified, and by them or any two of them successively elected for any term not exceeding five or six years, in order to prepare some proper and judicious answer or answers every year to all such new and popular or other cavils and objections against the Christian or Revealed Religion, or against the Religion of Nature, as may in the opinion of the said last-mentioned Trustees or any two of them seem best or most proper to deserve or require an answer, whether the same be ancient or modern objections, but chiefly such as are most modern, and especially such as have appeared in the English language of late years against Christianity, and which may not seem to have received a full and sufficient answer, if any such there shall be, unto the year preceding such election, as likewise to be ready to satisfy any real scruples or objections in a private way that may be brought from time to time by any fair and candid inquirer against the same, such writer to be called The Christian Advocate, and such his written answer to be in English, and only against notorious infidels, whether Atheists or Deists, not descending to any particular controversies or sects amongst Christians themselves, except some new and dangerous error either of superstition or enthusiasm, as of Popery or Methodism, either in opinion or practice shall prevail, in which case only it may be necessary for that time to write or to reason against the same, and such treatise or treatises to be every year printed,...but no person shall be ever re-elected or at any time after he has once filled the said office appointed thereto again².

Secondly, he appoints a Preacher, whose duties are thus described:

And first it was always my humble and earnest desire and intention that the following donation and devise should be founded as much as possible on the plan of that profoundly learned and successful inquirer into nature and most religious adorer of nature's God, I mean the truly great and good (as well as honorable) Robert Boyle, Esquire, who has added so much lustre and done equal service both by his learning and his life to his native country and to human nature and to the cause of Christianity and truth, to the promoting in some degree a design so worthy of every reasonable creature.

[Certain rents are to be paid] to such learned and ingenious clergyman in the said University of the degree of Master of Arts, and under the age of forty years as shall be duly chosen or elected on Christmas Day, or within seven days after, by the Vice-Chancellor there for the time being, and by the Master or Head of Trinity College and the Master of Saint John's College, or by any two of them, in order to preach twenty sermons in the whole year, that is to say, ten sermons in the following spring in Saint Mary's Great Church in Cambridge, namely, one sermon either on the Friday morning or else on Sunday afternoon in every week during the months of April and May and the two first weeks of June, and likewise ten sermons in the same church in the following Autumn, either on the Friday morning or else on Sunday afternoon in every week during the months of September and October and during the two first weeks in November, the subject of which discourses shall be as followeth, that is to say, the subject of five sermons in the Spring and likewise of five sermons in the Autumn shall be to shew the evidence for Revealed Religion, and to demonstrate in the most convincing and persuasive manner the Truth and Excellence of Christianity, so as to include not only the prophecies and miracles, general and particular, but also any other proper and useful arguments, whether the same be direct or collateral proofs of the Christian religion, which he may think fittest to discourse upon, either in general or particular, especially the collateral arguments, or else any particular article or branch thereof, and chiefly against notorious infidels, whether atheists or deists, not descending to any particular sects or controversies (so much to be lamented) amongst Christians themselves, except some new or dangerous error either of superstition or enthusiasm, as of Popery or Methodism or the like, either in opinion or practice shall prevail, in which case only it may be necessary for that time to write and preach against the same. Nevertheless the preacher of the ten sermons last mentioned to shew the Truth and Excellence of Revealed Religion and the Evidence of Christianity may at his own discretion preach either more or fewer than ten sermons on this great argument only, provided he shall in consequence thereof lessen or increase the number of the other ten remaining sermons which are hereinafter directed to be on the more obscure parts of Holy Scripture in a due proportion, so as that he shall every year preach twenty sermons on these subjects in the whole. And as to the ten sermons that remain, of which five are to be preached in the Spring and five in the Autumn as before mentioned, the lecturer or preacher shall take for his subject some of the more difficult texts or obscure parts of the Holy Scriptures, such I mean as may appear to be more generally useful or necessary to be explained, and which may best admit of such a comment or explanation without presuming to pry too far into the profound secrets or awful mysteries of the Almighty. And in all the said twenty sermons such practical observations shall be made and such useful conclusions added as may best instruct and edify mankind, the said twenty sermons to be every year printed and a new preacher to be every year elected (except in the case of the extraordinary merit of the preacher) when it may sometimes be thought proper to continue the same person for five, at the most for six years together, but no longer term, nor shall he ever afterwards be again elected to the same duty¹.

Sermons to be printed. The preacher not to be reelected as a general rule.

The Dissertation or Prize.

Thirdly, he appoints the following rules for a Dissertation or Prize. The prizeman is described as such other learned and ingenious person in the said University under the degree of Master of Arts, as shall compose for that year the best dissertation in the English language on the evidence in general or on the prophecies or miracles in particular, or any other particular argument, whether the same be direct or collateral proofs of the Christian Religion, in order to evince its truth and excellence, the subject of which dissertation shall be given out by the Vice-Chancellor and the said two Masters my trustees above mentioned, or by some of them, on New Year's Day annually, and such dissertation as shall be by them or any two of them on Christmas Day annually the best approved, to be also printed and the expence defrayed out of the author's income under this my Will, and the remainder given to him on Saint John the Evangelist's Day following; and he who shall be so rewarded shall not be admitted at any future time as a candidate again in the same way, though he may be elected to the other offices afterwards, to the intent that others may be invited and encouraged to write on so sacred and sublime a subject².

Fourthly, he founds three scholarships in S. John's College, Cambridge. The scholars shall be undergraduates in Saint John's College aforesaid, and shall be born in the County Palatine of Chester, such scholars to be elected by the Master and a majority of the Senior Fellows of the said College on Christmas Day or in the first seven days after, and may be distinguished as usual by the name of Hulse's Scholars, and to wear a cloth gown with long and open sleeves hanging down like those of Bachelors¹.

In 1791 (10 May) a Syndicate was appointed to confer with Mr Hulse's executors, the Will being a document, as the preamble to the Grace sets forth, quod ad exitum commode perducere nequeat; and in November of the same year (Grace, 1 November) it was directed that probate of the Will should be obtained, the cost of doing so being charged to the Chest². The first Christian Advocate was appointed in 1803, and the first lecturer in 1819.

In 1830 (21 December) the Court of Chancery reduced the number of lectures to eight, and ordered that the time limited for printing the said lectures be enlarged to one year³.

In 1860 the office of Christian Advocate was converted into a Professorship of Theology, the duties of the lecturer and the conditions of the Prize were modified⁴, and subsequently, by Statute B, the management of the estates was vested in the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University⁵.

8. PORTRAIT, PRIZE AND SCHOLARSHIP IN MEMORY OF RICHARD PORSON.

In 1792, when the Fellowship at Trinity College held by Richard Porson expired, a subscription was set on foot with the view of purchasing an annuity for him. The sum collected is said to have amounted to nearly £2000. The annuity was not purchased, because Porson declined to accept the munificence of his friends, except on the condition that he should receive the interest only during his life, and that the principal should be returned to the subscribers at his death. The money was therefore vested in trustees for this purpose.

After his death, 25 September, 1808, the subscribers decided that the money should not be returned to them, but that it should be applied to such purposes as the surviving trustees should choose. These purposes were: (1) Engraving the portrait of Porson by Hoppner; (2) Foundation of the Porson Prize; (3) a Monument in Trinity College Chapel; (4) other expenses not specified.

The residue of the fund remained in the hands of Charles Burney or of his son Charles Parr Burney (who allowed interest on it at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum), with the view of its accumulating to a sum sufficient to endow a scholarship, until the death of the other trustee the Rev. John Cleaver Banks, when a deed (printed below, III) was drawn up conveying to the University the sum to which this residue had accumulated. A Grace authorising this deed to be sealed passed the Senate, 12 May, 1848.

In 1858 new Statutes for both Prize and Scholarship were approved by the Queen in Council; and in 1892 (8 December) the Senate approved a report of the Council of the Senate, dated 31 October, which proposed to limit the annual stipend of a Porson scholar to £60, and to make application to the Court of Chancery "for power to apply the accumulations of the surplus income of the fund to the foundation of a second Porson scholarship, so soon as the fund is so large as to produce an income of thirty pounds a year at least in addition to the income of the existing scholarship¹."

I. Engraving of Porson's Portrait.

The portrait of Porson, by Hoppner, now in the University Library, was engraved by William Sharp. The plate was given to the University in 1869, under the circumstances explained in the following letters².

WICKHAM BISHOPS RECTORY, WITHAM.

Dec. 18, 1869.

REVEREND SIR,

You will, I trust, pardon me for troubling you on the subject of this note. My grandfather was one of the original Promoters of the Fund which many years after led to the Establishment of the Porson Prize. One of the objects to which a portion of the money subscribed was applied was an Engraving of a Portrait of Porson, a Copy of which was I believe given to each Subscriber.

The Plate for this Engraving has always been in our Family, and on the death of my Father descended to me. I am anxious to find a good destination for it, and it has occurred to me that the Trustees of the Porson Prize, of which you are, I believe, ex officio one, might like to possess it, and that an Impression might be presented to every successful Competitor for the Prize. I shall be most happy to fall in with any arrangement which you and your Brother Trustees may deem best, as I feel that the Plate might be in better hands than mine.

Believe me always, Reverend Sir,

Your obedient Servant,

CHARLES BURNEY.

2. Professor Kennedy to the Vice-Chancellor.

THE COLLEGE, ELY.

December 22, 1869.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I presume that I ought to place in your hands the enclosed letter, and I have so informed the writer, returning thanks to him for his kind offer.

I am not aware who are the official persons on whom it will devolve to consider the proposal.

Believe me, dear Mr Vice-Chancellor,

Yours very faithfully,

B. H. KENNEDY.

3. Minute of the Council of the Senate, 31 January, 1870.

Mr Burney had written to Dr Kennedy to say that he possessed the Plate from which the engravings of Porson were taken, and that he wished to give it to the Trustees in order, if they should think fit, that a number of impressions should be struck off and one given annually to each successful competitor for the Porson Prize.

As the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars were really the Trustees, the Council thought that the Plate might be accepted and kept in the Registry's Office¹, with a view to its being used in the manner suggested by Mr Burney.

II. The Prize.

The following indenture was read to the Senate, and ordered to be sealed, 28 May, 1816²; but no regulations were drawn up until 1898, when a Report of the Council, dated 23 May, containing those at present in force, was confirmed by the Senate (9 June)³.

III. The Scholarship.

This Indenture, made the twenty-seventh day of January in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight between John Chapman of No. 2, Leadenhall Street in the City of London, Esq. and Samuel Metcalfe Latham, of Dover in the County of Kent, Esq. executors of the Reverend John Cleaver Banks late of Dover aforesaid, clerk, but now deceased, of the first part; the Venerable Charles Parr Burney, Doctor in Divinity, Archdeacon of Colchester, the sole administrator of the goods and chattels rights and credits of the Reverend Charles Burney Doctor in Divinity Rector of Saint Pauls Deptford in the County of Kent deceased of the second part; and the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge of the third part.

27 Jan. 1848.

Whereas in the lifetime of the late learned Richard Porson, Master of Arts, Professor of Greek in the University of Cambridge, divers individuals, desirous of doing honour to his attainments, raised by subscription among themselves a sum of money, which was intended to be wholly applied for his benefit, and the application thereof was committed to several trustees, of whom the Reverend Charles Burney Doctor in Divinity and the said Reverend John Cleaver Banks both now deceased were the two survivors;

And whereas it happened that the interest only of the said fund was received by the said Richard Porson during his life; and the principal being undistributed at his death, it was determined by the original subscribers, assembled by public advertisement, that the same should be applied to such purposes as the then trustees themselves should choose;

And whereas in pursuance of such determination after disposing of part of the said fund in engraving a print from the portrait of the said Richard Porson by Hoppner for distribution amongst the surviving subscribers to the said fund and for other purposes connected with the said trust the said Charles Burney and John Cleaver Banks transferred into the names of the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the said University the sum of Four hundred pounds Navy five pounds per cent. annuities part of the said fund, upon certain trusts for establishing an annual prize to be called The Porson University Prize, to be adjudicated in the manner set forth in an indenture dated the twenty-seventh day of November one thousand eight hundred and sixteen and made between the said Charles Burney and John Cleaver Banks of the one part and the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the other part;

And whereas it was always the intention of the said trustees that the residue of the said fund should, when and so soon as the same should accumulate to a sum sufficient for that purpose, be applied in founding a scholarship in the said University, to be called The Porson Scholarship ;

And whereas on the decease of the said Charles Burney the said John Cleaver Banks became sole trustee of the said fund but he permitted the residue thereof which remained in the hands of the said Charles Burney at the time of his decease to be retained by the said Charles Parr Burney as such administrator as aforesaid ;

9. BENEFACTION OF RICHARD SHEEPSHANKS AND ANNE SHEEPSHANKS, 1859, 1863.

- a. Exhibition at Trinity College.
- b. The Observatory.

Richard Sheepshanks became a member of Trinity College in 1812, and graduated B.A. in 1816, M.A. in 1819. He was elected to a fellowship in 1817, which he retained till his death. He devoted himself to scientific pursuits, chiefly astronomical, among which the active promotion of the building of the Cambridge Observatory should be particularly mentioned. He died 4 May, 1855¹.

Three years afterwards, 2 December, 1858, the University was informed in a letter written to the Vice-Chancellor by Mr Airy, Astronomer Royal, that the representatives of Mr Sheepshanks proposed to offer an endowment of £10,000 stock 3 p. c. consols for the following purposes :

For the establishment of an Astronomical Exhibition in Trinity College ; for the promotion of the Science of Astronomy in the University of Cambridge ; and for the rendering efficient the Cambridge Observatory for the benefit of Astronomy, or of Terrestrial Magnetism or Meteorology, or of such other sciences as usually are or may be continuously followed in an Observatory.

Mr Airy's letter was read to the Senate 9 December, 1858, when a letter of thanks, written by the Public Orator, was ordered to be sealed.

In the following year (1 February, 1859), a deed, printed below, was drawn up between the parties concerned and Miss Sheepshanks ; the preamble to which sets forth that, "out of regard to the memory of her brother, and to promote the study of those Sciences to which he had specially devoted his talents," she had determined to appropriate the above sum on certain conditions.

In 1863 Mr Airy informed the Vice-Chancellor of a further gift from Miss Sheepshanks, for the exclusive benefit of the Observatory :

February 25, 1863.

SIR,

I have the honor to communicate to you, for the information of the Council and Senate of the University of Cambridge, that, on November 24, 1860, Miss Sheepshanks transferred to my name the sum of £2000, then in the hands of Messrs Overend, Gurney and Co., to be employed [under the approval of the Master of Trinity and myself¹] for the benefit of the Cambridge Observatory, with special preference for its employment in the purchase of one or more large Instruments, or Classes of Instruments, if such should be required for the Observatory ; and that the money has been lying from that time in Messrs Overend and Gurney's hands, with interest upon it at the rate usually allowed by bill-discounting firms, namely, 1 per cent. below the Bank Rate of Discount ; and without any diminution or engagement, except that, at the request of the Vice-Chancellor and Observatory Syndicate, I undertook by letter to the Master of Trinity College, dated December 5, 1862, to defray from it the cost of a Chronographic Apparatus, at an estimated expence of £80.

It appears to me that it would now be convenient that the sum in question, with its accrual of Interest, but subject to the engagement which I have specified, should be transferred to the absolute control of the University, in Trust to be employed for the benefit of the Observatory, with special preference for its employment in the purchase of one or more large Instruments, or classes of Instruments, if such should be required for the Observatory. And I request that you will have the goodness to state in my name to the Council and Senate of the University that, in the event of the Senate expressing their willingness to accept the said monies on these terms, I am prepared at once to transfer the whole to the Vice-Chancellor or other authorized Officer of the University.

I have the honor to be, Sir, [etc.]

G. B. AIRY.

¹ These words are inserted from a letter addressed by Mr Airy to the Vice-Chancellor on the same subject, 17 February, 1863. Both letters are in the Registry, Vol. xxix. 54, 54².

by those
attended.

II. *Opinion of Counsel, dated 12 March, 1867*².

In answer to the various questions contained in this case (which for convenience we have numbered in the margin) we are of opinion as follows :

1. The Will does not contemplate the making of any regulations by Trinity College for the governance of the Professor. As regards the Scholars the power of Trinity College in defining their numbers and stipends whether uniform or not and in fixing the rules and regulations to which they are to be subject is only limited by the qualification that such rules and regulations are not to be inconsistent with the Statutes of the University. Trinity College would from time to time have the power to vary those regulations. The University on its part has the power to accept or reject the benefaction or its continuance if any regulations should be made of which it may disapprove. We cannot doubt that any regulations proposed by the University as essential to their acceptance of the benefaction would be inserted in the rules and regulations made by Trinity College but should any serious difference of opinion arise in this respect it would be advisable to make a joint application to the Court of Chancery to frame a scheme in accordance with the interests of the benefaction.

2. The University would have the same powers to make rules for the government and discipline or admonition or removal in case of misconduct or incompetence of the Professor or for the appointment of a deputy in case of illness or infirmity or for enforcing residence as it has always had in the case of Professorships subject to the qualification that such rules must not be inconsistent with the terms of the Will.

3. Such rules might be imposed by Grace of the Senate (Statuta p. 65. 19 & 20 Vic. c. 88 § 17).

² Circulated by Vice-Chancellor, 26 November, 1867.

4. What persons are qualified to be the Scholars will depend upon the rules to be framed by Trinity College.

5. There is nothing in the Will to compel the Scholars to become members of Trinity College. Should any such regulation be insisted upon by the College, we think it probable that the Court of Chancery might on petition disallow such a restriction as beyond the scope of the power of regulation given to the College.

6. There is nothing in the Will to render it compulsory on the Scholars to reside in the Hostel. But as the Will would seem to give them a right to such residence we think it most desirable that the University and the College should if possible before the Benefaction is accepted endeavour to agree upon some plan agreeable to both with reference to this part of the Will.

7. The Master and Seniors of Trinity College may make regulations as to the age or standing of candidates for scholarships or for their residence in the University after election or for their proceeding to degrees or for their having previously taken a degree or as to a Scholar forfeiting his Scholarship provided no such regulation be inconsistent with any of the general laws of the University.

8. If the University objects to any such regulations it might refuse to accept the Scholarships but it could not of its own power accept the benefaction and yet reject or modify any regulations made by Trinity College not inconsistent with the Statutes of the University.

9. The University might accept the Professorship and reject the Scholarships or vice versa.

10. The Election being by the Will to be made by "a Majority of the above mentioned electors" we think that no single elector could vote twice or oftener in more than one capacity.

11. The Professorship should be established by Grace of the Senate but as to the form of the Grace and what it should include this is matter not of Law but of University practice.

12. The provisions of the Will in regard to the certificate for stipend must be complied with.

PROFESSORSHIPS

1. DIVINITY, GREEK, HEBREW, LAW, PHYSIC (Regius).
1540.

These five Professorships are commonly stated to have been founded by King Henry the Eighth in 1540, but no deed of foundation appears to be in existence. The single piece of direct evidence available for this date is that afforded by the letters patent dated 9 November, 1540, appointing Thomas Wakefield, M.A., Reader in Hebrew with a salary of £40 a year to be paid out of the revenues of the suppressed Abbey of Westminster (A).

There is indirect evidence that the other four Readerships were filled up in 1540 or soon afterwards¹.

In the statutes which Queen Mary gave to Trinity College it was provided that the stipends of the Readers in Divinity, Greek, and Hebrew, should be paid by that College; and minute directions were added respecting the mode of election, status of the Readers, etc. (B). This statute, with a few unimportant alterations, forms the forty-first chapter of the statutes given by Queen Elizabeth to the same College, 1559–60².

This statute shews that so early as the reign of Queen Mary the election of the Regius Professors of Divinity, Hebrew, and Greek was entrusted as at present to a body of electors resident in the University, the salaries of the Professors being paid by Trinity College. The Regius

¹ Letters of Roger Ascham, Vol. i. (ed. Giles) p. 25. The letter may be dated May or June, 1542, from what is said in it of Bp. Gardiner's letter on the pronunciation of Greek, dated 15 May, 1542. The writer says: "De Cantabrigia si quid aves audire, en jam bene nova tibi videri potest: tam divinis et immortalibus literarum præsidis et ornamentis auxit eam optimi principis nostri munificentia. Wigginus [Wiganus] Theologia, Smithus Jurisprudentiæ, Checus Linguae Græcæ, Wakfeldus Hebraicæ, Blitus, qui sororem domini Checi duxit, Medicinæ, publici professores sunt instituti. Salarium quadraginta librarum singuli quotannis sunt accepturi."

Professors of Law and Medicine on the contrary were always on a different footing. The Crown has made and still makes the appointment, and the ancient stipend (now considerably reduced) is still paid by the Crown to the University.

Arms were granted to the five Regius Professors in 1590¹.

In 1605 (26 August) King James the First annexed the rectory of Somersham to the Regius Professorship of Divinity²; and in 1661 King Charles the Second gave to the Professors of Hebrew and Greek the privilege of continuing to hold their fellowships in connection with their Professorships (C).

By Act of Parliament, 3 and 4 Victoria, c. 113, leave was given to the University to sell, if they thought proper, the advowsons of the benefices annexed to the Regius Professorship of Divinity (D).

A scheme for annexing canonries in the Cathedral Church of Ely to the Regius Professorships of Hebrew and Greek was prepared by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners 13 July, 1848, and received the assent of the Queen in Council 11 August, 1848 (E).

In 1860 (29 March) the Commissioners framed a new statute for the Regius Professorships of Divinity, Hebrew, and Greek. This statute was confirmed by the Queen in Council, 10 May, 1860³.

By Will dated 25 March, 1871, George Jeremy of Lee Combe House, Axminster, Devon; and of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law; formerly of Trinity College (A.B. 1818, A.M. 1821) bequeathed to the University £1000 in augmentation of the income of the Regius Professor of Divinity (F). Mr Jeremy died 31 December, 1874; and the sum bequeathed (less legacy duty) was paid to the University in 1878⁴.

³ Statutes, ed. 1896, p. 83. A statute framed by the Council of the Senate and published by them 26 October, 1857, though approved by Trinity College under its common seal, was rejected by the Senate 26 November, 1857. For the stipends of the Regius Professors of Greek, Law, and Physic, see Statute B, chapter vi.

⁴ The Vice-Chancellor was authorised to give a receipt for the legacy and dividends by Grace 21 March, 1878.

The Universities Act, 1877, contains the following provision for the severance of the canonry in the Cathedral Church of Ely from the Regius Professorship of Greek :

26. The Commissioners, in a statute or statutes made by them for the University of Cambridge, with the concurrence of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, may provide for the canonry in the chapter of the Cathedral Church of Ely, which is annexed and united to the Regius Professorship of Greek, being, on a vacancy, severed therefrom, and being thenceforth permanently annexed and united to a professorship in the University of a theological or ecclesiastical character, with power, nevertheless, for the Commissioners, with the concurrence of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, if they think it expedient, to allow the present professor to resign the professorship and to hold the canonry as if it had never been annexed to the professorship and, 11 May, 1878, the Master of Trinity College forwarded to the Vice-Chancellor the following Resolution :

That the Vice-Chancellor be informed that if the University desire that the Canonry of Ely now attached to the Regius Professorship of Greek be separated from the Professorship, the College is prepared to recommend to the Commissioners that the Professorship be endowed with a Fellowship of the College, and with the sum of £500 a year from the revenues of the College, in addition to his statutable payment of £40 a year.

This resolution was embodied by the Council of the Senate in a Report dated 10 June, 1878, confirmed by Grace 5 December, 1878¹; but the separation was not effected until 1882, when (10 March) the statute now in force received the royal assent².

The Rectory of Somersham was disannexed from the Regius Professorship of Divinity by an Act of Parliament which received the royal assent 18 August, 1882. The income of the rectory is to be divided between the vicar and the Professor³.

Quo quis ampliore mercede et stipendio donatus est, eo majorem laborem libenti animo capere debet; et propterea statuimus et ordinamus, ut tres publici Lectores (quorum singuli quadraginta libras a Collegio Sancte et Individue Trinitatis a Rege Henrico Octavo, Patre nostro charissimo, fundato in singulos annos recipiunt) unaquaque hebdomada cuiusque termini in qua nullus festus dies occurrerit, quinquies² singuli minimum legant, et auditores semper antea de eo die quo legere voluit admoneant. Insuper toto magne vacationis termino, si pestis non ingruerit, et tria ex precipuis Collegiis suam iuventutem non rus amandarint, eos quoque legere precipimus: precipua Collegia hoc loco intelligimus, Collegium Regis, Collegium Sancte et Individue Trinitatis, Collegium Divi Johannis, et Collegium Christi. Et quoties singuli, vel eo termino vel reliquis tribus terminis, diebus prestitutis legendi officium pretermiserint, toties decem solidis mulcentur, qui dempti de ipsorum stipendiis in Collegiis vsum cedant.

And in Long Vacation.

Quod si quispiam eorum egrotaverit, aut aliqua gravi causa aut negotio per Magistrum Collegii et maiorem partem octo Seniorum approbando impeditus fuerit, tum intra triduum ad summum pro se unum qui sit ad illud munus obeundum idoneus substituat, ut auditorum utilitati diligenter consulatur; verum aliis de causis nunquam pro se quempiam substituere sub pena loci sui amittendi permittimus.

When a deputy may be allowed.

Horas autem a Vicecancellario et Magistro dicti Collegii cum quatuor ex octo Senioribus prestitutis observent. Singulisque diebus quibus legere tenentur, singuli integram fere horam prelegendo consumant; quinetiam et auctores a predictis Vicecancellario Magistro et quatuor ex octo senioribus dicti Collegii designatos legant, et modum legendi quoque quem illi vtilissimum commodissimumque duxerint perpetuo teneant.

Lecture to last for one hour.

Porro statuimus et volumus, vt quotiescunque locum alicuius predictorum Lectorum vacare contigerit, plenam eligendi potestatem habeant Vicecancellarius Academie Cantabrigiensis, Magister Collegii predicti cum duobus maxime senioribus sociis eiusdem Collegii, quinetiam Prepositi seu Magistri trium reliquorum precipuorum Collegiorum, id est, Collegii Regalis, Collegii Divi Johannis, et Collegii Christi, et si quispiam predictorum Electorum Vicecancellarius id temporis fuerit, tum sumatur eius loco Magister Collegii Regine: qui omnes in publicis Scholis in vnum per Vicecancellarium cum consensu Magistri Collegii Sancte et Individue Trinitatis predicti convocati, breve quoddam scriptum seu instrumentum per scribam Academie, postridie quam locum vacare intellexerint, componendum curent, inque eo diem ad singulos eorum qui munus illud petunt diligenter examinandos prestituunt. Huius scripti seu instrumenti sint duo exemplaria descripta; quorum alterum ad ostium templi Dive Marie prope forum siti, alterum ad ostium publicarum Scholarum affigatur, ibique vtrumque ad septem dies integros stet, quo ab omnibus totius Academie predictae studentibus intelligi possit eiusmodi locum vacare. Sit autem dies examinationis octavus dies postquam Vicecancellario et Magistro Collegii Sancte et Individue Trinitatis a Rege Henrico Octavo, Patre nostro charissimo, fundati locum vacare notum fuerit.

Mode of election. Who are to elect.

Eight days' notice of day for examination of candidates to be given.

A non-resident candidate may be sent for and time for examination extended.

In case of one who is out of England a deputy may be appointed.

How the examination is to be conducted. For Divinity.

For Hebrew and Greek.

Oath to be taken by the Electors.

No notice to be taken of Royal Letters or others in favour of particular persons.

Deputy for an absent elector.

What qualities in a candidate are to be taken into account.

Fellows of Trinity to be preferred.

Quod si quispiam eorum qui tunc abfuerint ab Academia, iudicio maioris partis Electorum, etiamsi non petat, dignissimus loco vacante videbitur, dies examinationis in eo casu tantum vsque eo poterit differri, quoad commode, respectu ad loci distantiam habito, vbiunque fuerit accersiri queat. Et si extra regnum Anglie fuerit, interea aliquis ad locum supplendum per maiorem partem dictorum Electorum surrogetur, et pro rata portione stipendium habeat.

Sit autem examinandi modus eiusmodi. Si lectura Theologica vacaverit, tum Theologorum singuli qui illud munus petunt, quos vel Doctores Theologie, vel Baccalaureos eiusdem facultatis semper esse volumus, primum per facultatem Theologicam examinentur, quid in Scripturis Sacris intelligendis et in Sanctorum Patrum scriptis possint. Deinde singuli eorum qui petunt, diebus per Electores ad eam rem prestitutis, aliquam Scripture partem per predictos Electores sibi assignatam per spatium unius hore in Scholis publicis palam interpretentur.

Quod si lectura Hebraica vel Greca vacaverit, singuli qui petunt in linguarum illarum cognitione similiter per aliquot earum linguarum peritos examinentur, et certis diebus partem alicuius libri aut auctoris in illis linguis scripti per dictos Electores assignatam per spatium unius hore, vt supra de lectura Theologica dictum est, in Scholis publicis palam interpretentur.

Postridie autem quam singuli hoc modo palam prelegerint, predicti Electores publicis in Scholis in vnum convenientes iureiurando se obstringant, in locum illum iam vacantem se neminem, vel gratia, vel munere, vel spe alicuius muneris commotos, sed eum quem conscientia testante maxime ad illud munus idoneum iudicaverint electuros, semota omni sinistra animi affectione, prout sunt et Jesu Seruatori rationem in vltimo die reddituri, et Academie honori et utilitati studentium consulturi.

Atque si forte contigerit vel Nos, vel quempiam ex Successoribus nostris aut Magnatibus huius Regni aliquem per literas ad eiusmodi locum commendare qui non sit ad eum maxime idoneus, (optimum enim semper Deo teste et conscientia preficiendum cupimus,) tum volumus et mandamus, vt Electores sine vilo dictarum literarum respectu prestantissimum* et ad Auditores instruendos accommodatissimum eligant.

Quod si quispiam eorum penes quos eligendi potestas sit forte abfuerit, eius locum suppleat illius Vicarius, eandemque auctoritatem inter eligendum habeat.

Qui omnes inter eligendum potissimum considerent solidam doctrinam, vocis claritatem, pronuntiationem distinctam, et elocutionem.

Et socios Collegii Sancte et Individue Trinitatis predicti, si modo ceteris qui petunt pares sint, semper preferant. Et in quem major pars Electorum consenserit, is pro electo habeatur. Quod si Electores post tria aperta scrutinia hoc modo consentire non possint, tum is electus esto quem Vicecancellarius et Magister dicti Collegii soli nominaverint. Et si forte id temporis Magister dicti Collegii sit Vicecancellarius, tum is sit electus, quem ille et Prepositus Collegii Regalis nominaverint. At si hi duo, id est, Vicecancellarius et Magister dicti Collegii, vel si dictus Magister Vicecancellarius sit, tum nisi dictus Magister et Prepositus Collegii Regalis non de vno aliquo consenserint, is tum pro electo habeatur quem illius Academie Cancellarius (si Episcopus sit) solus nominaverit; verum si Cancellarius Academie illius non sit Episcopus, tum quem Archiepiscopus Cantuariensis solus nominaverit electus esto.

How votes are to be given.

Quem sic electum predicti Electores cum literis ad nos, vel ad successores nostros Reges Anglie mittant, vt nostra vel successorum nostrorum auctoritate confirmetur electio.

Election must be confirmed by the Crown.

Qua re confecta, vt primum electus ille redierit ad Academiam¹, per Magistrum dicti Collegii Sancte et Individue Trinitatis, simul atque iusiurandum coram dicto Magistro et octo Senioribus eiusdem Collegii de hoc statuto seruando dederit, admittatur.

Admission to Office.

Nemo in locum aliquem predictorum Lectorum vnquam eligatur qui sit de heresi probabiliter suspectus, vel infamia notatus, vel qui vxorem duxerit². Qui ad Lecturam Hebraicam eligetur, sit minimum vel Magister Artium, vel Baccalaureus Theologie, vel Doctor eiusdem facultatis; qui autem ad Grecam lecturam assumetur, sit ad minimum vel Magister Artium, vel Baccalaureus Theologie. Doctores omnes, cuiuscunque facultatis fuerint, ab hac Greca lectura omnino excludimus.

E. Scheme of Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

At the Court at Osborne House, Isle of Wight, the 11th day of August 1848: Present The Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council.

Whereas the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England in pursuance of an Act passed in the Session of Parliament held in the 3rd and 4th years of Her Majesty's reign intituled "An Act to carry into effect with certain modifications the fourth Report of the Commissioners of Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues" have duly prepared and laid before Her Majesty in Council a Scheme bearing date the 13th day of July 1848 in the words following :

Scheme prepared by Eccl. Comm. in pursuance of Act of Parl. 3 & 4 Vict.

We the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England in pursuance of an Act passed in the Session of Parliament held in the third and fourth years of your Majesty's reign intituled "An Act to carry into effect certain modifications in the fourth Report of the Commissioners of Ecclesiastical Duties and Revenues" have prepared and now humbly lay before your Majesty in Council the following scheme for annexing canonries in the Cathedral Church of Ely to the Regius Professorships of Hebrew and Greek respectively in the University of Cambridge.

Canonries at Ely to be annexed to Regius Professorships of Hebrew and Greek, namely,

Whereas it was by the said Act enacted that the two Canonries in the Chapter of the Cathedral Church of Ely which should be secondly and thirdly vacant should be permanently annexed and united to the Regius Professorships of Hebrew and Greek respectively in the University of Cambridge ; the two canonries which should be secondly and thirdly vacant.

And whereas the Canonry in the said Cathedral Church of Ely lately held by the Reverend George Leonard Jenyns deceased is now vacant and is the Canonry so secondly vacant and the Canonry which shall next be vacant in the same Church will be the Canonry so thirdly vacant within the meaning of the said recited Act ;

The first of the above canonries is now vacant. The next to be vacated will be the second.

We therefore humbly recommend and propose that the said Canonry in the Cathedral Church of Ely so lately held by the said George Leonard Jenyns deceased shall upon and from the twenty first day next after the day on which any Order of your Majesty in Council for ratifying this Scheme shall be published in the London Gazette and that the Canonry in the same Church which shall next become vacant shall immediately upon the vacancy thereof become and be permanently annexed and united to the Regius Professorship of Hebrew and the Regius Professorship of Greek respectively in the University of Cambridge in the order in which they are herein named and that the person who on such twenty first day shall be the Regius Professor of Hebrew and the person who at the time of the vacancy of such thirdly vacant Canonry shall be the Regius Professor of Greek in the same University or in case the said Professorship or either of them shall at such respective times be vacant then the person next appointed to the one or the other as the case may be and every future Professor of Hebrew and of Greek respectively in the same University shall be entitled to installation as a Canon of the said Cathedral Church and subject to the provisions of the said Act and all other Acts of Parliament shall and may hold the same Canonry with all the rights privileges and emoluments thereunto belonging so long as he shall remain and be such Regius Professor of Hebrew or of Greek as the case may be and no longer.

These two to be annexed to the Professorships of Hebrew and Greek respectively.

Notice
scheme.

And whereas previous to laying the said Scheme before Her Majesty in Council notice thereof was given to the Dean and Chapter of Ely and to the Master of Trinity College Cambridge and to the Rev. Samuel Lee Doctor in Divinity the Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge and to the Reverend James Scholefield the Regius Professor of Greek in the said University of Cambridge and certain objections and observations made and offered by the said Dean of Ely with the concurrence and by the desire of the said Chapter of Ely and also by the Master of Trinity College Cambridge and by the said Reverend Samuel Lee have been laid before Her Majesty in Council together with the said Scheme but no objections or observations have been offered by the said Reverend James Scholefield; And whereas the said scheme has notwithstanding the before mentioned objections and observations been approved by Her Majesty in Council;

fied.

Now therefore Her Majesty in Council by and with the advice of Her said Council is pleased hereby to ratify and confirm the said scheme and to order and direct that the same and every part thereof shall be effectual in Law immediately from and after the time when this order shall have been duly published in the London Gazette pursuant to the said Act and Her Majesty is pleased hereby to direct that this order be forthwith registered by the Registrar of the Diocese of Ely.

Signed

2. MATHEMATICS (HENRY LUCAS).

Mr Henry Lucas, founder of this Professorship, was a member of S. John's College, as he tells us in the passage from his Will quoted below, but there is no evidence that he matriculated. He was admitted to the honorary degree of Master of Arts, 4 February, 1635-36; and was elected one of the representatives of the University in Parliament, 24 October, 1640¹. He died 22 July, 1663.

His Will, dated 11 June, 1663, contains the following bequest to the University:

...And having thus distributed the charities I intended to the poore of my kindred, and withall paid the observances I owe to my friends, I consider in the next place the Vniuersitie of Cambridge where I receaved in the Colledge of Saint John parte of my education and since the honor to be chosen by them twice for one of their burgesses in Parlyament

And therefore to testifie my affection both to the place and learning I doe appoint and ordaine that my executors shall purchase lands to the value of one hundred pounds by the yeare to be employed and setled as a yearely stipend and sallerie for a professor and reader of the mathematicall sciencies in the said Vniuersitie vnder such constitutions and orders as my executors with the advice of the Vice-chancellor and heads of Colledges for the tyme being in the said Vniuersitie shall iudge fittest for the honor of that greate body, and for the improvement and encouragement of that parte of learning which hitherto hath not bin provided for...².

² Copied from the Registry of Wills, Somerset House.

The executors, Robert Raworth and Thomas Buck, lost no time in preparing statutes, which they issued 19 December, 1663 (A). Their work was approved by King Charles the Second in letters patent dated 18 January, 1664 (B), in which some additional regulations are made. By a similar document dated 27 April, 1675 (C) the Professor was dispensed from the obligation of being in Holy Orders.

The executors further purchased an estate in Bedfordshire, the rents of which amounted to the required value, and conveyed it to trustees on behalf of the University, 31 January, 1666-67¹; but, as Isaac Barrow was elected the first Professor 20 February, 1663-64, it is probable that it had passed into their hands before that date.

There is no evidence that this benefaction was formally accepted by the University.

The Council of the Senate framed a new statute for this Professorship, repealing most of the provisions of the deed of endowment, and another for the Lucasian, Plumian, Lowndean, and Sadlerian Professorships in common, 21 October, 1857. These statutes, with some alterations, received the sanction of the Queen in Council 7 March, 1860². By Statute B, cap. 18, the management of the estates is vested in the University.

Lucas has directed his executors to buy land to the value of £100 for the salary of a Professor of Mathematics, and to make statutes for the same. These statutes have been made.

Itaque statuimus imprimis et ordinamus, quod perpetuis futuris temporibus quicquid annui redditus (deductis necessariis expensis,) ex praenotatis terris ad usum praedictum acquisitis vel acquirendis quacun- que justa ratione accreverit, id integre cedet in subsidium et praemium Professoris Mathematici, modo infra dicendo, et sub conditionibus mox exprimendis electi et constituti.

The entire rent to be paid to the Professor.

Quod officium attinet dicti Professoris Mathematici, ut horum studiorum, qua publice, qua privatim, excolendorum ratio habeatur, volumus et statuimus ut dictus Professor teneatur singulis intra unius- cuiusque termini Academici spatium septimanis semel ad minus aliquam Geometriae, Arithmeticae, Astronomiae, Geographiae, Opticae, Staticae, aut alterius alicujus Mathematicae disciplinae partem (pro suo arbitratu, nisi aliter expedire Procancellario visum fuerit) per unius circiter horae spatium legere atque exponere, loco et tempore a Procancellario assignandis, sub poena quadraginta solidorum pro singula lectione omissa, ex stipendio ipsi debito per Procancellarium subtra- hendorum, et Bibliothecae Academicae, pro coemendis libris, vel instru- mentis Mathematicis, applicandorum; nisi ex gravi corporis infirmitate officio suo satisfacere non poterit. Quam tamen excusationem nolumus ultra tres septimanas valere, ut nisi elapsis tribus septimanis alium substituat idoneum Lectorem, Procancellarii iudicio approbandum, sciat sibi pro qualibet lectione praetermissa viginti solidos de stipendio suo per Procancellarium subtrahendos, et usui praedicto applicandos¹.

Number and subjects of his lectures.

Fine for neglect of duty.

What is to be done with the fines.

Quo autem dictus Professor ad munus hoc legendi non perfunctorie praestandum efficacius astringatur, praestiti fideliter ab ipso officii certius extet indicium, et studiorum praesentium fructus quadantenus etiam ad posteros derivetur, statuimus ut dictus Professor semel quot- annis, proxime ante festum Sancti Michaelis non pauciorum quam decem ex illis quas praecedente anno publice habuerit, Lectionum exemplaria nitide descripta Procancellario exhibeat, in publicis Aca- demiae archivis asservanda. Quod si ante tempus praescriptum facere neglexerit, eo usque careat stipendio suo, donec effectum det, et quanta fuerit rata portio temporis postea elapsi, usque dum id perfecerit, tantam reditus sui vel salarii annui partem Procancellario teneatur exsolvere, Bibliothecae Academicae ad usus praedictos applicandam.

The Professor to be at home on certain days to answer questions.

Quinetiam decernimus, ut dictus Professor teneatur duobus per singulas cujusque termini hebdomadas a Procancellario praestituendis diebus, unoque extra terminum die, quodcumque dictus Professor in Academia praesens fuerit, per duas horas itidem praefigendas omnibus illum consulturis vacare, liberum adeuntibus aperto cubiculo accessum praebere, circa propositas ipsi quaestiones, et difficultates haud graviter respondere; in eum finem globos et alia idonea instrumenta Mathematica penes se in promptu habere; inque omnibus ad illud propositum spectantibus studiosorum pro sua virili conatus adjuvare.

To keep mathematical instruments in his rooms.

Quorum aliquod si ultro neglexerit, corripatur a Procancellario, et si de neglecto officio saepius admonitus neququam se emendaverit, poenam incurrat intolerabilis negligentiae inferius decretam.

To be admonished for neglect of duty by Vice-Chancellor.

What residence is required.

Porro ut horum observatio fortius muniatur, et ne quis ex dicti Professoris absentia oboriatur neglectus, statuimus ne dictus Professor intra praefinita terminorum intervalla Academia excedat, aut alibi extra Academiam per sex dies continuos moretur, nisi gravissima de causa per Procancellarium approbanda, idque petita prius et impetrata a Procancellario venia: sin fecerit secus, quanta fuerit rata portio temporis ab egressu suo praeterlapsi, tanta salarii sui parte penitus excidat. Quod si forte diutioris ab Academia absentiae, quae dimidii termini spatium excedat, causa acciderit necessaria, Procancellarii, et duorum (qui Collegiorum Praefecti fuerint) seniorum Doctorum judicio approbata, aliquem interea idoneum substituat, qui suo loco legat, et reliquis muniis fungatur modo supradicto, et sub poena consimili.

May not undertake cure of souls.

Quinimo pari causa, ne dictus Professor ab officii sui debita executione distrahatur, nolumus omnino et prohibemus, ut is ulla quavis Ecclesiastica promotione gaudeat, quae animarum sibi curam adnexam habeat, aut residentiam exigat hisce statutis adversantem; sub poena amissionis, ipso facto, omnis juris, quod in hac sua professione praetendere valeat.

Standing and acquirements.

Quoad personam vero et qualitatem Mathematici Professoris, volumus et injungimus, ut qui huic provinciae admovetur, sit vir bonae faetae, et conversationis honestae, ad minimum Magister Artium, probe eruditus, et Mathematicarum praesertim scientiarum peritia instructus.

Ejus autem nominandi, et eligendi jus ac potestas esto penes nos praedictos Executores venerabilis viri Henrici Lucas, durante nostra utriusque vita, aut uno supremum diem obeunte, penes alterum e nobis, qui in vita superstes permanserit. Postea vero perpetuis futuris temporibus ejus eligendi plena potestas sit penes Procancellarium, et Praefectos omnium Collegiorum dictae Academiae, vel illam partem Praefectorum, qui electioni interfuerint, et peragatur tunc electio in hunc modum.

Postquam Mathematici Professoris locum quacunquē ex causa vacare contigerit, Procancellario incumbet quam cito fieri poterit, schedula scholarum publicarum ostio per octo dies continuos affixa, cum de dicta vacatione, tum de tempore ad futuram electionem destinato significare (tempus autem electionis ultra trigesimum a prima significatione diem extrahi nolumus) quo tempore dicti electores publicis in scholis in unum congregati juramento semetipsos obstringant, seposito omni privato respectu, affectuque sinistro, se nominaturos, et suo comprobaturos suffragio quem, conscientia teste, ex petitoribus, (vel ex iis qui ab electorum quolibet nominantur) maxime secundum prænотatas qualitates idoneum censuerint ad id munus obeundum; is vero, in quem plura suffragia conspiraverint, pro electo habeatur: quod si duobus forte vel pluribus paria obvenerint suffragia, Procancellario jus erit unum ex illis, qui aliis (si quando id contigerit) plura et inter se paria suffragia obtinuerint, pro suo arbitrio eligendi.

Electus autem proximo opportuno tempore admittatur a Procancellario, praestito ante admissionem juramento se munus Professoris Mathematici a dignissimo viro Henrico Lucas in hac Academia institutum juxta ordinationes et statuta officium suum concernentia, pro suo posse fideliter executurum.

Denique, quo praedictus Professor intra debitos honestatis atque modestiae limites contineatur, neque de ulla criminum ultro admissorum impunitate praesumat, statuimus ac decernimus, ut si dictus Professor convictus fuerit vel propria confessione, vel per testes idoneos, vel per evidentiam facti de crimine aliquo graviore (puta de laesa Majestate, haeresi, schismate, homicidio voluntario, furto notabili, adulterio, fornicatione, perjurio) vel si intolerabiliter negligens fuerit, neque poenis superius expressis poterit emendari, per Procancellarium et Collegiorum Praefectos (vel majorem eorum partem) a sua amoveatur Professione, sine spe regrediendi, aut commodum aliquod ulterius percipiendi. Quod si senio, morbo diuturno, aut incurabili impotentia, seu debilitate corporis vel animi fractus, suae Professioni (modo et forma predictis) perficiendae non suffecerit, abrogetur ei Professio per Procancellarium et dictos Praefectos (vel majorem eorum partem) hoc tantum adhibito moderamine, ut illi (sic a Professionis munere non sua culpa dimisso) si tempore Professionis suae laudabiliter se gesserit, neque alias ipse de proprio ad valorem centum librarum annuatim provisum fuerit, tertia pars stipendii remaneat usque ad mortem suam; reliquis partibus successor sit tantisper contentus, integrum post ejus mortem percepturus.

3. ARABIC (SIR THOMAS ADAMS).

In 1631, Mr Thomas Adams, draper, of London, agreed, at the suggestion of his friend and correspondent Mr Abraham Wheelocke¹, to defray the charge of an Arabic Lecture, at £40 per annum, for three years from Lady Day, 1632. At the same time he announced his intention "to endeavour to perpetuate the same publick Lecture by a settled maintenance for ever²." The first lecturer was Mr Wheelocke, with whose work the University was so well pleased, that the Vice-Chancellor and certain Heads of Colleges addressed a letter of thanks to Mr Adams for the selection of so excellent a man (A).

When this letter was written, the Lecture had been continued for four years instead of for three, as first intended; but whether the same arrangement was continued until the death of Wheelocke (in September 1653) or whether it was interrupted by the Civil War, has not been ascertained. After the Restoration Sir Thomas Adams, as he had then become, having been created a Baronet by Charles the Second, 13 June, 1660, drew up a deed of endowment, dated 20 June 1666, by which the Drapers' Company are made trustees of his benefaction, and statutes for the Professorship are prescribed (B). There is no evidence that the University was consulted on this gift. The statutes were confirmed by royal letters patent³, 4 July in the same year. The annual salary therein prescribed, £40, is still regularly paid by the Drapers' Company.

In 1841 the endowment was increased by a legacy (C) of £1000 from the Reverend John Palmer, B.D., Fellow of ¹ Wheelocke graduated from Trinity College: B.A. 1614, M.A. 1618; became fellow of Clare Hall 1619; and proceeded B.D. 1625. He was librarian of the University 1629-53.

A new statute for the Professorship, framed by the Council of the Senate in 1857, and approved by the Commissioners, received the royal assent 16 April, 1861²; and, at the same time, a statute for Sir Thomas Adams' Professorship and other Professorships in common. This has since been repealed³. The clause in the deed of foundation, requiring the Professor to be ad minimum magister artium, was repealed by a statute which received the royal assent 18 July, 1894⁴.

C. Extract from the Will of the Rev. John Palmer, B.D.

I give to the University of Cambridge the sum of one thousand pounds sterling for the perpetual augmentation of Sir Thomas Adams' Professorship of Arabic, subject to the following conditions:

First, that the Professor shall provide a book in which, at the end of every public Lecture, each student of that language shall write his name and College with his own hand;

Second, that the Vice-Chancellor, whenever application shall be made to him for the payment of this augmentation, shall inspect the said book and satisfy himself that the Professor has fulfilled bonâ fide the duties enjoined by the oath of his admission;

Third, that the Vice-Chancellor, if he be not satisfied that the Professor has fulfilled his duties as aforesaid, shall not pay this augmentation for that year, but shall retain the same and all other augmentations forfeited in the same manner until the sums so accruing can be invested conveniently from time to time in the Public Funds for the further perpetual augmentation of the same Professorship².

4. MORAL THEOLOGY (JOHN KNIGHTBRIDGE).

The Reverend John Knightbridge, fellow of Peterhouse¹, and Rector of Spofforth in Yorkshire, by Will dated 2 December, 1677, made the following provisions:

I give unto the Master and Fellowes of Peterhouse in Cambridge, as feofees in trust and upon the condition afterwards exprest all that my fee farme rent issuing out of the Mannor of Heslington near Yorke, as also an house in the Minorys, whereof one Cooke is now my Tenant, as also seaven pounds per Annum out of the land I have lying in Chelmsford, knowne by the name of little Vinters. All these I give unto the said Master and Fellowes, upon condition that they pay unto a Professor in Moral Theology or Casuisticall Divinity the sum of fifty pounds yearely. Provided allwayes that the Professor aforesaid be chosen by the Vice-Chancellour of Cambridge for the time being, the Regius and Margaret Professors, and the Master of Peterhouse for the time being, and if it should happen that there should be discord in the election that is to say two for one and two for another, then the Master of Peterhouse shall have the casting voice. And my will is the Professor to be chosen shall bee of the age of fifty yeares, and Doctor or at least Batchellour in Divinity, and my will is that the Professour so chosen shall read five Latine Lectures in the Publique Schooles of Cambridge in every terme, and shall at the end of every terme exhibite a copy of the said five Lectures fairely written to the Vice-Chancellor for the time being, to be either printed or kept in the Publique Library of the University as shall be thought meet. And my will is that if the Professor so chosen shall neglect to read any of the said five Lectures every terme, without some reasonable cause to be approved of in writing under the hands of the major parte of the said Electors, then it shall be lawfull for the Master and Fellowes of Peterhouse to withdraw the said maintenance to their owne use till the said Professor do read the said Lectures as is above directed².

Mr Knightbridge died in December, 1677, when it was discovered that the Will and Codicils were invalid to pass freehold estate, as his signature was not attested by any witness. But his brother and heir at law, Mr Anthony Knightbridge, being desirous of carrying out his intentions, confirmed the various devises in the Will. In the next place the trustees were unable to find a fit person to undertake the Professorship according to the terms of the Will. Application was therefore made to the Court of Chancery, and a decree was obtained, 18 July 1682, allowing the Professor to be of the age of forty years, and to deliver four lectures in each term in lieu of five¹. Shortly afterwards the Rev. Tho. Smoult, D.D., Fellow of S. John's College, was elected², and retained the Professorship till his death in 1707.

In 1700 (10 October) the Senate decided by Grace that the name of John Knightbridge should be added to the benefactors of the University³.

Professor Smoult, by Will dated 29 September, 1703, made the following bequest:

Item I give three hundred pounds to purchase land or any rents of that value to be annexed and joynd to the settlement made by Dr John Knightbridge now kept in St Peter's College for the use and maintenance of a Casuist Reader or Professor in Practical Theology the land or purchase to be settled upon the same or other trustees at the discretion of my executor⁴.

This sum was laid out in the purchase of several pieces of land of copyhold tenure; and it was decided by Grace (11 June, 1713) that the name of the donor should be added to the benefactors of the University⁵.

In 1839 (6 July) the Court of Chancery decided that the Professor was entitled to the whole rents and profits of the trust premises⁶.

Interesting information respecting the sale of a portion of the property and other matters concerning the trust, is contained in a decree of the Court of Chancery dated 4 June, 1847; but, as the document is readily accessible⁷, it need not be reprinted.

In 1857 (15 December) a new statute was accepted by the Senate, further relaxing the conditions of election, and vesting the management of the Trust Estate and Funds in the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars. This statute was confirmed by the Queen in Council 16 April, 1861; and in 1873 (18 July) a decree of the Court of Chancery¹ vested the real estate and the funds, in the University.

By Statute B, Chap. XV, it is enacted that the Professor shall be elected in accordance with the provisions of Chap. IX, and that the Professorship shall in future be designated as a Professorship of Moral Philosophy.

A Professor of Music was first appointed by a Grace of the Senate, 2 July, 1684, expressed in the following terms:

Cum par sit et æquum, atque etiam e dignitate Academiae, ut elegantissima facultas Musicae suum quoque haud secus ac cæteræ, Professorem habeat: Placet Vobis ut Senatûs auctoritate constituatur Musices Professor, atque ut ornatissimus vir Dr Staggins hac vestra gratia in illud munus ritè electus nomine et titulo publici vestri in Musica Professoris insigniatur².

No stipend was assigned to Professor Staggins, nor to any of his successors, until 1868, when £100 was allowed to Professor Sterndale Bennett, "so long as he continues Professor of Music³."

Professor Bennett died 1 February, 1875, and in the interval between his death and the election of a successor the Council of the Senate issued a report, proposing, among other things, "that a stipend of £200 per annum should be assigned to the next Professor of Music." This was confirmed by Grace 4 March, 1875⁴. The same amount is granted by the existing ordinance, confirmed by the Senate 24 November, 1887. The Professor will in future be elected according to Statute B, Chap. XV.

The first Professor of Chemistry was elected by the following Grace, which passed the Senate, 10 February, 1702-3:

Cum Johannes Franciscus Viganus Veronensis Artem Chymicam multa cum laude (non sine magno studiosorum emolumento) per annos viginti hic apud nos exercuerit; Placeat Vobis ut dictus Johannes Franciscus Viganus titulo Professoris Chymicæ in Academia Cantabrigiensi coonestetur.

Placeat etiam ut super hac concessione vestra literas habeat vestras testimoniales muneris sui Professorii sigillo vestro communi sigillatas¹.

In 1716 (10 October) a building called the New Press, opposite to Queens' College, was assigned to the joint use of the Professors of Chemistry and Anatomy², which the former retained until 1784, and the latter until 1832³.

No stipend was assigned to the Professor until 1766, when Richard Watson, M.A. (Professor 1764-73) obtained a stipend of £100 a year from the Crown, through the intervention of Lord Rockingham⁴. This stipend, with others, was annually voted by Parliament, and paid by the Treasury, until the Cambridge University Act, 1856, became law. This contains a provision (Chap. XLVII) that the Stamp Duties on Matriculations and Degrees are remitted, but that provision is to be made by the University for paying the above salaries. The Senate therefore pledged itself, by Grace, 10 December, 1857, that the following sums, heretofore paid by the Treasury, should in future be paid by the Vice-Chancellor:

Cum capite 88^o, sect. 47^o, legis anno Victoriae reginae 19^o et 20^o late statutum fuerit ut aboleatur vectigal pro impressione, quod nunc temporis fisco pendendum est ab iis qui vel in matriculam academiae vel ad gradus admittendi sunt, quum primum sustentandis oneribus, quibus hactenus subventum est pecuniarum ope ex Parlamento consulto, quotannis facto, a dominis aerarii erogatarum, ita provisum fuerit ut

In 1857 (15 December) a new statute for the Professorship was confirmed; and in 1861 (8 May) the Council of the Senate recommended that the stipend of the Professor be increased to £300 a year. This was confirmed 30 May. In 1871 (30 January) it was recommended that his stipend be increased to £500 a year. This recommendation was confirmed 9 February, 1871.

The Professorship is now governed by Statute B, Chaps. IX, XI, XV.

1707.

The first Professor of Anatomy was elected by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 12 June, 1707:

Cum Georgius Rolfe varias Anatomias in hac Academia perfecerit summa cum laude in usum Studiosæ Juventutis optimum Placeat Vobis ut Professoris Anatomici Titulum propter singularem ejus in ista facultate peritiam Honoris ergo consequatur¹.

In 1857 (15 December) a statute, since repealed, was made for this Professorship. It received the royal assent 16 April, 1861².

In 1861 (8 May) a Syndicate appointed 7 March in that year recommended that the Professor should in future "receive from the University Chest...such a sum as will augment [his] Endowment Stipend³ to £300 per annum." This recommendation was confirmed by Grace 30 May, 1861.

In 1865 (12 June) a Syndicate reported in favour of dividing this Professorship, and appointing: (1) a Professor of Anatomy with (2) a Demonstrator in Anatomy; (3) a Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy. These recommendations were confirmed by Grace, 8 February, 1866.

The Professorship is now governed by Statute B, Chaps. IX, XI, XV.

8. MODERN HISTORY (REGIUS).

In 1724 (16 May) King George the First sent a letter to the University (A) in which he states his intention to appoint a "Person of Sober Conversation and prudent Conduct, skilled in Modern History and in the knowledge of Modern Languages, to be Our Professor of Modern History," with a stipend of £400 per annum, out of which he "shall be obliged to maintain, with sufficient salaries, two Persons at least well qualified to teach and instruct in writing and speaking the said languages"; and further, that he intends to nominate twenty scholars, each of whom "shall be obliged to learn two at least of the said languages." A yearly report is to be sent to the King by the Professor and the teachers, giving an account of the progress made by each scholar.

On the reception of this letter a Congregation was held (18 May) and a reply (B) was agreed to, which was directed on the following day to be engrossed, sealed, and transmitted to the King.

The letters patent (C) founding the Professorship on the lines indicated in the above letter, are dated 28 September in the same year; and, 20 October following, by an instrument under the privy signet, the King appointed Samuel Harris, M.A., Fellow of Peterhouse, to be the first Professor.

The twenty scholars mentioned in the letters patent were appointed by two similar instruments signed by the King and countersigned by Lord Townshend; the first 15 on February 27, 1724-25, and the remaining five on May 31¹.

¹ These documents are in the Registry of the University, Vol. xxxix. 14. 8, 9.

Professor Harris makes his first report to the Duke of Newcastle for transmission to the King, 26 October, 1725; and encloses a more detailed account of the progress made by the scholars in modern languages signed by the two teachers, and dated 14 October in the same year. No record of the appointment of these teachers, Fr. Masson, and H. B. Piazza, has been preserved. The reports sent in were evidently satisfactory, for Harris was reappointed by an instrument dated 18 November, 1725; and again in the following year, by a similar instrument dated 28 September, 1726. A second report, giving a further account of the progress made by the scholars, is dated 3 April, 1727¹, and five more scholars were appointed 30 April in the same year.

The King died 11 June, 1727. His successor, by letters patent, dated 11 April, 1728 (D), expresses his intention of continuing the foundation with all his father's provisions; but no more scholars have been appointed, and the Professors retain their office "during His Majesty's pleasure."

A new statute for this Professorship received the Royal assent 16 April, 1861². It repealed the directions contained in the above letters patent, except so far as relates to the appointment of the Professor by the Crown.

A. Letter of King George the First to the University, 1724.

Endorsed: To Our Trusty and Welbeloved the Vice-Chancellor of Our University of Cambridge, to be communicated to the Senate there.

George R.

Trusty and Welbeloved, We greet you well!

We being greatly desirous to favour and encourage Our two Universitys, those ancient and laudable Nurserys of Piety and Learning; and to enable them more effectually to answer the end of their Institution by sending forth constant Supplys of learned and able Men to serve the Publick both in Church and State; And having observed that no Encouragement or Provision has hitherto been made in either of the Said Universitys for the Study of Modern History or Modern Languages, the knowledge of which is highly necessary towards completely qualifying the Youth committed to their Care for Several Stations both in Church and State to which they may be called; and having Seriously weighed the prejudice that has accrued to the Said Universitys from this Defect, Persons of Foreign Nations being often employed in the Education and Tuition of Youth both at home and in their Travels; and great numbers of young Nobility and Gentry being either sent abroad directly from School or taken away from the Universitys before the Course of their Studys can be there compleated, and Opportunitys frequently lost to the Crown of employing and encouraging Members of the two Universitys by conferring on them such Employment both at home and abroad, as necessarily require a competent Skill in writing and Speaking the Modern Languages.

In order therefore to remedy these and the like Inconveniencys, We have determined to appoint two Persons of Sober Conversation and prudent Conduct, of the Degree of Master of Arts or Bachelour of Laws, or of Some higher Degree in one of the Said Universitys, Skilled in Modern History and in the knowledge of Modern Languages, to be Nominated by Us, to be Our Professors of Modern History, one for the University of Cambridge, and the other for that of Oxford, who Shall be obliged to read Lectures in the Publick Schools, at Such times as shall hereafter be appointed;

And We have further determined that each of the Said Professors shall have a Stipend of Four Hundred Pounds per Annum, and out of the Said Stipend shall be obliged to maintain with sufficient Salarys, in the University where he shall be established, two Persons at least, well qualified to teach and instruct in writing and Speaking the Said Languages; which Said Teachers shall be under the Direction of the Professors respectively, and shall¹ [be obliged to instruct] gratis in the Modern Languages [twenty] Scholars of each University, to be nominated by Us, and each Scholar so nominated shall be obliged to learn two at least of the Said Languages, both the Professors and Teachers taking especial Care that the times and hours for the instructing and teaching the Said Scholars be so ordered, as not to interfere with those appointed for their Academical Studys, which Professors and Teachers shall also be obliged once every Year to transmit an attested Account of the Progress made by each Scholar committed to their Care to Our Principal Secretarys of State, to be laid before Us, that We may encourage the diligence and Application of such amongst them, as shall have qualified themselves for Our Service, by giving them suitable Employments either at home or abroad, as occasion shall offer.

And Our Royal Will and Pleasure is, that you forthwith, upon the Receipt hereof, call a Congregation, in order to communicate these Our Royal Intentions to the University. And So We bid you farewell. Given at Our Court at St James's the 16th Day of May 1724 in the Tenth Year of Our Reign.

By His Majesty's Command

TOWNSHEND².

B. Thanks of the University to the King, 1724.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We your Majesty's most dutiful and Loyal Subjects, the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of Your University of Cambridge, having been honoured with Your Majesty's Royal Letter, which has been read to us in full Senate, Intimating your gracious and Princely intentions of establishing both in this and Your other University a New Professorship of Modern History and Modern Languages, with an Appointment so ample as Welnigh to equal the Stipends of all our other Professors put together, beg leave to approach Your Sacred Person, with the sincerest assurances of Duty Loyalty and Gratitude, which such unparallel'd Munificence requires.

Your Majestie, like a Common Father that is Watchfull for the Welfare of his Children, has Wisely observ'd where our greatest defect lay, and where Your relief could be most seasonably apply'd. We have for many years, with grief observ'd, and may now with assurance venture to speak out our grievance, since Your Majesty has been pleased to enter so far into our cause, as to join in the same complaint, that foreign tutors have had so large a share in the Education of our Youth of Quality both at home and in their travels, and we are thoroughly sensible that the Reason, why they have been so employ'd, in Preference to Men of far Superiour Learning of our own country, has been the Want of proper helps towards the attaining those Accomplishments in our Universities, for which Your Majestie is now making so honourable Provision, but we are now firmly perswaded that when Your Majesties noble design shall have taken effect, when there shall be a sufficient number of Academical Persons well vers'd in the knowledge of Foreign courts, and well instructed in their respective languages, when a familiarity with the living tongues shall be superadded to that of the dead ones, when the solid learning of antiquity shall be adorned and set off with a skillful habit of conversing in the Languages that now flourish & both be accompanied with English Probity, Our Nobility & Gentry will be under no Temptation of sending for persons from foreign Countries, to be entrusted with the education of their Children: That the appearance of an English Gentleman in the Courts of Europe with a Governour of his own Nation, will not be so rare, & uncommon as it has hitherto been, & that Your two Universitys thus refin'd & made more compleatly serviceable to the Education of Youth by Your Majesties most Judicious & well directed as well as liberal Benefaction, will be able to furnish You with a constant supply of Persons every Way qualified for the Management of such weighty affairs & negotiations as Your Majesties Occasions may require.

We most heartily beseech the Almighty to prosper this, and all Your great and Glorious Undertakings, that you may long live & reign till you have received the fullest Conviction that your Royal Purpose has not been frustrated, but that this new Institution has Proved (as Your Princely Wisdom intended it should) a real & National Blessing...¹

In Return for such repeated obligations we shall not fail to put up our incessant Prayers to God for the Preservation of Y^r Majestie & your Royal Family, & shall always endeavour to contribute in the best manner we are able to the Tranquillity, Peace, & good order of your Government.

9. ARABIC: THE LORD ALMONER'S READER OR PROFESSOR.

It is a matter of University tradition that the first Lord Almoner who assigned a stipend to a Reader in Arabic was Lancelot Blackburn, Bishop of Exeter 1717-24, and Archbishop of York from 1724 to his death 23 March, 1743; and that he appointed David Wilkins to be the first Reader in 1724¹.

It is, however, certain that the foundation had been projected at an earlier date, for a Royal Warrant, dated 12 August, 1715, begins as follows:

An Establishment of certain Annual Pensions and annuities which Our Pleasure is shall commence from the 24th day of June, 1714, and be paid and accounted payable Quarterly during Our Pleasure.... Other Pensions or charities granted or continued by her late Majesty Queen Anne. To the Lord Almoner...for an Arabick Professor at Oxford and at Cambridge, each 50*l.*—100*l.*²

¹ Cooper's Annals, iv. 186. In confirmation of this statement Mr Cooper quotes a poem signed S. H., i.e. Samuel Hadderton, Fellow of Trinity College and University Librarian, in the collection entitled Luctus in obitum serenissimi Georgi I [etc.], fol., 1727, sig. G. After praising the liberality of George Lewis, Archdeacon of Meath, who had presented a collection of Oriental MSS., coins, and curiosities, the writer says:

“Jamque Eborum Præsul, Tibi, Georgi, consulit alter
Lewisioque suam jungere gaudet opem.”

A note upon this passage tells us: “Archiep. Eb. qui nunc est, et Regi ab Eleemos. applicand. curavit 50 libr. p. Ann. usui Lectoris Ling. Arab. cui linguæ discendæ multi omnium ordinum nunc gnaviter incumbunt, hac re excitati.”

² See an article signed Hubert Hall in The Athenæum, 16 Nov. 1889, p. 673. In the Evidence addressed to Her Majesty's Commissioners, 1850, p. 92, the Lord Almoner's Professor states: “In answer to my inquiries addressed to the Almonry Office, I am informed by the Secretary, that after a careful search he finds only that in the year 1724 the two Professors (one in each University) were in the payment of that office, under the authority of the Lord Almoner; and that there are no records whatever anterior to that year, nor anything to show their origin.”

The appointment is made by the Lord Almoner for the time being. The following extracts from one of the Patents of Office will be found interesting :

To all Christian People to whom these presents shall come, The... Lord High Almoner to the Queen's Most Excellent Majesty, Greeting.

Know ye that by virtue of my said office of High Almoner, I have nominated constituted and appointed...A. B. to be Professor and Lecturer of the Arabic Language in the...University [of Cambridge]... and I do as far as in me lies authorize the said A. B. to receive possess and enjoy the salary or stipend issuing and payable out of the Lord High Almoner's Office and hitherto customarily paid to the Professor and Lecturer of the Arabic Language in the said University for the time being....

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my Hand and Seal of my said Office of Lord High Almoner....

The salary is £50, less fees, paid direct to the Professor by the Lord Almoner.

The first Professor of Botany was elected by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 10 November, 1724 :

Cum Ricardus Bradley, Societatis Regalis Londinensis Socius, in re Herbaria se peritissimum exhibuerit, atque in horto Botanico instruendo et exornando et sumptus et operam impendere sponderit in summum hujus Academiae commodum decusque Placeat Vobis ut professoris Botanici titulum honoris ergo apud vos consequatur¹.

On Bradley's death, 5 November, 1732, the Senate decided (Grace 23 January, 1732-33) that another person should be elected in his room²; and John Martyn, who had entered at Emmanuel College in 1730, was chosen (8 February, 1732-33) by the Senate, *more burgensium*³. After his resignation, 18 November, 1761, his son Thomas Martyn, M.A., Fellow of Sidney Sussex College, was elected in the same manner, 2 February, 1762¹. In 1793 (13 Sept.) he received a patent from King George the Third, with an annual salary of £200². Martyn died 3 June, 1825.

These three elections had taken place without previous nomination by the Heads of Colleges, and, in anticipation of Martyn's death, a legal opinion was taken (in 1816) as to what course ought to be pursued in the future, especially in view of the fact that in the patent the Professor was styled by the Crown "our public Professor or Reader of Botany." Counsel advised that no change of procedure was necessary³.

On Martyn's death John Stevens Henslow, M.A. Joh., and three other persons came forward as candidates, but no election was held, as the difficulty about the right of nomination (see MINERALOGY) had not been settled. He however received a patent from the Crown, dated 26 July, 1825, in virtue of which he became King's Reader⁴.

In 1857 (13 December) the Senate accepted a new statute for the Professorship, which provided that in future the Professor should be chosen by the persons whose names are on the Electoral Roll of the University. This statute was confirmed by the Queen in Council 16 April, 1861. It has since been repealed.

The Professor's stipend was raised to £300 a year by Grace 30 May, 1861, confirming a report of a Syndicate appointed "to consider what Professorships should receive an additional Stipend."

The Professorship is now governed by Statute B.

11. GEOLOGY (JOHN WOODWARD).

John Woodward, M.D.¹, by Will dated 1 October, 1727 (A), directed his executors to buy, and convey to the University of Cambridge, an estate which should produce £150 a year, out of which sum £100 was to be paid to a Lecturer who should expound such of Dr Woodward's doctrines as he thought proper to select. He also bequeathed to the University two cabinets of English fossils marked A, B, with their catalogues.

Dr Woodward died 25 April, 1728, and in the following September the two cabinets reached Cambridge, but the first Professor, Conyers Middleton, D.D., was not elected until 13 July, 1731. The new foundation was not accepted by Grace, but the University was evidently well aware of its importance, for by Grace, 26 February, 1728-29, they agreed to purchase for a sum not exceeding £1000 the two other cabinets mentioned in the Will, containing respectively foreign fossils and additional English fossils. In 1731 the executors bought an estate of the required value near Beccles in Suffolk; and in 1734 the University provided accommodation for the cabinets by cutting off from the north end of the Arts School a space about fifteen feet in length, now the Novel Room of the Library.

In 1857 (15 December) the University accepted a new statute for the Professorship, which was confirmed by the Queen in Council, 16 April, 1861².

A. Extract from the Will of John Woodward.

In the name of God Amen. I John Woodward, Doctor of Physic and Professor of the same in Gresham College in London...do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament in manner and form following that is to say:

¹ He received this degree by diploma from the Abp. of Canterbury 4 Feb. 1694-5, and was admitted to the same at Cambridge by Grace 28 June, 1695, when he became a member of Pembroke College. The diploma is in the Registry, Box M. 1. For further information respecting Woodward and his benefaction see Life of Sedgwick, i. pp. 166-188.

Imprimis I resign my Soul into the merciful Hands of God who gave it, and my Body unto the Earth to be buried by my Executors herinafter named in the Abbey Church of Westminster, desiring that my Funeral be with as little Pomp and Expences as may well be.

Item, I give devise and bequeath to my said Executors...all my Household Goods my Roman Urns Lamps and other Antiquities my foreign Fossils in my Cabinet marked Letter D, and my additional English Fossils in my Cabinet marked Letter C; and the said two Cabinets with the Catalogues of the said Fossils that I have drawn up and also all my Books, Jewels, and Plate, my ready money my money in the South Sea Company...and all other my Personal Estate of what Nature kind or Quality soever (except my two Cabinets marked A and B herinafter otherwise given and bequeathed) in special trust that they employ and dispose of the same for the performance of this my Will provided nevertheless that if my said Executors shall not think proper to sell my Foreign Fossils and additional English Fossils in my said two Cabinets marked D and C then my Will is that in such case they shall and may have power and authority to give away the same or cause them to be repositd and kept in such place and manner as they shall think fitting...¹.

Disposition of his collections, and especially his cabinets of fossils.

My Will is, that my Executors, so soon as conveniently may be, do purchase lands, tenements, and hereditaments in fee-simple, scituate lying and being in some good part of South Britain, of the yearly value of one hundred and fifty pounds; and that after such purchase made, they do convey and assure the same to and upon the University of Cambridge: I mean, the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of that University, for ever, in such manner and form, and by such proper terms and conveyances, as counsel learned in the law shall for that purpose advise and direct.

Lands of 150 pounds per Ann. to be purchased and conveyed to the University:

The sum of one hundred pounds thereout to be paid yearly and every year to a Lecturer, to be chosen, for the purposes herein-after specified, by my executors, the survivors or survivor of them; and from and after their decease, by the Lord Archbishop of the Province in which the said University of Cambridge is, who, it is to be presumed, besides his favouring of learning and all useful knowledge, will think himself under obligation to have special regard to this University; and, for still the same reason, by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese in which the said University is, by the President of the College of Physicians, and by the President of the Royal Society of London, by the two Representatives, or Members from time to time elected and serving in Parliament for the said University, by the whole Senate, (that is to say) the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor of that University, the of which 100 pounds to the Lecturer. Lecturer to be chosen by the Executors, and afterwards by the Archbishop, etc.

¹ In the omitted clauses the testator gives directions for the sale of his household goods etc., the payment of debts and legacies, and the collection of money due to him.

Provosts Masters and Heads of the several Colleges and Halls for the time being ; the Doctors, Masters of Arts, and all who have a right of voting for Members of Parliament, representing the said University ; or a majority of the above specified illustrious and excellent persons : And it is my request to them, that in consideration of the benefit which may thence accrue to the publick, they will be pleased to take upon them the care and guardianship hereof ; and that they will make choice only of such men for reading the Lectures herein-after specified and directed, as have distinguished themselves by their virtue their learning judgment and great abilities. And in case it shall happen that by reason of age, sickness, or absence from the University, the said Archbishop, Bishop, Chancellor, or either of the two Members of Parliament, or of the two Presidents above-mentioned, cannot be present and give their attendance at the time that any election is to be made, it is my will and intention that any of these electors, so absent, may appoint a proxy to assist and give a vote at that election.

Archbishop, Bishop, Chancellor, two Presidents, and Members of Parliament may vote by proxy.

Lecturer to be chosen within two months after each vacancy.

And I Will that the first Lecturer be chosen as soon as may well be after my decease, and that all the succeeding Lecturers be from time to time chosen after each vacancy or removal of the predecessor or former Lecturer, within the space of two months at furthest ; the Vice-Chancellor causing publick notice to be timely given by billets fixed up in the Publick Schools, and by advertisements printed in the Gazette, or some other like authentick publick newspaper.

To be a Bachelor.

And my Will is that none be chose but Batchellours, or men that have not been married, and that in case of the marriage of any of the said Lecturers afterwards, his election shall be thereby immediately made void, lest the care of a wife and children should take the Lecturer too much from study, and the care of the Lecture.

Layman be preferred to a Divine.

And my Will further is, that if a Divine shall at any time happen to be Competitor with a Layman for this Lectureship, in case the latter shall be as well qualified, he shall ever have preference of the former ; not out of any disrespect to the Clergy (for whom I have ever had a particular regard), but because there is in this kingdom better provision, and a much greater number of Preferments for the Clergy, than for men of learning among the laity.

Lecturers to be subject to orders.

And my Will is, that all such Lecturers shall from time to time be further subject to such rules orders and directions (not interfering with those herein-after particularly specified and sett forth) as the electors, or a majority of them shall from time to time think fitt to make.

To have no other preferment.

And my Will is, that no one shall at any time be chosen Lecturer who then hath any Preferment, Office or Post whatever that shall any ways so employ and take up his time as to interfere with his duty herein sett forth, and in particular that shall require his attendance out of the University. And in case any of the Lecturers after he is chosen shall accept of any such Preferment Office or Post, his election shall be thereby made void, and another chosen in his room.

And it is further my intent and meaning, and I do hereby will and order, that such Lecturer from time to time so to be appointed and chosen by my executors the survivors and survivor of them, so long as they or any of them shall be living, and afterwards to be chosen by a majority of those excellent and illustrious persons above-mentioned, shall reside in the said University of Cambridge and never be absent from the same above the space of two months in the year, and those to be in the long Vacation in the summer.

Must reside, and never be absent above two Months in the long Vacation.

And that the said Lecturer shall there read four Lectures every year, at such times and in such place of the said University as the majority of the said electors shall appoint, on some one or other of the subjects treated of in my Natural History of the Earth, my Defence of it against Dr. Camerarius, my Discourse of Vegetation, or my State of Physick, at his discretion; but in such language, viz. English or Latin, as shall be appointed from time to time by the Chancellor Vice-Chancellor Provosts and Masters of the several Colleges and Halls belonging to the said University; the said Lectures, or at least one of them, at the Lecturer's own free choice and election, to be published in print every year.

Must read four Lectures every year, one of which to be printed.

Item I give and bequeath my original Collection of English Fossils contained in two of my Cabinets marked with the several letters A and B, and also the said two Cabinets with the Catalogues of the said Fossils which I have drawn up, to the said University of Cambridge. And my Will is, that as soon as may well be after my Decease, my executors or the survivor of them, do cause and procure the same to be lodged and repositied in such proper Room or Apartment as shall be allotted by the said University, to the satisfaction of my executors or the survivor of them. And my Will further is, that the said Lecturer from time to time to be chosen, shall have the care and custody of all the said Fossils, and the catalogues of them, and that he do live and reside in or near the said Apartment so to be allotted for repositing the said Fossils as above-mentioned in the said University; and that he be actually ready and attending in the Room where they are repositied, from the hour of nine of the clock in the morning to eleven, and again from the hour of two in the afternoon till four, three days in every week (except during the two months in the long Vacation, wherein he is allowed to be absent as above-mentioned) to shew the said Fossils gratis, to all such curious and intelligent persons as shall desire a view of them for their information and instruction; and that he himself shall be always present when they are shewn, and take care that none of the said Fossils be mutilated or lost.

Two Cabinets marked A and B given to the University.

The Lecturer to have the custody of them, and to have an apartment near them, and be ready to shew them 3 Days in the week, gratis.

And I request and desire the said Chancellor Vice-Chancellor Provosts and Masters of the several Colleges and Halls, or a majority of them, that before the admission of every Lecturer, and likewise

Two inspectors to examine once a year the collection of Fossils, of which catalogues to be kept in the Public Library.

The inspectors to have five pounds apiece for their pains.

Lecturer must give security.

To be allowed 10 pounds per ann. for experiments, correspondences, &c.

Accountable to the electors for it.

Ten pounds per ann. for a dinner first of May.

The remainder to pay taxes, &c. to the use of the University.

afterwards once every year, they do appoint two discreet and careful persons who shall inspect and examine the said Collections of Fossils, and compare them with the catalogues; of which I will, that besides those to be kept by the Lecturer, there be copies repositied in the Publick Library of the said University, for greater security that the said Fossils be preserved with great care and faithfulness; and that the said two persons to be appointed to inspect and examine the same, shall give under their hands a report of their examination thereof, their comparing them with the said catalogues, and the state and condition in which they are kept, and whether any of them are lost or mutilated; for which their care and trouble, I desire and direct that five pounds apiece be annually paid them out of the said estate in fee above directed to be purchased and conveyed to the uses and trusts of this my Will.

And to the end that the said Fossils may be preserved and kept with the greater care and faithfulness, it is my will that the Lecturer and keeper of them from time to time shall before his admission give such security as my executors and the survivor of them, and after the decease of such survivor, the succeeding electors shall think proper.

And I further will that the sum of ten pounds shall be yearly and every year paid to the Lecturer above-mentioned, out of the rents of the said estate in fee, to be laid out and employed by him, from time to time, in making observations and experiments, keeping correspondence with learned men on the subjects directed to be treated of in the Lectures, and in procuring additions to the Collections of Fossils, or in which of them each Lecturer for the time being shall think fitt; he rendering annually to such of the electors as shall be in the University an account in writing in which of the ways the said sum of ten pounds hath been disbursed and employed.

And I further will and direct, that out of the annual rents of the said estate in fee, the sum of ten pounds annually for ever be appropriated and allowed for a Dinner on the first day of May; or if this fall on a Sunday, then on the second day of May, for the said Lecturer, two Inspectors or Examiners, and the said Chancellor Vice-Chancellor Provosts and Masters of the Colleges and Halls of the said University; to the end that they may then confer and consider of the methods to improve the design and use of the said donation by me hereby made. And I greatly wish that these things that are of so much use and importance, and which I have with great diligence and expence collected, may by this settlement, the care of the electors, and the diligence of the Lecturer, be made serviceable to the setting forth the wisdom of God in the works of Nature; to the advancement of useful knowledge, and to the profit and benefit of the publick.

And it is my further will and intention, that the surplus and residue of the annual rents of the said estate in fee, after the salary to the Lecturer, the ten pounds per annum to the two inspectors or examiners, the ten pounds per annum for correspondence and experiments, and the ten pounds per annum for the dinner first paid and satisfied; I say that all the surplus and residue of the said annual rents shall go and belong to the said University for ever, for the payment of taxes, or any other necessary contingencies that may happen. But in case any surplus should remain, after such taxes and contingencies paid, that then such surplus be disposed of yearly and every year, in such manner as the said University shall think fit; but in hopes, that for the honour of the University, and the benefit that will thence accrue to the publick, if the design of this donation be rightly carried on, that the said University will be pleased to dispose of the said residue in making experiments and observations, in correspondence, in natural collections, books, or other things that may serve to the promoting the good ends of this donation. But in case the taxes should at any time amount to more than the said sum of twenty pounds, being the residue of the said sum of one hundred and fifty pounds hereby bequeathed to the said University; then my will and intention is, that the Lecturer shall pay such overplus of the said taxes out of his said salary.

If the taxes rise above 20 pounds per ann. the Lecturer to pay the overplus.

And further it is my will and intention, that any Lecturer not doing his duty, and acquitting himself rightly to their satisfaction, shall be removable at the discretion of the electors or the majority of them, and another chosen in his place; his salary to commence from the quarter-day next ensuing the death or removal of his predecessor.

Lecturer failing in his duty removable.

And I do hereby will order and direct that the above-mentioned salary of one hundred pounds per annum, herein-before limited and appointed as a provision for the said Lecturer, be paid and satisfied to him from time to time by four even quarterly payments, at and upon the four usual feast days or days of payment in the year (that is to say); the Feast of the Annunciation of the Blessed Virgin Mary, the Nativity of Saint John the Baptist, the Feast of Saint Michael the Archangel, and the Nativity of Christ; and in case of default of payment of the said sum of one hundred pounds per annum for his salary, and the sum of ten pounds per annum, for the uses above-mentioned out of the said lands or estate so purchased and conveyed as above specified, to the Lecturer to whom it shall become due, by the space of six months, after any of the days of payment whereon it is directed to be paid as aforesaid, it shall and may be lawful for that Lecturer to distrain for such arrears of his said salary; and if there be not sufficient by such distress, to pay himself the said arrears, that he shall and may sue for them, and enter upon the said estate settled for support of the Lecturer, and hold and keep the same till his arrears be paid, or till he accept another place or office, or be absent from the University, or neglect to read or print the Lectures as is herein for that purpose particularly specified.

Lecturer to be paid quarterly.

If not paid in six months may distrain.

And as to my own private writings and manuscripts relating to the natural history of the Earth, to Physic and all other subjects that I have written upon, I should have been greatly pleased that the times had favoured and my Fortunes and Affairs permitted me to have finished and published them in order to which I have so long studied and laboured with the utmost diligence and faithfulness; but as things have fallen out I can now only leave them to be disposed of by my executors in such manner as they in their discretion shall think fit.

But for such others of my writings as I have at any time in my life caused to be published the property and copyright of all which is in myself and also all such others of my writings as my executors may hereafter appoint to be printed I say of all those and these I do give and devise one moiety of the said property and copyright and the benefit and profit thence arising to the said University and the other moiety to the said Lecturer and his successors from time to time upon this special trust and confidence that the said University and the said Lecturer and their successors do take care that all my said works whether published in my lifetime or afterwards from time to time be printed as soon as the former edition of the same or of any part is sold off or become scarce....

And I do order and direct that so soon as the lands [etc.] be purchased and conveyed to the above mentioned uses of this my Will the deeds of purchase and conveyance thereof shall be enrolled in Chancery with proper descriptions by words and by proper plans or draughts, of each parcel of the said estate and that the Title deeds and ancient writings and evidences which concern the said estate shall likewise be deposited in Chancery and attested copies of all and every of them be lodged and kept in the said Publick Library of the said University¹....

12. ASTRONOMY AND GEOMETRY (THOMAS LOWNDES).

Thomas Lowndes, of Overton in Cheshire, by Will dated 6 May, 1748, made the following bequest:

Annual rent of the estate to be paid to Professor.

...I give and devise all my Estate at Overton, and all my lands and hereditaments in Smallwood and elsewhere in the county of Chester, and all other my real estate, unto the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, and their successors for ever,...upon trust that they shall for ever pay all the clear rents and profits of my said real estates annually to the support and maintenance of a Professor of Astronomy and Geometry in the said University of Cambridge, after deducting thereout all costs, charges, and expenses of executing the said trust hereby in them reposed, and all taxes, repairs, and other outgoings.

Which Professor I will shall be for ever called Lowndes' Astronomical and Geometrical Professor in the University of Cambridge, and shall be from time to time chosen and appointed by the Lord High Chancellor or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal of Great Britain, the Lord President of the Privy Council, the Lord Privy Seal, the Lord High Treasurer, or the First Lord Commissioner of the Treasury, the Lord Steward of the King's Household for the time being, or the major part of them.

Name.

Mode of election.

And I will and desire that proper statutes, rules, and ordinances in relation to the said Professorship, and the number of the lectures to be read therein, and the times for such reading, and all other regulations for the perpetual government of the said Professorship, shall be made by and under the hands and seals of the Right Honourable [George]¹ Earl of Macclesfield, Martin Folkes, Esq., President of the Royal Society, Dr. Bradley, and my much-honoured friend William Jones, Esq., of Beaufort-buildings; which statutes and ordinances shall be for ever binding to the said Professors....

Statutes.

And I will that the first money that can be got from the contract I now have depending with the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty for meliorating Brine Salt shall be applied to satisfye a mortgage on my said real estate, now due to M^{rs} Bridget Clayton, and all other moneys due from me to her... In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and seal this 6th day of May 1748².

Discharge of mortgage.

Mr Lowndes died 12 May, 1748. The Senate did not formally accept his benefaction by Grace, but their action in deciding (1 March, 1749-50) to defend a suit in Chancery brought against the University by the heirs-at-law³, implies acceptance of the new Professorship.

Mr Lowndes had been much interested in the production of Brine Salt, which, he alleged, could be made by his process, of equally good quality, and at a far cheaper rate than French bay salt; and he had obtained assurance from the Admiralty, moved by a petition presented by him to the House of Commons, and favourably received, that if his salt stood certain tests, he should receive a substantial reward in money; but his death took place before all the trials which he had himself suggested could be made.

In or about 1757 Dr Roger Long, Mr Lowndes' first Professor, petitioned the House of Commons to the effect that as the Government had obtained considerable advantage from Mr Lowndes' discovery it would be proper to acknowledge their obligation to him by freeing his estate from the mortgage referred to in the Will. The House agreed to the following Vote, 19 March, 1759:

That a Sum not exceeding One Thousand Two Hundred and Eighty Pounds be granted to his Majesty, to be paid to Roger Long, D.D., Lowndes's Astronomical and Geometrical Professor in the University of Cambridge, without Account, to enable him to discharge, in Pursuance of the Will of Thomas Lowndes, Esquire (the Inventor of a Method for meliorating the Brine Salt of this Kingdom) a Mortgage upon an Estate devised for the Endowment of the said Professorship, by the said Thomas Lowndes, and to reimburse to the said Roger Long the Interest Monies he hath paid, and that are growing due, and the Expences he hath incurred in respect of the said Mortgage, and that the same be paid without Fee or Reward.

As Dr Long urges in his petition, among the arguments for granting his prayer, that the University "may be put in full possession of the estate devised to their Benefit, and the Title Deeds thereof safely lodged among their Archives"; and as the deeds are now in the Registry of the University, it may be concluded that the mortgage was discharged by the State¹.

The Will directs that statutes for the Professorship are to be prepared by certain named persons. It appears from the only copy of such statutes which has been preserved (A) that the duty which should have been discharged by the whole body, had been so long deferred that it devolved upon the sole survivor, George Earl of Macclesfield. The statutes are undated, but it is not difficult to discover the period of their composition. Of the persons named, William Jones died 3 July, 1749; Martin Folkes 28 June, 1754; and James Bradley 13 July, 1762. As the Earl himself died 17 March, 1764, it follows that the statutes must have been written in the time that intervened between the death of Bradley and that date.

A new statute for the Professorship was accepted by the Senate in 1857; and was approved in its present form by the Queen in Council 7 March, 1860¹.

A. Statutes made by George, Earl of Macclesfield.

Whereas Thomas Lowndes, Esq^r. by his last Will and Testament did found a professorship of Astronomy and Geometry in the University of Cambridge, and did direct that Statutes for the same should be made by the Right Hon^{ble} George Earl of Macclesfield, Martin Folkes Esq^r then President of the Royal Society, James Bradley D.D. Royal Astronomer at Greenwich, and William Jones Esq^r.; and whereas the settling the said Statutes has been hitherto omitted; lest the good intent of the Founder should be frustrated, I, George Earl of Macclesfield, now the only survivor of the above mentioned Persons, do constitute and appoint the following Statutes to be observed by every Person who shall hereafter be elected Lowndes's Professor of Astronomy and Geometry in the said University :

I. The Person elected to be Professor shall within one Calendar Month after he shall be chosen repair to the University and exhibit to the Vice Chancellor the Instrument of his Election, and promise to observe the following statutes :

1. To reside the major Part of each Term, or two whole Terms every Year in the University, and therein to read yearly one Course of Astronomy consisting of at least 20 Lectures, explaining the Motions of the Sun, Moon, Planets, Comets and Stars, the Doctrine of Eclipses, Physical Causes of the Planetary Motions, Phænomena of the Tides, and such other Things as have Relation to Astronomy. And also to read one Course of Geometrical Lectures in every Year, not less than 20 in Number, upon Euclid, Archimedes, Apollonius or some modern Geometrical Author; explain the Principles of Plain and Solid Geometry, Trigonometry, the Conic Sections, &c. upon pain of Forfeiture of Twenty Shillings for every Lecture omitted.

2. To give Public Notice a week or ten days before of the Time and Place of Reading, and print a Syllabus of the Heads of the Lectures to be read.

Residence

The Professor must provide astronomical instruments, and make observations.

His Observations to be placed in Library, and sent to Royal Society.

Instruments bought to be his private property. A deputy allowed.

3. To provide before the end of the first year after his election a good Clock and a Meridian Telescope, with other Astronomical Instruments (if not before provided) proper for observing the Transits of the Sun, Moon, and Planets, Eclipses of the Sun Moon and Satellits of Jupiter, and the Places of Comets, under the Penalty of Fifty Pounds to be deducted out of that years Salary. And with those Instruments to observe as many of such Phænomena as can be seen at Cambridge for 6 weeks in every year, together with a competent Number of Transits of fixt Stars: the Observations to be deposited in the University Library, and a Copy thereof to be sent by the Professor to the Royal Society within 6 Months after the end of the year wherein the Observations were made, upon Pain of forfeiting Twenty Pounds for every year such Observations shall not be made and communicated to the Royal Society as aforesaid. All the forfeitures to be applied to the use of the University Library for purchasing Books of Astronomy and Geometry.

4. Such Instruments as shall be purchased by any Professor to belong to his Executors, except he gives them to the Professorship.

5. If the Professor be disabled by age or infirmity he may appoint a Deputy who shall perform the several Parts of the Duty above required¹.

13. NATURAL AND EXPERIMENTAL PHILOSOPHY (RICHARD JACKSON).

This Professorship was founded by the Reverend Richard Jackson, formerly Fellow of Trinity College. He proceeded B.A. 1727-8, M.A. 1731.

By his Will (A), dated 20 February, 1775, to which is appended a codicil dated 5 July, 1781, he appoints the Master and Fellows of Trinity College trustees for the administration of his estate, and the division of the rent between the Head Gardener of the Botanic Garden, and the Lecturer, Professor, or Demonstrator². The document also prescribes the mode of election of the Professor, the number of lectures to be given, and, in a scheme appended to the ¹ Registry of the University, Vol. xxxix. 18. 32*.

² This benefaction has not been placed among the "Foundations with more than one object" (Sect. iv) because it is evident that the testator intended the gardener of the Physic Garden to assist the Professor in his researches.

Will, the nature of the experiments which Mr Jackson wished to have undertaken. Mr Jackson was buried 15 September, 1782; and a Syndicate was appointed 7 December, in the same year, to decide what the Will meant, and whether it would be to the advantage of the University to accept the devise¹. They reported in favour of acceptance, and a Grace passed the Senate 21 February, 1783, asking the Master and Fellows of Trinity College to proceed to carry out the testator's wishes².

The first Professor, Isaac Milner, M.A., Queens' College, was elected 11 December, 1783; and in the following year, 26 May, 1784, a Syndicate was appointed "to erect a building wherein the Professor of Botany and the Jacksonian Professor may deliver public lectures." This building, the lecture room on the east side of the old Botanic Garden, lately pulled down, was completed in 1787³.

A new statute, making the Electoral Roll the electors, and repealing the directions about lectures etc., passed the Senate 15 December, 1857. A similar statute, drawn by the Commissioners, was confirmed by the Queen in Council, 16 April, 1861⁴. Part of this has since been repealed⁵. The payment of the salary allowed by the Crown (£100) devolved upon the University after 1857⁶.

In 1875, after the death of Professor Willis, the Council of the Senate issued a Report recommending that the next Professor should be a member of the Board of Natural Science Studies instead of the Board of Mathematical Studies, as heretofore, and that his stipend should be raised to £500 a year⁷. This Report having been confirmed by Grace 18 March, 1875, an agitation was set on foot in the University which ended in the decision that the next Professor should be a chemist. In accordance with this view James Dewar was elected without opposition, 13 April, 1875⁸. In future, the Professor will be elected under the provisions of Statute B, Chapter XV.

chosen.

And my Will is that such Reader or Professor be chose by the Regent Masters of Arts only of the University who have been resident there for the greater part of the year previous to the day of election, (excepting only such Masters of Arts as are under one year's standing, who may vote though they have not been resident for that term); which said Regent Masters, on notice given to them by the said Master Fellows and Scholars aforesaid (or any of them) of this my devise, shall assemble publicly on some day to be fixed by the Master of Trinity College or the Vice-Master, in some of the public buildings belonging to the said University, or in the Hall or Chapel of Trinity College aforesaid, or the open Court there, and within one month after such notice given to them, by the said Master Fellows and Scholars or any of them, by fixing up a writing on the School-doors, the doors of St Marys Church, the door of the Regent House, or any of them, and shall by Poll, to be taken by the Proctors for the time being, or if they or either of them be absent, then by the two Junior Regent Masters then present (neither of whom is candidate for the office of Lecturer) chuse by majority of votes, given in writing, under the hand of each voter, to the Proctors or Junior Regents aforesaid, such person as they shall in their own proper judgments look upon to be best qualified by his knowledge in Natural Experimental Philosophy and the practical part thereof, and of Chymistry, to instruct the students in the said University in the said sciences, such Lecturer to be a Member of Trinity College (either Fellow or not), if such be found equally qualified with any other candidate, and preference to be given caeteris paribus to a Staffordshire or Warwickshire or Derbyshire or Cheshire Man;

Which Lecturer being so chose by a majority of the said Regent Masters as aforesaid, (and in case dispute arise about the majority, then the same to be determined by the Vice-Chancellor of the University, the Provost of King's College, and the Master of Trinity College there, or if either of the two last be Vice-Chancellor, then by the Master of St John's College, so as to make up three, or by the majority of such three) shall within twelve calendar months after the day of his election, read publickly a course of Lectures on Anatomy, Animal Economy, Chymistry, Botany, Agriculture, or the Materia Medica at large, with due and proper exhibitions of the subject to be read upon, or whose properties are to be explained or enquired into, together with proper Dissections, Analyses and Experiments upon the subjects of the same, according to their respective natures, as may compose a due series of experimental lectures and such practice as may truly thence result for confirmation of what is known at present, or for making further discoveries in any branch thereof as may best tend to set forth the Glory of Almighty God, and promote the welfare of mankind, by making farther progress in the practice of physic or of agriculture, and the investigation of the relative properties of various earths, sands, clays, marls and the like to each other, so as they best may answer the growth of useful vegetables therein, and also in a more precise investigation of the properties of what is or may hereafter be part of the Materia Medica, so as to form a more certain practice than at present exists of the art of curing diseases or preventing them or making life more easy under them; and here it is my serious request that the said Lecturer will in this Disquisition have an eye more particularly to that opprobrium medicorum called the gout, both in getting a better history of the disorder itself, and the symptoms preceding, attending and following it, than is extant at present: Also of the best method of procrastinating the fits from coming by the use of diet and the other non-naturals: And in finding a medicine that may cure it (of which I have no doubt from the goodness of God that a discovery may be made); and my further request to the Lecturer or Professor is, that herein he will adhere to plain facts, both in the history and narrative of experiments without adding any hypothesis (unless after the manner that is done by Sir Isaac Newton at the end of his Optics): But of this it is my intention, God willing, to draw up a more regular scheme of Series Lectionum, directing what is to be shewn, and what is to be tried or done in a separate paper, to be kept annexed hereto.

And my Will is that the Lectures be read on thirty-six several days, and not less than one hour at each lecture, on some of the days between the beginning of Michaelmas Term and the Commencement, yearly; and that the said Lecturer or Professor do admit to the same, without fee or reward, twelve persons, four of whom to be of Trinity College, if they chuse to attend, and the other eight out of the University at large, yet so that none of these shall have access to more than two of these courses of Lectures gratis, and that each of these shall attend at least thirty of the Lectures, and in case of neglect, others to be taken into their places, either in that course or in the next ensuing course.

Salary to be paid to lecturer except one fifth which is to be paid to gardener of Physic Garden who shall supply plants for the lectures.

And my Will is, that at the end of the said course, the Bursar of Trinity College on such Lecturer producing a certificate as aforesaid, under the hands of eight scholars as aforesaid, shall pay to him or his legal order the whole product of the Estate at Upper Longsdon aforesaid, clear as it came in for the preceding year, excepting a fifth part of that sum yearly, which the said Bursar is hereby desired and directed to pay to the Chief or Head Gardener of the Physic Garden in the said University, who in consideration thereof is required to furnish the said Lecturer or Professor with two or three (at least) specimens (either green if it may be or dry) of such plants or parts of plants as he may want to shew or examine in his Lectures, and which are of the growth of this Kingdom, he the said Professor giving the said Gardener a list of what plants he shall want a fortnight at least before the time they will be wanted :

And my Will is, that such rents as may arise or grow due during the time that a vacancy shall happen in the said Professorship by the death of the said Reader, or his neglecting his duty, shall be paid in equal shares to two of the Students (whether Scholars of the House or not) of Trinity College, who took the degree of Bachelor of Arts with most reputation previous to the day on which the said rents may grow due:

Rents accruing during vacancy to be paid to two B.A. students of Trin. Coll.

And in case any doubt or dispute shall arise about the due reading of the said Lecture, or the proper subject of it, or the payment of the salary of the Lecturer or Gardener of the Physic Garden respectively or any other point or case relating to the premises herein contained, then my Will is that the same be determined by the Provost of King's College, the Master of Trinity College and the Master of Saint John's College in Cambridge, or the majority for the time being of them, and in case they shall be divided in their opinions, then by the Vice-Chancellor for the time being (unless he happens to be head of one of the three Colleges, and then by the Bishop of Ely for the time being), whose determination shall be final. But if any person shall think himself aggrieved by such determination, and carry his plea to any other Court of Common or Civil or Ecclesiastical Law or Equity, then my Will is that by such process or appeal he or they shall be immediately and fully barred and deprived of all profit and benefit arising from the hereby demised premises as fully as if this Bequest had never been made....

Extract from a second Codicil to the above recited Will of the Rev. Richard Jackson, dated 25 July, 1781.

...In case the Course of Lectures at Cambridge are omitted to be read, or the Lecturer, in case of vacancy, chosen for one calendar year, I then devise the whole year's rents of the Longsdon Estate to be paid to the Vicar and Overseers of the Poor of Leek, to be applied in apprenticing children thereof.

Disposition of rents if lectures be omitted.

Sketch of Lectures in Practical Philosophy.

To the Master, Fellows and Scholars of Trinity College in Cambridge, Richard Jackson presents a sketch of the form of Lectures in Practical Philosophy which I would have followed by my Professor or Lecturer in the University of Cambridge.

As my design in founding this Lecture is the promotion of real and useful knowledge, my opinion is, that this cannot be done to any good purpose by mere reading a Discourse or Disquisition or Essay, but shewing and doing something in the way of experiment upon the subject undertaken to be treated, and my intention in this being to lead young persons by the most easy, natural, and as much as may be geometrical method of conducting these inquiries into the properties and uses of natural bodies, whether mineral, vegetable, or animal, and their relative effects upon each other, I therefore recommend the method which Boerhaave has followed in his practice of chymistry to be pursued in these Lectures. That is, the natural body which is the subject to be inquired about is to be exhibited in its genuine simple state, the obvious and distinguishing marks of it shewn, so as to specify wherein it agrees, and wherein it essentially differs from other bodies that are like it; what effects various degrees of heat or cold have upon it, either in disclosing the qualities which it possesses unchanged, or how and into what different or contrary qualities it does change them. The same method I recommend to be pursued in the application of water, spirits, oils, or those things which are called Menstruums in general, to any natural body which is the object of inquiry, always beginning with the simplest and most easy operations first, and remarking accurately, and recording honestly, all the appearances which arise in the course of the experiment. Not that my design is in setting down these rules, (which I write in the order in which they occur) to tie the Lecturer down to Boerhaave's plan, or the plan of any other man, but to recommend it as the most easy and methodical scheme that I know of investigating and of exhibiting to beginners the real properties with which natural bodies are endowed, unaltered and unchanged as much as may be, by the effects of fire or the like, and what effects they have upon each other when applied together in the simplest manner.

Inquiry into the nature of common things.

The field before us is immense, and unless circumscribed by some bounds, and limited by some rules, more likely to puzzle or overwhelm the poor faculties of our minds than to inform and enlarge that information which experiments may bestow, so that among the many objects of inquiry, as my intention is to direct this Lecture to the point which may be of most use to mankind, I recommend an inquiry into those things which we cannot be without, and upon which not only our well-being but our very existence in this world depends. I mean in the first place, the properties of air and water, heat and cold, and what has a considerable share in the effect of all these, the powers of electricity....

Investigation into the properties of plants.

When any particular plant is made the subject of disquisition, the first thing to be done must be to ascertain the particular species which your thoughts and experiments are then employed about, and this by enumerating the most obvious and most distinguishing outward marks and characters, by which its genus tribe and species may be known and made apparent to a common understanding, and if there be two or more plants of the same family whose appearance is so much alike that there is danger of mistaking one for the other, then by an actual exhibition of both to obviate this difficulty, and shew the distinguishing mark by which the one may be certainly known from the other. In order to set forth this in the clearest light, it may be necessary to give an historical account of the natural place, of the growth, time of springing, flowering, seeding and decaying of each, with the best method of culture that is known, wherein the Gardener is to give his assistance, and speak either from his own knowledge and experience, or produce his authority (if he speaks upon the declaration of others). The subject matter being in the first place ascertained, the next will be to point out wherein the virtue or valuable and useful part (either as to a nutritive or medicinal quality to man or other animals, or as an instrument in preparing or fitting any other things for use) resides; whether in the whole plant or any of its parts, as in the flower cup, flower chive, seed, or coat of seed, pith, bark, or any, and which, part of bark, skin or any other covering, root, or in short any other part of the subject, together with the best and easiest method of developing and exhibiting its properties unaltered.

The theory of ascertaining the virtue of plants from their sensible qualities is too superficial, as is the doctrine that plants of the same genus or class are of similar properties, or that much of these properties may be collected from the place of their native growth. These, and all such schemes as these, can never bring mankind into any real knowledge of the distinguishing properties, so as to enable them to make right use of the good, and guard against the bad qualities which they possess. This can only be learned by making particular experiments upon every particular part of each plant. An instance of which, to go no further than the product of almost every (sic orig.) may be seen in the poppy, the meal of whose seed is a mild nutritive Balsamic, and the juice, besides the bitter taste and rancid smell, which lie obvious, is possessed of that amazing faculty of depriving the bodily organs of the power of sensation, which nothing but actual trial could possibly discover. So that in short my intention in founding this practical Professorship of Physiology is, that the Reader shall in public experimentally exhibit to young persons the most easy and natural, and best approved method of discovering and demonstrating the medical or nutritive, or domestic properties of bodies of the Mineral and Vegetable Kingdoms, and make the object of his private experiments and disquisitions their more hidden and concealed properties, but to publish them for public good as soon as discovered, and to make those several parts of all, which have been looked upon as useful in gouty cases, the first objects of his inquiry; and see which are useful, and wherein they are so, and which are worthless, so as to throw them aside.

On the whole my intention is that this shall be an Experimental Lecture, wherein something shall be shewed, something shall be done, and something shall be read by the Lecturer to the young Students who attend his Lectures, the number of which is set forth in my Will. That is, the natural bodies which are the subject of experiment or of inquiry shall be exhibited by the Lecturer to the Students, by laying specimens of each before them which are genuine, and the obvious and primary properties as they appear in shattered condition pointed out, so that they may be distinguished by their peculiar characteristicks as far as can be this way done from all other bodies whatsoever. In the next place, there shall be a course of experiments made and exhibited by the Lecturer to the said Students, upon the natural bodies so exhibited to them in the way of Chymical Analysis, beginning with the gentlest and most simple operations, and proceeding as much as may be in a geometrical gradation to the more complex, in the manner of Boerhaave's Chymistry; whereby the more hidden properties of natural bodies, and the relative qualities and effects which they have upon each other, and the changes which they operate on one another, may be developed as much as may be and faithfully laid open.

And lastly, that along with, or after such exhibition and course of experiment (which experiments shall at least be thirty different set processes and operations), that the Professor or Lecturer shall, in a plain discourse in English, set forth all the phaenomena that occurred in the performing or exhibiting any and each of them, in the natural order that they appeared, with the final result of each, and what general doctrines may be raised from the whole; and that after the whole course of thirty-six Lectures and thirty Experiments thus read and exhibited to twelve Students at least, and their respective personal signing the certificate mentioned in my Will, that the said Lecturer, before he receives the said salary, or any part thereof, deliver, or cause to be delivered to the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge for the time being, two copies, fairly written, of one of the Lectures which had been read by him within the course exhibited that year, one of the said copies, signed and dated by the said Vice-Chancellor, and the Lecturer, to be laid up in the Public Library of the University and the other in the Library of Trinity College, annually for ever; such Lecture each year being different from that of the preceding year, and yet so connected in general as to form a rational series of experimental doctrines.

And as to the Gardener of the Physic or Public Garden of the said University, it is required that before the Legacy devised to him by my Will, or any part of the said Legacy be paid to him, that he shall have furnished to the said Lecturer of Physiology all such vegetables or parts of vegetables, being of the natural growth of these Kingdoms, as he may require, or shall be necessary or useful to him in the course of the said Lecture, of which delivery the Professor or the major part of the twelve Students, required by my Will to attend the said Lecture, shall sign a certificate, to be by him delivered to the Master and Senior Fellows of Trinity College; and that the said Gardener for the time being shall at the time of delivering the said certificate, deliver also an account in writing of ten different experiments which he had or shall have tried within the course of the preceding year, and which relate and tend to illustrate the rational culture of two at least of such vegetables as are most useful for food in the first place, and in the next as medicines to man, or any species of animals, setting forth therein the nature, qualities or composition of the several sorts of soil or composts, the degree of moisture or dampness, heat and cold, the effects of transplanting, grafting, inoculating, pruning, or other manual operations, on the vegetable or soil it was planted or grew in, which have by his own experience been found useful or hurtful to the growth of all and each of the several species of plants, which are by him subjected to trial, together with a detail of the said experiments, in the order tried by him, and the good or pernicious effects of each honestly set forth; and herein I more particularly recommend an inquiry into the nature of such vegetables as will grow on sandy and gravelly or rocky soils and mountainous places which are now commonly naked, and reputed irremediably barren, which may be useful for food, medicine, manufactures or timber; and also such manures or composts, and intermixing or changing several soils, which may promote the growth of useful vegetables on such soils; making inquiry in our own and foreign nations what vegetables of any kind grow naturally therein, and trying whether by culture of any sort, or meliorating the several different earths, they may not be improved, so that those parts of the earth which are now useless or barren may bring forth something that may in some way be beneficial; and that the said Gardener's labours and experiments herein may be of use to mankind, I forbid him to spend his time in such trifling occupations as those people called Florists commonly spend their time on, as varying the colour or increasing the size of a tulip, ranunculus, &c., but in the culture of plants, useful as aforesaid to mankind, so as by a sagacious and well planned series of useful trials, a good and sure foundation may be laid for a system of rational agriculture.

I recommend, in the first place, an Experimental Analysis of Lime Stones, their various kinds, and distinguishing marks, and the comparative goodness of each, and particularly wherein their activity lies, as experiments shall discover, and how and what effects they produce on animal and vegetable bodies, or different soils, and on what soils or kinds of soils they are more or less beneficial or hurtful, and what vegetables they assist or deprave the growth and goodness of, and in what quantity the several kinds of it may be best applied as medicine or manure. And as I have devised one-fifth part of the net produce of the rents of the estate at Longsdon to be paid yearly to the Gardener of the Public Garden of the University of Cambridge, my Will is, that the said Gardener, besides furnishing such plants as may be required by the Physiological Lecturer as necessary for his Lecture shall, in consideration of such his share of the said rent, apply himself to investigate the nature and best method of such herbs of all sorts shrubs and trees, as are useful for food to man or cattle, and will by culture be made to grow on boggy, sandy, gravelly, or any other kind of land, which at present is by the said properties, or some other bad qualities, barren and unproductive of anything useful; and as the Moorlands of Staffordshire, near Longsdon, furnish many kinds of soil which are now unfruitful, and the estate itself is naked of wood about the house, and all the hills around it void of trees, while the Alps and many parts of the Highlands of Scotland, and north parts of America are clothed with useful timber, though in a loftier, colder and more barren situation than any part of the Moorlands or Peak, my Will is, that the said Gardener do, in the first, apply himself to the surrounding the said Farm at Longsdon with hedges that may shelter and be of use in keeping the inclosures warm, and also in planting it with such trees, either single in rows, or in clumps, as by experience are found to flourish in such situations and such soils as that of Longsdon. And in doing this I recommend that he would rather employ such shrubs and trees of the growth of cold foreign climates, both for fencing and timber, than of those which are in use in this nation, still having regard to those of which some experience has been had in the Physic Garden of Cambridge, or other place within the Gardener's own knowledge, that time and costs may not be lost in planting things at Longsdon which previous trials have shewn to be such as to promise no good. The same rule I would recommend to be followed in culture of herbs and grasses on boggy, sandy, gravelly or other such barren soils; that is, to have recourse to the product of such kind of places in foreign countries as of like sort with the soil of our own, on which however the annual product exceeds that of our country. But still not to disregard or neglect the plants which are natives of our own barren (sic orig.), which I know may be much meliorated by proper culture. And my Will is, that if the said Gardener shall want any portion of land belonging to my said Estate at Longsdon, on which he may think it right to make plantations of trees, shrubs or herbs, that the College shall permit him to have it, and in what quantity, and in what part of the Estate he shall (sic orig.); he, the said Gardener, making such abatement of rent to the Tenant, in proportion to the quantity and quality of the land so appropriated as the College shall appoint, and this I do on the especial confidence that such use will be made by the Gardener of the land so taken by him as will render the Estate better, and not worse, as this last must diminish his own salary, and improving the value of the Estate increase his own salary in proportion. And my Will is, that fifty trees be each year planted on the land, and well fenced¹.

14. LAWS OF ENGLAND, MEDICINE (DOWNING COLLEGE).

It is provided by the charter of Downing College, dated 22 September, 1800, that the College "shall consist of one Master, two Professors (that is to say), a Professor of the Laws of England and a Professor of Medicine, and sixteen Fellows¹" [etc.]; and in a subsequent passage of the same charter provisions for the election and duties of the Professors are made :

The future Professors of the said College shall be elected by the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, the Lord Archbishop of York, and the Masters of St John's College and Clare Hall, and of the said intended college, to be called Downing College, for the time being, from among persons qualified in the following manner (that is to say), The Law Professor shall be, at the time of his election, a Doctor of Laws, a Master of Arts, or a Bachelor of Laws in one of our two Universities of England, of ten years standing from his matriculation, and also a Barrister at Law; and the Professor of Medicine shall be, at the time of his election, a Master of Arts, who shall have been licensed to practice physic for the space of two years, or a Doctor or Bachelor of Physic in one of our said two universities of England, or a member of some one of the Scotch universities of seven years standing, and twenty five years of age, who shall have attended the medical lectures in one of the Scotch universities for four years².

The annual salary of each Professor is to be £200³.

The Downing Professors are now governed by Statute V of the Statutes of Downing College⁴; and by Statutes D and E of the University Statutes.

The first Professor of Mineralogy was elected by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 15 December, 1808:

Cum vir reverendus Edvardus Daniel Clarke LL.D. sit in studio Mineralogiæ apprime versatus, et eidem studio apud Vos promovendo curam magnopere impenderit, tum lectionibus publicis, quas jam biennio perlegit, institutis, tum speciminibus undequaque collectis exhibitis:

Placeat Vobis ut idem E. D. Clarke Professoris Mineralogiæ titulo suffragiis vestris cohonestetur¹.

After Clarke's death (9 March, 1822) the following Grace passed the Senate (15 May):

Cum per mortem Edvardi D. Clarke nuper Professoris Mineralogiæ munus istud jam vacans existit, Placeat Vobis ut alius ad idem munus exequendum a Vobis eligatur².

The words 'a Vobis eligatur' were held by many members of the Senate to imply that the election was to be by the Senate without previous nomination by the Vice-Chancellor and Heads of Colleges. A nomination of two persons, however, took place, and votes were given, of which Mr Henslow received a majority³. A mandamus was applied for in the Court of King's Bench in 1822 and 1823, but judgment was not given. Finally the question was referred by the Senate to Sir John Richardson in a letter under Seal 25 December, 1825. His determination (A) dated 1 December, 1827, was published to the Senate 12 December in the same year.

The two succeeding Professors, Mr Whewell and Mr Miller, were admitted to the title of Professor by Grace:

Placeat Vobis ut Mag^r Whewell, Coll. SS. Trin., titulum Professoris Mineralogiæ apud Vos consequatur⁴.

³ Ibid., p. 466. For the whole question, and the titles of the pamphlets published, see Cooper's Annals, iv. pp. 536, 537.

⁴ Ibid., N, p. 199, 21 March, 1828.

The Professor's salary, £100, was paid by the Crown till 1857, when it devolved on the University¹.

A new statute was made by the Statutes Syndicate, and confirmed by Grace, 15 December, 1857. This was subsequently altered by the Commissioners 23 October, 1860, and their statute received the royal assent 16 April, 1861. This has since been repealed, and the Professorship is now governed by Statute B.

A. Determination of Sir John Richardson,
1 December, 1827.

To the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge.

Sir,

In pursuance of the Letter, addressed to me by the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge in Senate assembled, sealed with their common seal, and bearing date the twenty second day of December one thousand eight hundred and twenty five, (wherein, after reciting that a difference of opinion had arisen in their body respecting the Election of the Professors of Mineralogy, Botany and Anatomy, they requested me to determine, after having heard counsel, the manner in which these Professors should in future be elected,) I have accepted the reference thereby made to me and have been attended by Mr Alderson and Mr Amos, the Counsel of the several Parties, and have heard such arguments, and perused and examined such papers and evidences, as they thought proper to lay before me respecting the matters in difference; and now having maturely considered the same, I request you to make known to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars this my opinion and Determination on the premises, that is to say:

First: I am of Opinion, and so determine, that although the University has from time to time appointed several Professors of Anatomy Botany and Mineralogy and in several instances has in so doing apparently assumed that such offices continued to exist after the death of the last Professor, yet in fact whatever has been hitherto done on each and all of these occasions has amounted to no more than to temporary provisions, each made for the particular appointment at that time contemplated, and which had not the effect of binding the University to continue the office, or to appoint another Professor after the next vacancy; consequently, that the University has not yet founded or established any permanent Professorship either of Anatomy Botany or Mineralogy; and that no such permanent Offices do at this time exist:

Secondly: I am of Opinion, and so determine, that either Strangers with the previous or subsequent consent of the University, or the University itself by Grace or By-Law, may, ad Eruditionis amplificationem, found and establish permanent Professorships in Anatomy Botany or Mineralogy, or in any other branch of Science or liberal Learning, and may by the terms of the foundation prescribe any reasonable mode of Election, which they may deem most proper, and that by so doing they would not infringe the Statutes of the University made in the twelfth year of the reign of Queen Elizabeth:

Thirdly: I am of Opinion, and so determine, that if the University, or any Stranger, should found any new Professorship, and should not by the terms of the foundation provide any particular mode of Election the case would then fall within the provisions of the fortieth Chapter of those Statutes (that De nominatione et electione Lectorum et aliorum officiariorum) and that the Elections must be made, in conformity therewith, according to the mode prescribed by the thirty fourth chapter of the same Statutes (that De electione Procancellarii):

Fourthly: I am of Opinion, and so determine, that the words a vobis eligatur or other equivalent words, used in a Grace submitted to the Senate are not sufficient to prescribe any particular mode of Election; such words being in my judgment equally satisfied by an Election made with, or without, previous Nomination; which Election is in neither case made by the Senate assembled in Houses, but by the members of the Senate voting individually, and therefore, that in cases where an Election is made in pursuance of a Grace so worded, and where no particular mode of Election is otherwise prescribed, the mode of Election must be governed by the fortieth chapter of the Statutes before cited.

In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand this first day of December one thousand eight hundred and twenty seven.

JOHN RICHARDSON.

16. ARCHÆOLOGY (DISNEY).

1851.

I. Mr Disney's collection of Ancient Marbles.

This collection of Marbles was offered by Mr [John] Disney [of the Hyde, Ingatestone, Essex], to the Vice-Chancellor [James Cartmell, D.D., Master of Christ's College] at a personal interview in December, 1849.

By the advice of the Heads of Colleges the Vice-Chancellor and Dr Philpott inspected the collection and reported it to be, in their judgment, worthy of the acceptance of the University.

The Vice-Chancellor proposed to Mr Disney that the Senate should be invited to accept the Marbles on the condition that they should be always kept together as a collection bearing Mr Disney's name, and exhibited in some public building of the University.

The Vice-Chancellor also added that at present the collection might probably be placed in the Statue gallery of the Fitzwilliam Museum, with the distinct understanding that it is not necessarily to continue there, if another arrangement should hereafter be found more convenient to the University or the Museum¹.

On the same day Mr Disney wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor:

CAMBRIDGE, December 4, 1849.

MY DEAR SIR,

I hope I made myself distinctly understood, that the marbles, which we spoke about to-day, should be placed in a room (or part of a room) by themselves, as a set coming from me, and not mixed up with any other future donation; each specimen bearing, as you suggested, my name, and date.

They would, I think, fill the centre portion of the room you mentioned at the Fitzwilliam: certainly, either of the end compartments; and within such compartment or room the inscription Disney Museum must be placed.

If however the University wish to make it more especially their own, I have no objection to the collection being placed (still kept distinct) in any other public building belonging to them.

Believe me, yours truly,

JOHN DISNEY².

The Vice-Chancellor next issued the following notice:

CHRIST'S COLLEGE LODGE, April 10, 1850.

The Vice-Chancellor has the gratification of announcing to the Members of the Senate that a valuable collection of ancient Marbles and Statuary has been offered to the University by John Disney, of the Hyde, in the County of Essex, Esquire, with the view of its being placed in one of the Public Buildings of the University, and being kept together as an Archæological Collection bearing his name.

The Vice-Chancellor gives Notice, That at the Congregation on Tuesday next, the 16th instant, Graces will be offered to the Senate :

1. To accept Mr Disney's munificent offer on the conditions above specified¹.
2. To affix the Seal to a letter of thanks written [by the Public Orator] to Mr Disney.
3. To authorise the Syndicate appointed for the management of the Fitzwilliam Museum to receive the Collection into the Museum; and to make the necessary arrangements with Mr Disney for its removal.

These Graces passed the Senate without opposition, and the collection arrived in the course of the year.

The collection consisted of 83 pieces, forming part of the collection of antiquities called Museum Disneianum. It was formed by Mr Thomas Hollis and Mr Thomas Brand, in the course of several visits to Italy between 1748 and 1753, and placed at the Hyde in a room specially designed by Sir Wm. Chambers, Architect, to contain it. Some pieces had been subsequently added by Mr Disney himself².

II. The Disney Professorship of Archæology.

In the following year (12 March, 1851), the University was informed by the Vice-Chancellor that Mr Disney had offered £1000 3 per cent. Bank Annuities to endow a Professorship, to be called the Disney Professorship of Archæology. This proposal was accepted by Grace 4 April, 1851, when a draft of the proposed deed of endowment (A) was laid on the Registrary's table. A Grace to seal this document passed the Senate 28 May, 1851.

17. POLITICAL ECONOMY.

In March, 1816, George Pryme, M.A., formerly Fellow of Trinity College, commenced a course of lectures in Political Economy². In 1828 (21 May) he was elected Professor by the following Grace :

Cum Georgius Pryme A.M. Coll. S.S. Trinitatis nuper Socius, publicas Lectiones de principiis Economiae Politicae instituerit, et per multos jam annos perlegerit, Placeat Vobis ut idem Georgius Pryme titulo Professoris Economiae Politicae vestris suffragiis cohonestetur³.

Professor Pryme continued to lecture until 1863, in which year, as he had notified his wish to be relieved of his duties, a Syndicate was appointed (20 March) to consider (1) whether a Professorship of Political Economy should be established in the University; (2) under what rules.

This Syndicate issued a report dated 1 May, 1863, in which they recommended the establishment of a Professorship; with rules for the appointment, salary, and duties of the Professor. This report was confirmed by Grace 29 October, 1863⁴. The Professorship is now governed by Statute B.

Professor Pryme died 2 December, 1868. His Will contained the following bequest:

...I bequeath to the Chancellor Master and Scholars of the University of Cambridge my Books and Pamphlets on Political Economy respectively described in two Catalogues marked P. E., for the use of such persons as shall from time to time succeed me as Professors of Political Economy, to be by such Professors used and holden in like manner as the Library attached to the Professorship of Modern History¹.

18. ZOOLOGY AND COMPARATIVE ANATOMY.

In 1865 (11 May) a Syndicate was appointed "to consider the best mode of providing for the teaching of Anatomy and Zoology in the University." In their report, dated 12 June, 1865², after stating that "the services of more than one Teacher are absolutely indispensable," they recommend:

I. That the Professor of Anatomy should take the department of Human Anatomy and Physiology, the lectures during one or more terms in each year being made suitable to students in Natural Science as well as to Medical Students.

II. The appointment of a Demonstrator in Anatomy who, in addition to his ordinary duties, would assist in keeping the objects in the Museum in a proper state of preservation, and in adding to them, as opportunities occur.

III. The appointment of a Professor of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy, who may so arrange his course in conjunction with the Professor of Anatomy, that the lectures of both be mutually dependent and supply the needs of the Medical as well as the Natural Science Students³.

These recommendations were confirmed by Grace 8 February, 1866, and the first Professor was elected 1 March. His successor will be governed by the provisions of Statute B.

² Grace Book Σ, p. 33. Before this report was issued the Senate had confirmed (3 June) the report of a Syndicate appointed 24 November, 1864, "to consider the Examinations for the Ordinary Degree of B.A." This report recommended, among other things, the institution of a Special Examination in Zoology.

³ The regulations which follow are printed in Ordinances, ed. 1901, p. 519.

1867.

In 1863 (12 February) a letter was addressed to the Vice-Chancellor by the President and Council of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland, expressing their conviction "that the greatest advantage will follow the institution of a Professorship of Sanskrit [in the University of Cambridge], not only to the interests of literature and science, but also to the Public Service of the country."

As the term of three years for which a teacher of Hindustani had been appointed expired 29 November, 1863, the Council of the Senate were led to consider the whole question of providing for the instruction of selected candidates for the Indian Civil Service in the vernacular languages of India; and in a report dated 23 October they recommended "that the Vice-Chancellor shall be empowered to expend annually a sum not exceeding £150 from the University Chest in engaging teachers of such of the Oriental languages and for such periods as he may think fit." This report having been confirmed by Grace 12 November, the Vice-Chancellor appointed a teacher in Sanskrit.

In 1866 a Syndicate appointed (1 November) to consider, among other things, how a Professorship of Sanskrit might best be established in the University recommended (20 November) "That there shall be established in the University a Professorship of Sanskrit," and framed regulations for the office. This report was submitted to a long consideration by the Council of the Senate, who took the opinion of Counsel on all the questions involved, and finally adopted the recommendations of the Syndicate in a report dated 8 April, 1867, with one alteration, viz. that the Professorship should "terminate with the tenure of office of the Professor first elected¹." This report having been confirmed by Grace 16 May, the first Professor was elected 7 June, 1867. The Professorship is now governed by Statute B.

1869.

The circumstances under which a fund was collected for the purpose of recognising the services rendered to literature and education by the Rev. Benj. Hall Kennedy D.D., sometime Fellow of S. John's College and Regius Professor of Greek 1867-1889, are related in the subjoined documents, and need not be repeated here.

The sum collected was offered to the University 14 December, 1868, in the name of the subscribers, by the Rev. Will. Geo. Clark, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, and Public Orator, acting on behalf of himself and the two other trustees.

A Syndicate was appointed, 11 February, 1869, to consider the offer, and to frame regulations. In their report, dated 13 April, they recommended the acceptance of the offer with thanks, and submitted regulations which had been approved by the subscribers. This report was confirmed by Grace, and the deed of trust, which had been circulated with the Report of the Syndicate, was ordered to be sealed, 29 April. The first Professor was elected 12 June, 1869.

The letter of Mr Clark to the Vice-Chancellor (A), the letter of the trustees to the same (B), and the deed of trust with regulations (C), are printed below.

Vice-Chancellor.*

TRINITY COLLEGE,
December 14, 1868.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I beg to forward to you the enclosed letter. I was requested on behalf of the Committee of Subscribers to say that in mentioning only such and such conditions, we do not at all mean that the Professor should be exempt from other regulations which the Senate may think proper to impose respecting lectures and residence.

I am, [etc.]

W. G. CLARK.

B. The Trustees of the Kennedy Subscription Fund to the Vice-Chancellor.

TRINITY COLLEGE,

December 14, 1868.

REV. SIR,

On the retirement of Dr Kennedy from the Head Mastership of Shrewsbury School, his friends and former pupils set on foot a subscription, the amount of which it was proposed to offer to the University of Cambridge for the purpose of founding a Professorship of Latin, to be called the Kennedy Professorship.

After Dr Kennedy's election to the Regius Professorship of Greek, he offered to give £500 to the fund, on condition that his name should not be attached to the Professorship of Latin. This offer was accepted by the Committee of Subscribers.

The total amount received from subscriptions and interest on deposits, less expenses, is £4318. 10s. 4*d.* represented by £3515. 10s. 10*d.* Indian five per cent. Stock, and a balance in hand of £218. 10s. 4*d.*

In the name of the Subscribers, we, the undersigned Trustees, beg to offer this sum to the University on the following conditions:

1. That it be called "The Latin Professorship Fund," and that the annual proceeds be paid to a Professor of Latin.
2. That the Professor be elected before the end of the year 1869.
3. That the Electors to the Professorship be, The Regius Professor of Greek, The Public Orator, The Professor of Sanskrit, The four members of the Senate elected by Grace to serve on the Board of Classical Studies, The Professor of Latin in the University of Oxford, and the Head Master of Shrewsbury School, for the time being.
4. That a statement of the circumstances under which the fund was subscribed be inserted in the Cambridge Calendar.

With regard to the third condition we would also suggest that, in case the votes of the electors present were equally divided between two candidates, the decision should rest with the Vice-Chancellor.

We have introduced the Professor of Latin at Oxford among the Electors, in commemoration of the generous aid which we have received from many Members of that University; and the Head Master of Shrewsbury School, as a record of the purpose for which the fund was primarily designed.

We remain, [etc.]

WILLIAM GEORGE CLARK.

23. EXPERIMENTAL PHYSICS.

1871.

In 1868 (25 November) a Syndicate was appointed to consider the whole question of teaching in the department of Heat, Electricity, and Magnetism. This step was taken at that particular time because "in the scheme of examination for Honours in the Mathematical Tripos, approved by Grace of the Senate on the 2nd June, 1868, Heat, Electricity, and Magnetism, if not introduced for the first time, had a much greater degree of importance assigned to them than at any previous period, and these subjects will henceforth demand a corresponding amount of attention from the candidates for Mathematical Honours¹."

This Syndicate issued a report 27 February, 1869, which proposed a scheme divided under four heads: (1) a Professorship of Experimental Physics; (2) a Demonstrator; (3) an Attendant; (4) Instruments and apparatus; to which was virtually added (5) a Laboratory at an estimated cost of £5,000. In conclusion they suggested the appointment of a special Syndicate to deal with the finance of their scheme. Such a Syndicate was accordingly appointed, 13 May, 1869, and issued two reports dated 29 March and 31 May, 1870. When these were discussed by the Senate, they met with an unfavourable reception, and the whole scheme might have fallen to the ground, had not a munificent offer, made by His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, Chancellor, to build the Laboratory at his own cost, coincided with a reduction in the expenditure of the University Chest effected by raising by assessment the quotas of the University and Colleges levied under the Cambridge Improvement Acts².

Finally, the establishment of "a Professorship of Experimental Physics" was approved by Grace 9 February, 1871¹; and the first Professor was elected 8 March.

The Professor, who is now styled "The Cavendish Professor of Experimental Physics," is governed by Statute B².

24. MECHANISM AND APPLIED MECHANICS.

The death of the Rev. Robert Willis (28 February, 1875), who as Jacksonian Professor (1837-75) had lectured on Mechanism, and the decision of the Senate that the Jacksonian Professorship should in future be regarded as a chair of Chemistry, left the University without provision for instruction in Mechanism. A Syndicate was therefore appointed, 29 April, 1875, "to consider whether any and if any what steps should be taken for establishing a Professorship of Mechanism and Engineering³." This Syndicate reported in favour of the establishment of a Professorship of Mechanism and Applied Mechanics, 6 May, 1875⁴, and their report was confirmed by Grace 28 October, but not without opposition⁵. The first Professor was elected 17 November.

The Professorship is now governed by Statute B.

25. ECCLESIASTICAL HISTORY (DIXIE).

1882.

Sir Wolstan Dixie, who died 1594, left by Will a sum of money to Emmanuel College to buy land for the endowment of two fellowships and two scholarships to be held by scholars of the school built and partly endowed by himself at Bosworth in Leicestershire⁶.

In 1878 (12 December) the Governing Body of Emmanuel College made new statutes for the Dixie foundation, which were approved by the Queen in Council 26 February, 1880. In virtue of these the fellowships were abolished, and it was enacted that the surplus income of the Dixie estates should not, as heretofore, be spent on the purchase of advowsons¹.

In 1882 (3 May) the Queen approved a statute for the University and Emmanuel College in common, in virtue of which there was "established in the University a Professorship to be called the Dixie Professorship of Ecclesiastical History²."

The Vice-Chancellor declared the Professorship vacant 18 April, 1884, and the first Professor was elected 17 May, 1884³.

26. DIVINITY (ELY).

The action of the Governing Body of Trinity College in respect of the canonry in the Cathedral Church of Ely which had been attached to the Regius Professorship of Greek in 1848, has been already related⁴. On receipt of the Resolution passed by the College the Council of the Senate issued a report dated 10 June, 1878⁵, in which they recommended (among other things):

That with a view to the acceptance of the offer of the Master and Fellows of Trinity College, a Statute be prepared for attaching the Canonry of Ely to a new Professorship of Divinity, to be called the Ely Professorship of Divinity.

This report was confirmed by Grace 5 December, 1878⁶, and the new Professorship was accepted by the Commissioners, who made for it the statute by which it is now governed (Statute B, Chapter XIV).

The Vice-Chancellor announced (23 April, 1889), "that the electors would meet for the purpose of proceeding to the election of a Professor on Saturday June 1⁷"; and on that day Mr Stanton was elected the first Professor.

In 1870 (23 June) leave was given by Grace to Mr Michael Foster, who had lately been elected Prælector in Physiology in Trinity College, to give "lectures in Physiology in one of the rooms in the New Museums Building, for such time and subject to such Regulations as the Syndicate may think fit¹."

As it is provided in Statute B, Chapter VI, that a Professorship in Physiology (among others) shall be established, the Council of the Senate, soon after the reception of the statute, consulted the General Board of Studies as to the order in which the Professorships should be filled up. They passed the following Minute dated 11 December, 1882:

This Board considers that the Professorships established by Statute B ch. VI. § 2 should be filled up in the following order: (1) Physiology, (2) Pathology, (3) Mental Philosophy and Logic, and that the appointment to the first two Professorships is urgent.

This Minute was embodied in a report dated 12 March, 1883, with the further recommendation "that immediate steps be taken for the appointment of a Professor of Physiology²." This report having been confirmed by Grace 10 May³, Mr Foster was chosen the first Professor 11 June.

In 1878 the Board of Medical Studies, in a communication addressed to the Studies Syndicate (29 March), unanimously recommended the establishment of a Professorship of Surgery; a recommendation which they repeated in 1883, in the following words: "the appointment of a Professor of Surgery is urgently necessary." The Council of the Senate laid this matter before the University in a report dated 12 March, 1883, with Dr Humphry's offer to hold the Professorship without stipend¹.

This report was not offered for confirmation, but a Grace was introduced (10 May) to establish "a Professorship of Surgery in accordance with the provisions of Statute B, Chap. VI," and proposing regulations². This Grace passed the Senate without opposition, and (20 June) Dr Humphry was elected the first Professor³.

In 1879 a memorial was addressed to the University Commissioners, signed by 138 graduates of the University, "engaged in the study or practice of Medicine," praying that in the new Statutes for the University provision might be made for an extension of the study of Medical Science, and especially of Pathology, Medicine, and Surgery. Of the first of these they say:

...the Science of Pathology, in addition to its value as an essential part of the complete study of Medicine, has now attained such precision, proportions, and general importance, and offers such great promise of future development, that it seems to us fairly to demand recognition as one of the foremost subjects in the sphere of University work⁴.

The provision for a Professor of Pathology (among others) in Statute B, Chapter VI, and the action of the Council of the Senate thereon, has been already related under Physiology. That Professorship having been established, the General Board of Studies reverted to the subject of Pathology in two reports, dated 11 June¹ and 19 November², 1883. The first recommendation in the latter report was embodied by the Council of the Senate in the following Grace :

That Recommendation 1 in the Amended Report, dated Nov. 19, 1883, of the General Board of Studies, respecting the appointment of a Professor of Pathology, be confirmed.

This Grace passed the Senate 6 December, 1883³; and the Vice-Chancellor having declared the Professorship to be vacant 18 April, 1884, the first Professor was elected 26 April.

30. MENTAL PHILOSOPHY AND LOGIC.

1896.

The action of the Council and the General Board of Studies with reference to the three Professorships provided in Statute B, Chapter VI, of which Mental Philosophy and Logic is one, has been already related⁴.

In 1896 (16 June) the General Board of Studies recommended :

That steps be taken for the immediate appointment of a Professor of Mental Philosophy and Logic⁵.

After this report had been drawn up Dr Sidgwick, Knightbridge Professor, wrote to the Vice-Chancellor (3 June) offering to give £200 a year towards the salary of the proposed Professor. This generous offer was embodied in an Amended Report of the General Board of Studies (18 November, 1896)⁶, which was confirmed by Grace 10 December, but not without opposition⁷.

1897.

In 1886 (11 October) Sir Thomas Francis Wade, formerly of Trinity College, offered to the University, in a letter to the Vice-Chancellor, his collection of Chinese books¹. This valuable gift was accepted with thanks (25 November); and the honorary degree of Doctor in Letters was conferred on the Donor².

In the following year (12 December) the Council of the Senate recommended "the institution of a Professorship of Chinese," which had already been urged upon the University in 1875 by the Board of Oriental Studies, on learning, as they said, "that the same excellent Chinese Scholar to whom the University is indebted for the gift of the large and valuable collection of Chinese literature...is willing to undertake without any stipend the duties of a Chinese Professor ...and to accept all the regulations concerning residence and lectures to which the Professors who are under the statutes of 1882 are subject³." Their recommendation, including regulations for the Professorship, the first of which was that it should terminate with the tenure of office of the Professor first elected, was confirmed by Grace 9 February, 1888⁴; and Sir T. F. Wade was elected the first Professor 21 April, 1888.

Sir T. F. Wade died 31 July, 1895, and in 1897 (7 June) the Council of the Senate, with the concurrence of the Library Syndicate, and the Boards for Indian Civil Service and Oriental Studies, recommended "that there be established in the University a Professorship in Chinese in accordance with the provisions of Statute B, Chap. VI⁵." This recommendation, with regulations for the Professorship, was confirmed by Grace 28 October, 1897⁶.

In 1899 (10 May) the General Board of Studies proposed that this Professorship should be subject to the general regulations for the residence and duties of Professors approved 18 June, 1885⁷, and that the Professor should have a stipend of £200 a year⁸. 32. ANCIENT HISTORY.

In 1898 (18 May) the General Board of Studies issued a report drawing the attention of the University to the need for teaching in Ancient History, which had been repeatedly pressed upon them by the Special Boards for Classics and for History and Archæology¹. They concluded by recommending "that there be established in the University a Professorship of Ancient History in accordance with the provisions of Statute B," and suggesting regulations. The report was confirmed by Grace 27 October, 1898²; and the first Professor was elected 4 February, 1899.

The connexion of the University with Agricultural Education originated with the following letter³, addressed to the Chancellor by Mr Henry Chaplin, President of the Board of Agriculture:

3, ST JAMES'S SQUARE, LONDON, S.W.

25th July, 1899.

MY DEAR DUKE,

It is no doubt within your knowledge that the Board of Agriculture, under the powers conferred upon it by the Act of last year, is charged with certain duties in respect of Agricultural Education.

The efforts which are being made in the country to afford increased facilities in Agricultural Education are, in one sense, highly encouraging. They show that the Farmers of the present day are becoming alive to the necessity which exists for scientific knowledge in order to enable them to hold their own in these days of keen competition.

While, however, there is this laudable desire among the farming community for greater knowledge of the teachings of Science, the means of satisfying that desire by the aid of highly trained teachers seem at present unequal to the demand.

An agricultural teacher to be successful must be master not only of the ordinary methods of agricultural practice, but must in addition have an intimate acquaintance with those Sciences, such as Chemistry, Botany, Geology, Biology, &c., upon the principles of which a correct and intelligent practice of the Art of Agriculture mainly rests.

It has occurred to me that if the University of Cambridge, rich in the means at its disposal for instruction in the Sciences I have mentioned, was willing to make some provision for the training of such Teachers, it might materially assist the Board of Agriculture in its endeavour to promote Agricultural Education.

It is in your capacity as Chancellor of the University that I venture to approach you on this subject, for I am very confident that if the Senate was disposed to consider this suggestion and to devote some part of its resources in furtherance of this branch of Education, the University would be the means of supplying a want which is at present greatly felt, and would render most valuable assistance to the cause of Agriculture in this country.

I am, [etc.]

HENRY CHAPLIN.

A Syndicate was appointed (6 November) to consider the subject of this letter, and to report to the Senate before the end of the Lent Term, 1891¹. They published an elaborate scheme of teaching and examinations (11 March)², but it was not presented to the Senate for confirmation. A second report (28 May)³, in which the part of the scheme dealing with teaching was remodelled, shared the same fate. In a third report (27 October)⁴ the Syndics were able to announce that the Cambridgeshire County Council was willing, under certain conditions, to make an annual grant of £400 "towards the establishment and maintenance of scientific instruction in subjects bearing upon agriculture"; and suggested the appointment of two lecturers in Agricultural Science, one of whom should be also Director of Agricultural Studies. These proposals, however, were rejected by the Senate 25 February, 1892⁵.

In 1893, stimulated by the action of the County Councils of Cambridgeshire and the adjacent counties, and of the Board of Agriculture, who offered pecuniary grants to start and work the scheme, the Senate agreed "to establish an examination in Agricultural Science, and to grant a diploma connected therewith under the supervision of a special managing Syndicate" (Grace 9 November, 1893)¹.

In 1899 the General Board of Studies, in a report dated 1 February, recommended, among other things, the establishment, for ten years, of a Department of Agriculture under the direction of a Professor². This action was due (1) to a generous offer of £2000 by Sir Walter Gilbey, Bart.; (2) to a promise of increased help from the Board of Agriculture and the above-mentioned County Councils; (3) to an offer of the Drapers' Company contained in the following letter addressed to the Chancellor:

DRAPERS' HALL, LONDON, E.C.
6th January, 1899.

MY LORD DUKE,

I have the honour to inform your Grace that the Court of Assistants of the Drapers' Company, at a meeting held yesterday, resolved to grant from the corporate funds of the Company the sum of eight hundred pounds per annum for ten years, as the stipend of a Professor of Agriculture in the University of Cambridge; it being understood that the University will make all necessary arrangements for the organisation and equipment of a Department of Agriculture and for the maintenance of the Department during the period covered by the Company's subscription. The Court of Assistants hope and believe that the anticipations formed by your Grace and other authorities of the University of the public usefulness and importance of the proposed Department of Agriculture will be fully realised.

I have the honour to be, [etc.]

W. P. SAWYER, *Clerk*³.

The recommendations of this report were confirmed by Grace 2 March, 1899⁴; and the establishment of a Professorship, subject to certain regulations, was approved by Grace

In 1900 (7 June) W. A. Macfarlane-Grieve, M.A., of Clare College, after conference with Professor Somerville, offered to place at the disposal of the University a farm on his estate of about 145 acres, for the purposes of the Department of Agriculture³. This offer was accepted, and thanks returned to Mr Macfarlane-Grieve, in the following Graces, which passed the Senate 14 June, 1900⁴:

1. That the offer contained in the letter, dated 7 June 1900, from W. A. Macfarlane-Grieve, M.A., of Clare College, to the Vice-Chancellor, to place a farm at Impington at the disposal of the University, for the purposes of the Department of Agriculture, free of rent from Michaelmas 1900 until Michaelmas 1909, be gratefully accepted; that the general management of the farm be assigned to the Board of Agricultural Studies; and that the entire cost of its administration be defrayed from the funds at the disposal of the Board.

2. That the Vice-Chancellor be authorised to convey to Mr Macfarlane-Grieve the thanks of the University for his generous benefaction.

LECTURESHIPS AND READERSHIPS

I. BENEFACTION OF SIR ROBERT REDE.

Robert Rede was educated at Buckingham College, the predecessor of Magdalene College, and afterwards became fellow of King's Hall. In 1495 he was knighted; and in 1506 appointed Chief Justice of the Common Pleas. King Henry the Seventh also made him one of his executors. King Henry the Eighth continued him in his judicial office, which he held till his death, 8 January 1518-19¹.

His executors, by deed dated 10 December, 1524 (printed below), purchased of the abbot and convent of Waltham Holy Cross an annuity of twenty marks, to be paid to the Master and Fellows of Jesus College, who bound themselves in their turn to pay £4 to each of three persons, who should read lectures in the common schools of the University on Humanity, Logic, and Philosophy. It is evident, from the language of the deed, that the lectures here referred to are the "ordinary lectures" prescribed in one of the *Statuta Antiqua*² by which all students are required to attend lectures on Terence for two years, on Logic for one year, and on the physics and metaphysics of Aristotle for one year. Sir Robert Rede was the first to give a fixed stipend to the lecturers. The amount of this stipend was probably fixed by that of the Mathematical Lecturer, who, by another of the *Statuta Antiqua*³, received £4 annually from the common chest.

The lecturers or, as they are called in the deed, the readers, were to be appointed in the first instance by the executors, and after their death "to be chosen after the laudable custome and vsage of the Vniuersitie" on 10 June, or within two days next after. The lectures are to be called "free lectures," and "shalbe for euer read franck and free to all manner of schollers of the said Vniuersitie hearing or bounde to hear the same." The readers are to pray for the soul of Sir Robert Rede; and once a year (20 January) "a solempne Anniversarie" is to be celebrated for him in Great S. Mary's Church.

These lecturers, as they were usually appointed on S. Barnabas Day (11 June), were commonly known as "The Barnaby Lecturers¹."

In 1857 the Council of the Senate issued a report (27 April) in which they stated that "for many years past no duties whatever have been discharged by any of the Lecturers" on the foundation of Sir R. Rede. They therefore recommended that application should be made to the Commissioners "to authorize the University to suspend for one year the election of the said three Lecturers²." This report having been confirmed by Grace 30 April, 1857, and a petition under seal having been sent to the Commissioners (28 May), who assented by a document under their seal (13 June) to the suspension prayed for, the Council proposed a new statute (25 November) which was confirmed by the Senate 10 December³. The first lecture under the new arrangement was delivered in the Senate House by Professor Richard Owen, 10 May, 1859.

2. BENEFACTION OF LADY SADLEIR. 1706.

The Lady Sadleir, wife of Sir Edwin Sadleir of Temple Dinsley, Hertfordshire, by Will dated 25 September, 1701, made provision for the stipends of lecturers in Algebra in the different Colleges. Her first husband, William Croone, M.D., is said to have suggested this foundation². Lady Sadleir died 30 September, 1706; and the lectures began in Emmanuel College (to which preference was given in various ways because Dr Croone had been Fellow there) at Michaelmas, 1710. Ultimately lecturers were appointed in all the colleges¹.

The intention of the foundress is thus stated in her Will²:

The true intent and meaning of these Lectures are for the full and clear explication and teaching that part of Mathematical knowledge commonly called Algebra, or the method or rule of contemplating quantities in general, with particular application and use of it in Arithmetic and Geometry, either according to the method of Des Cartes or any other of those who have best improved it since.

The candidates for the lectureships were to be examined in the presence of two Heads of Colleges by "the public Professor of Mathematics," i.e. the Lucasian Professor, to whom the Plumian Professor was subsequently assigned as a colleague. The election was made by the Master and Fellows of the College, and the lecturer held office for ten years. The salary was £20 a year at least, except at Emmanuel College, where it was £30, but the exact amount was to depend on the state of the funds at the disposal of the trustees.

In the Report of the Commissioners appointed 31 August, 1850, attention was drawn to the unsatisfactory state of this endowment³; and when the Council of the Senate undertook the revision of the Statutes, they proposed (21 October, 1857) that the appointments of Lecturers should cease, and that "a new direction should be given to the Endowment by the establishment of a Professorship in the University to be called the Sadlerian Professorship of Pure Mathematics." This statute, having been approved by the Senate 26 November, 1857, was adopted, with some alterations, by the Commissioners, and received the royal assent 7 March, 1860⁴.

The endowment bequeathed by Lady Sadleir for the stipends of her lecturers was conveyed to the University by her trustees, 26 October, 1866⁵.

3. BENEFACTION OF THE ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

In 1886 the Royal Geographical Society sent the following letter¹ to the Vice-Chancellor:

1, SAVILE ROW, BURLINGTON GARDENS, W.
9th December, 1886.

SIR,

The Council of the Royal Geographical Society have on two previous occasions (in 1871 and 1874) addressed memorials of which copies are enclosed, to your predecessors, urging the claims of geography to further recognition by the Universities.

They have recently undertaken an inquiry into the position of geography in English and Continental education. The result has been unfavourable to England; and there has been a general concurrence of testimony, according with their own strong conviction, that the most effectual step towards the removal of our inferiority would be the establishment in our Universities of Chairs or Readerships similar to those held in Germany, viz. by Karl Ritter at Berlin, and Professors Peschel and Richthofen at Leipzig.

So much of human knowledge and human interests is bound up with the relations and interaction of the physical conditions of the earth, the study of which is practically embraced in geography, that there are few branches of education which do not present a geographical aspect, and which do not therefore offer a field for instruction in geography in combination with some other subject.

It is unnecessary to insist upon the close connection of history and geography, or upon the importance of a knowledge of the physical conditions of the various regions of the world, to those who engage in the conduct of our political affairs.

Without the comprehensive study of the earth, for which Englishmen, as a people, have the largest opportunities and the least preparation, physical students would fail to grasp the true character and relations of the various sciences of observation, such as anthropology, geology, botany, meteorology, &c.

It seems to us that the courses of a Reader or Professor in Geography might easily, by consultation with the examiners, be so arranged as to fit in with the requirements of scholars in the Honour Schools, their establishment serving rather to complete the present University system of instruction than to introduce a new element into it.

¹ Reporter, 11 January, 1887, p. 330. The memorials mentioned in the first paragraph have not been preserved.

The Council of the Royal Geographical Society are so fully convinced of the national importance of placing geographical science on a sound footing, and of the necessity of some action at the Universities in order to obtain this result, that they have approved the proposals submitted by their Education Committee, enclosed herewith, which they beg you to take into your favourable consideration, and to submit at the earliest opportunity to the proper authorities.

The length of time for which the Society should undertake to make a contribution out of its funds towards a Geographical Chair or Readership will be further considered whenever your University may be prepared to accept our proposition in principle, and to discuss in detail the plans proposed.

A similar proposal has already been laid before the Vice-Chancellor of Oxford and is now under the consideration of the Hebdomadal Council.

I am, Sir, [etc.]

To the Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge.

RICHARD STRACHEY,
Vice-President, R.G.S.

The Council of the Senate, after consultation with the Society, were able to inform the Senate in a report¹ dated 14 March, 1887, that the Society would contribute £150 annually for five years towards the stipend of a lecturer, and, further, would award, in alternate years, an Exhibition, value £100, or two prizes of £50 and £25, the balance being reserved to provide a fee for the adjudicator.

It was further proposed that the lecturer be appointed by a Committee consisting of representatives of the Council of the Society and an equal number of representatives of the Council of the Senate; and that there should be also a Committee of Management consisting of an equal number of Members of the Senate and of the Society. This report having been confirmed by the Senate 9 June, 1887²; and a preliminary course of lectures having been delivered by Lieut.-Gen. R. Strachey, F.R.S., in the Lent Term, 1888, the first lecturer was appointed 14 June, 1888.

When the first five years were about to expire the Society renewed their proposal for a second term of five years; new regulations for the lecturer were proposed by the Council of the Senate 6 March, 1893¹ and accepted by the Senate 27 April².

In 1897 (3 May) the Vice-Chancellor informed the University that he had received a cheque for £50 from Dr Frithjof Nansen, as a contribution towards the teaching of Geography in the University³.

In 1897 (20 March) the President of the Royal Geographical Society informed the Vice-Chancellor that having regard to other demands upon the finances of the Society, it would not be possible to continue the grant after the expiration of the second period of five years. The General Board of Studies, after consideration of the whole question, and conference with the Society, were able to inform the Senate in a report dated 9 February, 1898⁴, that the contribution would be continued for another five years, if the Lectureship were converted into a Readership. This report was confirmed by the Senate 10 March, 1898⁵.

4. BENEFACTION OF MR C. G. MONTEFIORE.

In 1890 the General Board of Studies appointed Mr Solomon Schechter to be University Lecturer in Talmudic for a term of five years commencing from Michaelmas 1890. In 1891 the following letter was received by the Vice-Chancellor:

COLDEAST, SOUTHAMPTON,
Nov. 15, 1891.

DEAR SIR,

I have been, as you may be aware, in correspondence with Prof. Robertson Smith, in respect to a suggestion to convert Mr Schechter's Lectureship in Rabbinic into a Readership. To that end I should be willing to give an annual sum of £250, to continue so long as Mr Schechter held the office and then to lapse.

² Ibid. 2 May, p. 783.

³ Ibid. 4 May, p. 854.

⁵ Ibid. 15 March, p. 612. Ordinances, ed. 1901, p. 433.

If the Senate approved of this suggestion, I could have a legal document drawn up to the above effect, and I would also make testamentary provision that the £250 a year should still be paid if I die while Mr Schechter is still in office.

Perhaps you will be kind enough to bring the matter before the Senate.

I am, [etc.]

CLAUDE G. MONTEFIORE.

After consideration of this letter, the General Board of Studies, in a report dated 28 November, 1891, made the following recommendation :

That a Readership in Talmudic be established, in place of the present University Lectureship; and that the Reader's annual stipend be £350, provided that £250 per annum be furnished for this purpose by private donation or bequest¹.

This report having been confirmed by Grace, 17 December, 1891², a deed (A) was drawn up between the University and Mr Montefiore, by which the annual sum specified was secured to the University; and subsequently, on the election of Mr Abrahams as Reader in the place of Dr Schechter resigned (17 March, 1902), a second deed (B) secured the same sum during his tenure of office³.

5. BENEFACTION OF SAMUEL SANDARS, M.A.

In July, 1894, the Vice-Chancellor was informed that Samuel Sandars, M.A., of Trinity College, who died 15 June 1894, had bequeathed to the University £2000 free of legacy duty, for the endowment of a Reader in Bibliography. The following is the portion of the codicil of his Will which deals with this bequest :

I bequeath to the University of Cambridge in its corporate capacity the sum of £2,000 free of duty.

And I direct that this sum be invested and that the Income arising therefrom be paid to a Reader in Bibliography such Reader to be elected in the first instance and on each vacancy by the Vice-Chancellor the Master of Trinity College Cambridge when not holding the office of Vice-Chancellor and the other persons for the time being composing the Syndicate of the University Library and such Reader may be appointed for such a period as the elective body shall think fit and specify and shall be subject to removal by such elective body at their discretion.

And I declare that the duty of such Reader shall be to deliver one or more lectures annually or if the elective body shall so determine biennially in some suitable place and on a day and hour to be determined by the Vice-Chancellor for the time being that the lecture shall be delivered during Term and shall embrace the subjects of Bibliography Palæography Typography Bookbinding Book Illustration the science of Books and Manuscripts and the Arts relating thereto.

It is my wish subject to the discretion of the elective body for the time being that the lectures be based on and be illustrated by examples contained in the University Library or the College Libraries at Cambridge.

And I direct that it be a condition of the tenure of the office of Reader that the Reader deliver a written or printed copy of each lecture to the University Library and also to the British Museum Library.

And I declare that in all matters relating to the administration of this Bequest which may have to be determined by the elective body the votes of a majority shall be sufficient to determine the same¹.

The Council of the Senate, in their report² (29 October, 1894) recommending that this bequest be accepted, drew attention to the fact that "the Reader in Bibliography would not have the same duties or the same status as a Reader appointed under Statute B, Chapter VII, but [that] no confusion would arise if it were arranged that his official title should be the Sandars Reader in Bibliography."

This report was confirmed by the Senate, 22 November, 1894³.

6. THE ENGLISH LECTURESHIP FUND.

In 1895 (2 November) the Rev. W. W. Skeat, Professor of Anglo-Saxon, informed the Vice-Chancellor that he had "been for some time engaged in collecting money for the purpose of providing a University Lecturer in English Literature⁴"; and the General Board of Studies, in a Report dated 4 December, 1895⁵, were able to state that he had "received the promise of contributions amounting to £1220," that he desired "to hand over that sum at once to the University, and, at a future time, further sums which he expects to receive for the same purpose."

The Board recommended that this generous offer should be accepted with thanks, and that a University Lectureship

A statement published by the Treasurer of the Fund 23 January, 1902, shewed that the amount received up to that date was £2150².

7. BENEFACTION OF SIR WALTER GILBEY.

The following letter, written to the Vice-Chancellor by Sir Walter Gilbey, President of the Royal Agricultural Society, was published by the Council of the Senate, in a report dated 1 June, 1896³.

CAMBRIDGE HOUSE,
REGENT'S PARK, LONDON, N.W.

May 22, 1896.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I have been much impressed by the little knowledge which appears to exist at present as to the agricultural methods and practices of the past, and as to the ways in which our ancestors faced the problems and difficulties which they, like us, had to face.

It appears to me that it might be an advantage if the landowners of the future, during their most receptive period of existence, could learn something whilst at the University of the agricultural history and literature of the past; and should the Senate of the University of Cambridge be disposed to entertain the idea, I should be glad to be permitted to provide funds for the founding of a Lectureship in this— to my mind—important subject.

If therefore the Senate should favourably consider the matter, I should be happy to place in the hands of Trustees a sufficient sum to give an honorarium of say £25 per annum for a period of twenty⁴ years to a Lecturer on Agricultural History and Economics; and the only condition I would desire to suggest is that the President for the time being of the Royal Agricultural Society, an office which I have the honour to hold at the present moment, should have a voice in the appointment of the Lecturer.

Yours very truly,

WALTER GILBEY.

² Ibid. 28 January, 1902, p. 477.

³ Ibid. 2 June, 1896, p. 843.

⁴ Sir Walter subsequently extended the period of his benefaction to 21 years.

This generous offer, with the regulations proposed by the Council of the Senate in the above report, was accepted by Grace 18 June, 1896¹. The Vice-Chancellor announced 14 December, that the necessary funds had been placed in trust by Sir Walter Gilbey².

8. BENEFACTION OF THE HAUSA ASSOCIATION.

This Lectureship was founded by the Hausa Association in 1896 under the circumstances explained in the following letter:

EMMANUEL COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE.

May 16, 1896.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I write on behalf of the Executive Committee of the Hausa Association to offer to the University £100 per annum for the next three years, for the endowment of a Lectureship in the Hausa language.

The philological interest of the language was recognized many years ago by the University of Oxford when they granted Dr Schon an Honorary Degree in acknowledgment of the value of his work in producing the earliest dictionary of the language. And we are grateful to add that it has within the last twelve months been sufficient to induce the Cambridge University Press to undertake the publication of the store of native Hausa MSS, which our Student Mr C. H. Robinson brought back from his recent visit to Kano.

The language possesses at the same time still greater practical importance. Hausa ranks by the side of Arabic and Suaheli as one of the three most important languages for the development of Africa, and especially that part of it which lies within the British sphere of influence on the West Coast.

And the recent institution of an Examination for Student Interpreterships in Hausa by the Civil Service Commissioners makes it important that there should be some recognized centre of instruction in England to which intending students can be directed.

² Ibid. 15 December, p. 343.

The Hausa Association therefore beg leave to offer to the University the sum of £100 per annum, in the first instance for the next three years, for the endowment of a Lectureship in the Hausa language on such conditions as to appointment and residence as may be hereafter determined.

I remain, [etc.]

J. O. F. MURRAY,

Hon. Sec. of the Hausa Association.

The Council of the Senate recommended the acceptance of this offer in a report dated 15 June, 1896¹, which embodied the above letter, and regulations for the appointment of the Lecturer by a Committee of Selection and for his duties. This report was confirmed by Grace 18 June, 1896².

At the end of the three years specified in the above report the Hausa Lectureship Committee recommended in a report dated 1 December, 1899³, that the Lectureship be continued for a further period of three years, the Hausa Association contributing the necessary funds. This report was confirmed by Grace 14 December, 1899⁴.

The Lecturer, C. H. Robinson, M.A., of Trinity College, was re-appointed for three years from 1 January, 1900, by Grace 15 February, 1900⁵.

In 1899 (3 May) the General Board of Studies informed the Senate that Sir David Lionel Salomons, Bart., of Gonville and Caius College (B.A. 1874, M.A. 1877), had offered to provide a stipend of £50 a year for five years for a University Lecturer in Russian⁶.

10. SIDGWICK LECTURESHIP IN MORAL SCIENCE.

After the death of Professor Henry Sidgwick, 28 August, 1900, some of his friends and colleagues requested the Vice-Chancellor to call a meeting "to consider what steps should be taken to perpetuate at Cambridge the memory of the services rendered by him to the University." This meeting was held at Trinity College Lodge 26 November, 1900¹; and in rather less than a year (22 October, 1901) the executive Committee were able to send the following resolution to the Vice-Chancellor:

That the sum of £2450 subscribed for a Memorial to perpetuate in Cambridge the memory of the late Professor Henry Sidgwick, together with any further sums that may hereafter be contributed for the purpose of increasing the Fund, be offered to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University in trust for the establishment and maintenance of a University Lectureship or other teaching office in Moral Science to be connected with the name of Professor Sidgwick².

This offer was accepted by the following Grace 7 November, 1901:

That the offer received from the Executive Committee of the Subscribers to a Fund for providing a Memorial to perpetuate in Cambridge the memory of the late Professor Henry Sidgwick be accepted, and that the Vice-Chancellor be authorised to convey to the Subscribers the thanks of the University for their generous benefaction³.

The General Board of Studies, in a report dated 20 November, 1901⁴, proposed the regulations now in force, which were accepted by the Senate 12 December, 1901⁵.

SCHOLARSHIPS

1. CRAVEN SCHOLARSHIPS, STUDENTSHIP, AND FUND.

1649.

1. The Scholarships.

John Craven, created Baron Craven of Ryton in Shropshire, 21 March, 1642-43, by Will dated 28 May, 1647 (A), founded and endowed four Scholarships, two at Oxford and two at Cambridge. The Scholars were each to receive an annual stipend of £25 for fourteen years out of the rents of an estate at Cancerne near Chichester, and the residue was to be employed in the redemption of English captives at Algiers or any other place under the dominion of the Turk. At Cambridge the first Scholars were elected 16 May, 1649.

The founder died in 1649, while his elder brother and heir, William Craven, afterwards created Earl Craven, was abroad. He, however, as he tells us in the deed of trust printed below, accepted the provisions of his brother's Will, and paid the Scholars through his agents, until his estates were confiscated by the Parliament, when the payments of necessity fell into arrear. After the Restoration, by deed dated 5 July, 1664 (B) he conveyed the land at Cancerne to trustees "for the better performance of the charitable uses" directed by his brother's Will, and for the payment of the arrears due¹.

Baron Craven's Will does not prescribe the mode of election of the Scholars, or the subjects in which they are to excel; in fact his principal object seems to have been to provide pecuniary help for poor students who deserved it, and for his own kinsfolk.

Regulations for the election of the Oxford Scholars (C) were made by William Craven soon after his brother's death, and accepted by Convocation 26 October, 1649.

In 1681 the Cambridge electors addressed a memorandum to Earl Craven, stating that, in their judgment, constant residence should be required from the Scholars, and Earl Craven fully concurred with them (D); but it was not till 1701 that steps were taken to provide Cambridge with a body of rules similar in character to those drawn for Oxford fifty-two years previously. In 1701, however, a Syndicate was appointed by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 27 November:

Cum Scholares duos liberali admodum exhibitione sustentari curaverit Illustrissimus Comes de Craven, in iis autem eligendis nullam omnino assignaverit methodum; Placeat vobis ut Dignissimus Dominus Procancellarius, Professores Regii, et Orator Publicus per ultimam prædicti Comitum voluntatem Electores hac in parte nominati, una cum reverendis viris Domino Gulielmo Dawes, et Doctore Carolo Roderick¹, legitimis hujusce donationis Fiduciariis, Syndici vestri constituentur; utque Academiæ nomine ipsis, aut ipsorum ad minus quinque (quorum unus sit Dominus Procancellarius) regularum, quæ in posteris electionibus ratæ sint, figendarum potestas plena concedatur².

The rules which they drew up (E) dated 8 December, 1701, determined the lines on which the Scholarships should be in future assigned, and remained in force until 1861. In 1724 a curious point arose. At an election held 26 October in that year it happened that there were two candidates, William Battie of King's College, and Richard Bentley of Trinity College, a nephew of the Master, and that the votes of the electors were equally divided between them—one elector, the Professor of Greek, being absent. Further, a second scrutiny being held, four days later (30 October), Bentley's supporters absented themselves. The case of an equality of votes not having been provided for in the rules, the three electors who had voted for Battie (one of whom was the Vice-Chancellor) drew up a statement of what had occurred (F) which was read to the Senate by the Senior Proctor at the next Congregation, which happened to be held on the day succeeding the second meeting of the electors. The statement having been read the following Grace was carried by 54 votes to 21 :

Cum Regulæ jampridem a Syndicis vestris constitutæ de Forma Electionis duorum Scholarium ex fundatione Honoratissimi Domini Craven, Baronis de Ryton, incertum reliquerint ejusmodi electionis exitum si forte eligentium suffragia in æquales partes fuerint divisa, quod in electione jam pendente accidisse compertum est: Placeat Vobis, ne lis indirempta maneat, ut, quoad præsentem hanc electionem ille e candidatis parem suffragantium numerum habentibus pro electo habeatur, quem Honoratissimus Dominus de Craven, utpote summus et præcipuus in illustri Fundatoris Familia, anteferendum duxerit; in futuris autem electionibus, si eadem quæ nunc suffragiorum paritas contigerit, ea pars prævaleat a qua steterit Dominus Procancellarius¹.

This vote introduced the custom of giving to the Vice-Chancellor a second voice in equally balanced cases, which has since been adopted with relation to other prizes in the University.

In 1819 the Court of Chancery decreed that the number of Scholarships should be increased to ten, with an annual income of £50 (G); in 1841 that the income should be raised to £75 (H); and in 1860 that the number of Scholarships should be twelve and the income £80 (I).

A new statute was proposed by the Council of the Senate 23 November, 1857, for the Craven, Battie, Davies, and Pitt Scholarships in common. This was accepted by the Senate 8 December, 1857, and having been adopted, with some alterations, by the Commissioners, received the royal assent 16 April, 1861².

2. The Studentship and Fund.

In 1885 the Council of the Senate informed the University that the trustees of the foundation of Lord Craven had informed them that the fund shewed a surplus of £590 a year, of which it was presumed that one-half would be assigned to Cambridge. In their report¹, dated 8 June, 1885, they suggested, with regard to this money, that a sum of £200 a year should be devoted to the endowment of a Studentship for the purpose of facilitating advanced study or research away from Cambridge in the Languages, Literature, History, Archaeology, or Art of ancient Greece or Rome, or the Comparative Philology of the Indo-European languages; and that the remainder of the fund might advantageously be devoted to the furtherance of research in the Languages, Literature, History, Archaeology, and Art of ancient Greece and Rome, and the Comparative Philology of the Indo-European languages. This report was confirmed by Grace 18 June, 1885.

In 1886 (8 July) an Order was made in the High Court of Justice (Chancery Division) for the distribution of Lord Craven's benefaction².

B. Deed of trust, dated 5 July, 1664.

This Indenture made the 5th day of July in the 16th year of the reign of...Charles the Second...1664.

5 July, 1664.

Between the Right Honourable William Lord Craven, Baron of Hampsted, Marshall in the County of Berks, of the one part And Sir John Baber of Covent Garden in the County of Middlesex, Knight, Richard Allestry of the University of Oxford D.D., John Fell, D.D., Dean of the Cathedral Church of Christ in Oxford And John Dolben, D.D., Dean of the Collegiate Church of St Peter in Westminster of the other part:

Whereas the Right Honourable John Lord Craven deceased being seized in his demesne of fee simple of and in the Capital Messuage Manor or Lordship of Canserne in the county of Sussex, And of several Messuages [etc.] all lying and being in the parishes of East Grinsted and Hartfield in the said County of Sussex and parish of Cowden in the County of Kent

John Lord Craven held certain estates in Sussex and Kent.

And the said John Lord Craven being of the premises so seized did make his last Will and Testament in writing bearing date the twenty eighth day of May...1647...and thereby did amongst other gifts and legacies give and bequeath in these words following:

Which he bequeathed by Will (as above) 28 May, 1647.

¹ From the Registry of Wills, Somerset House, London.

Richard Spencer, who was made executor, renounced, and administration of the estate devolved on William Lord Craven, his brother. He confirmed the charitable bequests. Though he was abroad he paid the scholars until the usurping government took possession of his estate, and did not pay the scholars.

As soon as he could return to England he was willing to have the charitable bequests carried out. He has sold his Manor of Canserne to Sir John Baber and others.

It is agreed that the trusts mentioned in the Will are all to be performed.

Each scholar shall duly receive £25 per annum by half yearly payments.

And the said John Lord Craven did appoint Richard Spencer Esqr. Executor of his said last Will...; And whereas the said Richard Spencer renounced the said Executorship and the administration of the estate of the said John Lord Craven with the Will annexed being granted to the said William Lord Craven being his brother and next heir

And the said William Lord Craven although he had just cause to take exception to the said Will yet he was content and ready to confirm the said charitable uses appointed out of the said Manor and Farm of Canserne and other the premises; and although he were in parts beyond the seas at the time of the making of the said Will yet by his officers in England he did pay the scholars appointed in both the said Universities according to the intention of the said last Will untill the late usurping power did possess the whole estate of the said William Lord Craven and by colour of a commission of their own making by which they did appoint Commissioners of their own choosing who by colour of the said Commission did enter upon the said Manor and Farm of Canserne...and did dispose thereof to such hands that did determine the rents and profits thereof, and did not pay the said scholars by which means they came much in arrear

And the said William Lord Craven returning into England as soon as possible he might he did regain the possession of the said Manor and premises and hath been ready and willing to have the said charitable uses performed

And whereas the said William Lord Craven for the better performance of the said charitable uses by the assent of both the said Universities by his deed of bargain and sale bearing date with these presents and enrolled in the High Court of Chancery...hath bargained and sold the said Manor of Canserne...unto the said Sir John Baber [and others as above]

Now this Indenture further witnesseth, and it is hereby declared by all and every the parties to these presents that they the said Sir John Baber [and others as above] shall and will for ever hereafter receive and take the Rents Issues and profits of the premises and undertake and perform the trust of the execution of the said charitable uses in the said Will mentioned...and shall and will from time to time free and discharge the said William Lord Craven...from the charge burthen and trouble of the said trust...

And it is further agreed...that the scholars that are from time to time hereafter nominated by the said William Lord Craven during his life time and after his death that are duly elected in either of the said Universities or hereafter shall be duly elected according to the intention of the said last Will shall have their respective stipends of five and twenty pounds per annum duly paid by half yearly payments, That is to say £12. 10. 0. at the end of every six months as the rents of the said Manor and premises can be got and the said scholars in the first place to be satisfied and paid the said pensions or salaries

And whereas by reason that the said Manor and premises in the times of the late Wars were forced out of the possession of the said William Lord Craven there are several arrears of the said stipends due and unpaid to some of the scholars now in place and to others that have left their places As namely to John Whitmore who was duly elected into one of the said scholars places in the said University of Cambridge five years sythence and for all that time hath not received one penny towards his maintenance by reason that Robert Sawyer that was his predecessor was then in arrear five years and a half and was first to be paid by agreement when he surrendered his possession they being both of near kindred to the said John Lord Craven It is therefore further agreed...that the said John Whitmore shall have all his arrears paid as soon as there will be a surplus arise out of the rents and profits of the said Manor and premises over and above the said yearly payment of £100 per annum and to be paid to the said Scholars and thirty pounds per annum for the payment of a rent charge whereunto the premises are liable Arrears due are to be paid.

And that other scholars arrears shall likewise be paid in their turn as the rents and profits of the premises shall be sufficient before any of the said rents and profits shall be applied to redeem Captives for that the said Will doth appoint that the said scholars shall be paid in the first place

The money for the redemption of captives not to be paid till the scholars are all satisfied.

And it is further agreed by and between all and every the parties to these presents that all deeds writings and evidences which do concern the tythe of the said Manor and premises...shall be put into a chest or trunk with three locks which trunk or chest shall be lodged in the Chapel of the Rolls with a superscription wrote upon parchment and fixed upon the top thereof to which trunk or chest there shall be three keys one to be kept by the said Sir John Baber another by the said John Fell and the third by the said John Dolben

All documents to be lodged in the Rolls Chapel.

And at such time as any one of the said Trustees shall die then the three surviving Trustees shall nominate three others and shall convey the said Manor and premises in such manner that all six may have a joint interest in [them] and be liable to perform the said trust...

What is to be done on the death of a trustee.

In witness whereof the parties to these presents interchangeably have hereunto set their hands and seals the day and year first above written¹.

I am also sensible of your great pyety and care to fulfill my brothers Intention in his Will, which, I agree with you, could be noe other then that the Exhibitioners should continue and reside in the Vniuersity, and therefore doe fully concur with you in your Injunction of Residency upon the person now elected, and desire that all future Elections into those Exhibitions may bee subject to such construction and condition.

But as for Robert Pearce, being hee was not expresly limited, when elected, and (as you are pleased to obserue) has but little longer to enjoy it, I am content, if you and the rest of the Electors please, that hee hold it till his time expire. In the interim I shall endeauour to speak with him, haveing some intimation where to find him, and acquaint him with your and my sentiments upon his non-residency. In the account of this affair drawn up by Lancelot Newton, Notary Public and deputy Registry of the University (Registry, Vol. xxxviii. 22. 36—39) the Scholarships are described as "Lord Craven's Exhibitions, commonly called University Scholarships." This is probably the first occasion in which the term "University Scholarships" is used in an official document.

G. Order of the Court of Chancery, 9 March, 1819.

This Court doth order that the annual allowance of twenty-five pounds each to the four poor scholars to be hereafter elected, as mentioned in the Testator's Will, be increased to the annual sum of fifty pounds each; and that the number of scholars be increased by adding six more, to be elected in the same manner as the present scholars are elected, and as directed by the said Testator's Will, that is to say, three scholars from each of the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, with the same annual allowance of fifty pounds each; and that the said annual allowance to the said ten scholars shall cease after the expiration of seven years from the date of their election, or on any such scholars attaining to any preferment of double value; and the same preference to poor scholars of the Testator's name and kindred, as mentioned in his Will, to be preserved with respect to the said six additional scholars¹.

It was further agreed that Dr Battie should be thanked by the Vice-Chancellor (Grace, 2 July, 1744)³.

The deed of gift is dated 30 September, 1747. It was enrolled in the Court of Chancery, 7 November in the same year, and ordered to be sealed 14 November⁴. Dr Battie appointed the first Scholar 18 January, 1747-48.

And it is hereby declared by the said William Battie, and the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars, that the gift, grant, bargain and sale of the said messuage or tenements...mentioned or intended to be hereby made unto the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars, is and are so given,...in trust that the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars, and their successors, shall pay the clear neat yearly rents issues and profits of all the said messuage or tenement, lands and premises, (after deduction of the money they shall from time to time lay out in repairs, and the charges they shall from time to time be put to in collecting the rents or any other matter or thing relating to the said trust,) by two half-yearly payments in the year, the first payment thereof to begin and be made upon the feast-day of Saint Michael the Archangel next ensuing the date hereof, for the term of three years, unto such scholar of the said University of Cambridge as the said William Battie shall by any writing under his hand and seal direct and appoint, and so from time to time as often as any vacancy shall happen during the life of the said William Battie¹:...

And it is hereby further declared by and between the said William Battie and the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars, that the Vice-Chancellor of the said University for the time being shall, after the decease of the said William Battie, and after the expiration of the term for which the scholar so last nominated shall be enabled to hold the said Exhibition, admit such scholar as shall be elected by such members of the said University in such manner and so qualified to take the said Exhibition and to hold the same for such time under and subject to the rules, conditions, limitations, and restrictions specified and declared in the instrument to these presents annexed¹:...

Provided always, and it is hereby further declared, that in case it shall happen after the decease of the said William Battie that such appointment, election and admission of such scholar in manner aforesaid shall not from time to time be made and completed within the space of three calendar months after the death of such scholar, either dying in the possession of the said exhibition, or after the expiration of the time limited and appointed for each such respective scholar to hold and enjoy the said exhibition, that then and in such case it shall and may be lawful to and for the Provost of King's College aforesaid for the time being, by any writing under his hand and seal, and even during his absence from the said college, to nominate and appoint at any time within six calendar months after the time elapsed for such appointment, election and admission as aforesaid, any scholar of the said University to succeed to and hold and enjoy the said Exhibition in such manner and for such time and under and subject to such rules, conditions, limitations, and restrictions as aforesaid; and for want and in default of such nomination and appointment by the said Provost of King's College for the time being within six months as aforesaid, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for the right heirs of the said William Battie to enter into and upon the said messuage or tenement, lands and premises, and to hold and enjoy the same to them and their heirs for ever in as full and ample manner as if these presents had never been made¹:...

After Dr Battie's death the Scholar is to be admitted by the Vice-Chancellor according to the Rules annexed to this deed.

If such admission does not take place within three months after a Scholar's death, the Provost of King's College shall appoint.

Rules for the election of the Scholar.

Electors.

1. The Vice-Chancellor or his Deputy, the Provost of King's College, the King's Professors of Divinity, Law, and Physic, and the two Proctors for the time being, shall be the electors. And in case the Provost of King's College shall be absent from the University at the time of the examination of the candidates, or disabled by sickness or otherwise from attending the same; in such case the Vice-Provost of the said college, or if he is absent from the said University or disabled by sickness or otherwise from attending the said examination, the senior Fellow then resident at college shall have a right to attend the said examination, and shall be one of the electors in the room of the said Provost.

What is to be done on a vacancy.

2. The Vice-Chancellor or his Deputy, upon every vacancy, shall summon the electors then resident in the University to such place as he shall think proper; and if a majority of the said electors thus met together shall then declare by any writing under their hands that the scholarship is vacant, the Vice-Chancellor or his Deputy shall within five days afterwards cause the said declaration to be affixed upon the door of the schools or other publick place belonging to the said University. And the Vice-Chancellor or his Deputy shall likewise, in the same instrument containing the said declaration, appoint a time and place for the examination of the candidates. And no examination or election shall be proceeded upon till twenty-eight days are fully compleat and ended after the affixing the said declaration.

Each candidate to write a Latin letter to each elector.

3. Every candidate shall, within fourteen days after the affixing the said declaration, visit each of the electors then resident in the said University, and shall give notice by a Latin epistle to such elector that he is a candidate: and in case he neglects visiting in manner aforesaid within that time he shall be incapable of being elected.

Disqualifications of candidates.

4. No one shall be capable of being elected who has been admitted into the college he first belonged to above three years, or who is any ways entitled to receive any benefit or advantage from either of the Exhibitions commonly called Lord Craven's Exhibitions. And in case any person after his being elected and admitted to hold and enjoy this scholarship shall be admitted to or any ways entitled to hold and enjoy the said Lord Craven's Exhibition, his right to this scholarship shall thencefrom absolutely cease and determine.

How the candidates are to be examined.

5. The electors and candidates shall be present together at the time and place appointed in the said declaration; and the said candidates shall be examined before one another in the presence of each other by such of the electors who shall then be present, to the intent that the candidates may be witnesses of each other's abilities, and that all partiality may, as much as possible, be prevented in the electors. And no candidate shall be capable of being elected who shall not have been so examined, nor shall any elector have a right to vote who was not present at the said examination.

6. A competent skill in the Greek and Latin languages shall be a necessary qualification. But in respect to the difference of standing of each candidate an equitable consideration shall be had of their improvement in the arts and sciences.

A competent knowledge of Greek and Latin is required.

7. As soon as the examination is ended, the Vice-Chancellor or his Deputy shall declare to the electors then present the time and place he appoints for making the election.

The Vice-Chancellor to fix the time and place of election.

8. He of those so examined who shall be chosen by a majority of the electors then present at the time and place before appointed, and who were present at the said examination, shall be deemed effectually chosen. And in case there should happen an equality of votes upon two or more candidates, he shall be deemed effectually chosen whom the Provost of King's College, if he is then present and was present at the said examination, shall declare for. And in case the said Provost is not then present, or was not present at the said examination, he shall be deemed effectually chosen whom the Vice-Chancellor or his Deputy shall declare for.

How the Scholar is to be elected.

9. Every scholar, during the time of his enjoying this scholarship, shall reside at least nine calendar months every year in the University, except he is a graduate in physick or designs to profess the same, and produces once every year, if required by any of the electors, a certificate signed by one hospital physician in London, or bills of mortality, signifying that the said scholar diligently attends the said physician in visiting the patients of the said hospital; in which case my intention is that the residence of such scholar in the University shall be hereby absolutely dispensed with during his attending upon the said physician. But no other scholar shall be absent above three calendar months every year from the University without leave granted to him, under the hands of the major part of the electors then present in the University: and in case he absents himself for a longer time without such leave his right to this scholarship shall immediately cease and determine. But my intention and desire is that the electors shall not be difficult in granting such leave provided it is not longer than for one year at once, which leave however may be renewed in like manner from year to year in case the scholar can satisfy a major part of the electors then present in the University that he is prosecuting his studies during such his absence, and in case that he brings, when required by any of the electors, a certificate of his good behaviour under the hands of three or more neighbouring clergymen of the Church of England, provided likewise he continues a member of the University.

Residence of the Scholars.

10. When any scholar shall have been admitted nine years into the college to which he first belonged, or shall have obtained any ecclesiastical benefice or preferment, his right to enjoy this scholarship shall then cease and determine. But it shall and may be lawful nevertheless for any scholar to continue to hold and enjoy this scholarship for such time as aforesaid, notwithstanding such scholar shall after such election and admission to the same have obtained a fellowship in some one college of the University of Cambridge.

How long a Scholarship may be held.

What is to be done if the Provost of King's College be Vice-Chancellor.

11. If the Provost of King's College shall happen to be Vice-Chancellor at the time of the said examination and election, in such case the Vice-Provost of King's College, or if he is absent or otherwise disabled from attending the same, the senior Fellow then resident in the said college shall be one of the electors, and the Vice-Chancellor, if there should happen an equality of votes, shall, in this case, have a casting vote.

The Provost to interpret these rules.

12. If any doubt shall arise after my decease touching the intent and meaning of any of the aforesaid rules, or of such as I may hereafter give, which I reserve to myself to do, the same shall be interpreted and determined by the Provost of King's College, and his determination shall be acquiesced in by the electors and scholars.

W. BATTIE¹.

3. DAVIES SCHOLARSHIP.

1810.

Dr Jonathan Davies², sometime Fellow of King's College, Headmaster and Provost of Eton College, by Will dated 24 July, 1804, made the following bequest to the University:

I give and bequeath to the Vice Chancellor for the time being and to the Provost of King's College in the University of Cambridge in trust one thousand pounds of my same three per cents. to form a Scholarship to be called Dr Davies's University Scholarship on the same footing with those called the Craven University Scholarships for the greatest proficient in classical learning the candidates to be the same the same examiners only with the addition of the Provost of King's College.

This I do remembering that I was so fortunate as to get one of the said University Scholarships and as probably the considerations of my circumstances (recommended by the Founder or Founders of those Scholarships) weighed greatly in my favour, I will that the same circumstances be attended to in the disposal of my Scholarship by the Examiners and that it be enjoined by the candidate on whom the majority of the examiners agree to bestow it the same number of years as the above mentioned Craven Scholarships³.

Dr Davies died 5 December, 1809, and his Will was proved 29 January, 1810. The bequest was not accepted by Grace. The first Scholar was elected 19 December, 1810.

4. BELL SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Reverend William Bell¹, sometime Fellow of Magdalene College, B.A. 1753, M.A. 1756, D.D. by royal mandate, 1767, Prebendary of Westminster 1765 to his death 29 September, 1816, founded eight Scholarships according to the provisions set forth in the following deed (A), dated 18 July, 1810. It was ordered to be sealed by Grace, 30 July²; and inrolled in Chancery 14 August, in the same year.

The seventh regulation directs that no candidate is to be permitted to sit who "is manifestly well able to bear his own expenses." This regulation was altered by Mr Bell in 1812, and a new regulation (B), endorsed by him on the deed of gift, was ordered to be sealed 6 February in that year³.

A new statute for these Scholarships was framed by the Council of the Senate, 23 November, 1857; confirmed (with some changes) 3 December, 1857; and approved by the Queen in Council 6 April, 1858⁴.

In 1858 (13 December) the Council of the Senate proposed to substitute for the ex officio electors named by the Founder "four members of the Senate appointed by Grace of the Senate at the last Congregation in November in every year." This recommendation was rejected, 10 February, 1859; and the Council then proposed (11 February) the regulations now in force, which were accepted by the Senate 17 February, 1859⁵. By these regulations the Vice-Chancellor, the Regius Professor of Divinity, and the Lucasian Professor of Mathematics are to examine ex officio, with two members of the Senate appointed by Grace.

In 1886 (8 February) the Council of the Senate published a report¹ in which they recommended (among other things) that of the three examiners appointed for this Scholarship (counting the Vice-Chancellor's deputy as one) "two should examine, specially but not of necessity exclusively, in Classics, and one in Mathematics." This recommendation was confirmed by Grace, 11 March, 1886².

A. Deed of foundation, dated 18 July, 1810.

1810.

This Indenture, made the eighteenth day of July in the fiftieth year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord George the Third,...and in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and ten, between the Reverend William Bell, Doctor in Divinity, Prebendary of the Collegiate Church of St. Peter in Westminster, of the one part; and the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, of the other part.

Cambridge.

Whereas, in order to give encouragement to learning, and to assist Clergymen of the Church of England in sending their sons to the University, whose circumstances and situations are altogether such as not to enable them to bear the whole of that expense, as well as to assist orphans of Clergymen under similar circumstances in obtaining the benefit of an University education, the said William Bell hath transferred the sum of fifteen thousand two hundred pounds three per cent. consolidated Bank annuities, in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, to the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge.

The Univer-

² Ibid. 16 March, p. 510.

2. The said trustees shall cause to be elected from among the undergraduates of the said University eight persons; namely, two of the third year, two of the second year, and four of the first year of standing, who shall be sons of Clergymen of the Church of England, circumstanced as is above described, or orphans of Clergymen similarly circumstanced, to be scholars upon this foundation, and they shall be elected at the following times, and under the following limitations.

What undergraduates may be elected.

1810. The first election shall take place between the twelfth day of November and the twenty-fifth day of December in this present year one thousand eight hundred and ten, when there shall be elected two Scholars of the third year, that is, in their third year of standing, who were admitted between the commencements of one thousand eight hundred and seven and one thousand eight hundred and eight, and the profits of their scholarships shall commence from the sixth day of July in this present year one thousand eight hundred and ten, and be continued for two years, that is to the sixth day of July one thousand eight hundred and twelve, when these scholars will have become complete Bachelors of Arts; and at the same time there shall likewise be elected two other scholars, called scholars of the second year, who were admitted between the commencements of one thousand eight hundred and eight and one thousand eight hundred and nine, and the profits of their scholarships shall commence also from the sixth of July in this present year one thousand eight hundred and ten, and be continued for three years, that is, to the sixth of July one thousand eight hundred and thirteen, when these scholars likewise will have become complete Bachelors of Arts.

Dates of election and length of tenure.
In 1810.

1811. The second election shall take place on the Friday after Midlent Sunday one thousand eight hundred and eleven, when there shall be elected two other scholars, called scholars of the first year, who were admitted between the commencements of one thousand eight hundred and nine and one thousand eight hundred and ten, and the profits of their scholarships shall commence also from the sixth day of July of the present year one thousand eight hundred and ten, and be continued for four years, that is, to the sixth of July one thousand eight hundred and fourteen, when these scholars likewise will have become complete Bachelors of Arts.

1812. The third election shall take place on the Friday after Midlent Sunday one thousand eight hundred and twelve, when there shall be elected two other scholars of the first year, who were admitted between the commencements of one thousand eight hundred and ten and one thousand eight hundred and eleven, and the profits of their scholarships shall commence from the sixth of July one thousand eight hundred and eleven, and be continued for four years, that is, to the sixth of July one thousand eight hundred and fifteen, when these scholars likewise will have become complete Bachelors of Arts.

In 1812.

1813. The fourth election shall take place on the Friday after Midlent Sunday one thousand eight hundred and thirteen, when there shall be elected two other scholars of the first year to succeed the two scholars of the third year, who were two of the four scholars first chosen, according to the same plan, and under the same conditions as before; and in like manner, two scholars of the first year shall be elected on the Friday after Midlent Sunday in every year after for ever, to succeed the two scholars whose profits shall have ceased on the sixth day of July preceding.

In 1813.

Electors.

3. It is the particular request of the said William Bell, that the Vice-Chancellor, the Regius Professor of Divinity, the Regius Professor of Civil Law, the Lucasian Professor of Mathematics, and the Public Orator will take the trouble of electing the said scholars in such manner as they shall determine upon. And in case of the absence or illness of either of the said electors, it is the request of the said William Bell that a deputy may be chosen by a Grace of the Senate. And if it shall at any time happen that two of the said offices constituting an elector shall be held by one and the same person, it is also the request of the said William Bell that a substitute for the elector in respect of the office last coming to him may be also appointed by a Grace of the Senate.

No Scholars to be elected from King's College or Trinity Hall. Two of the same family forbidden.

4. The said scholars shall not be elected from King's College or from Trinity Hall, but from every other college in the University without favour or partiality to any college.

5. No person shall ever have two sons scholars, nor shall there be two orphan brothers scholars upon this foundation at one and the same time.

Every Scholar must promise to proceed to B.A.

6. Every scholar elected on this foundation shall promise to take the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the most regular manner by performing the exercises, and undergoing the examinations appointed by the University for that purpose, which promise shall be written in a book and signed by him.

No undergraduate may be a candidate who is able to bear his own expenses.

7. As it is the special object of this foundation, upon a strict attention to which its real utility will ultimately depend, to assist such Clergymen, and such only, as well as such orphans, and such only, as really stand in need of assistance, the said electors shall carefully make inquiry into the situation and circumstances of all those undergraduates who may be desirous of obtaining these scholarships, and shall not permit any one to sit as a candidate for them who is manifestly well able to bear his own expenses, and of such as they shall judge it proper to admit to sit as candidates, they shall prefer those, when personal merits are equal, who they are conscientiously convinced, all circumstances considered, stand most in need of assistance. In his eligendis praeicipua ratio semper habeatur ingenii, doctrinae, virtutis, et inopiae; ut quo magis quisque ex eligendorum numero his rebus caeteros antecellat, eo magis, ut aequum est, praeferatur.

Bankers.

8. The above-named trustees shall empower the same banking firm in London to receive the dividends arising on the said Bank annuities as they empower to receive the dividends on the other stocks belonging to the University. And they shall make half-yearly payments to the respective college tutors of the said scholars for the use of the scholars themselves in the following manner, that is to say:

Half-yearly payments to the Scholars.

How much each Scholar is to receive.

9. That so long as the property-tax continues to be levied at the rate of 10 per cent., and the clear annual income arising from the said stock is no more than four hundred and ten pounds and eight shillings, they shall pay the sum of fifty pounds in each year to each of the said scholars, reserving in their hands annually the sum of ten pounds and eight shillings; and when the property-tax shall be either lessened, or suspended, or increased, they shall divide the whole clear income arising from the said stock equally between the said scholars, except only reserving always the sum of ten pounds. And the said sum of ten pounds so reserved shall be applied to the purpose of defraying the expense of a dinner for the electors, which dinner shall be had either on the day of the annual election of the scholars, or on such other day very shortly after it as the electors shall appoint. And the eight shillings which at the present rate of the property-tax will remain, shall be applied to whatever purpose the electors shall approve.

11. It is the particular request of the said William Bell that the electors of the scholars may be appointed auditors of the accounts of this institution.

The electors to be auditors.

12. If it shall happen that any scholar elected on this foundation shall die while he is only in his third year of standing or sooner, the said electors shall as soon as may be proceed to elect another scholar qualified as already described, of the same year in standing with the deceased, who shall enjoy the profits of his scholarship as long as the deceased scholar would have enjoyed them. But if any scholar should happen to die when only one half-yearly payment from his scholarship remains unpaid to him, that payment shall be made to the college tutor of the deceased scholar for the payment of any debts he may have left, or for the use of his father or family.

What is to happen if a scholar dies.

13. If it shall happen that any scholar elected on this foundation shall degrade, or determine to go out in what is called a bye-term, or declare for law, or be rusticated or expelled, his scholarship shall be ipso facto vacant immediately upon such degrading, determining to go out in a bye-term, declaring for law, rustication or expulsion, and any payment from his scholarship which may be actually due to him at the time of such degrading, determining to go out in a bye-term, declaring for law, rustication or expulsion, shall be forfeited and divided equally among the other scholars, and if such vacating of a scholarship shall take place either in the third year of standing of the vacating scholar, or sooner, the electors shall as soon as may be elect another scholar qualified as above required, and of the same standing with the former, who shall enjoy the profits of his scholarship for the same period as the vacating scholar would have enjoyed them; but if such vacancy shall take place when only one half-yearly payment from his scholarship remains unpaid to the vacating scholar, that payment shall be divided equally among the other scholars.

What is to happen if a scholar degrades or is in any way irregular.

In certain cases sons of laymen may be elected.

14. In case it shall at any time happen that no sons or orphans of Clergymen circumstanced as this foundation requires shall be found desirous of being elected to these scholarships, or if any son or orphan of a clergyman admitted to sit as a candidate for them shall be deemed by the electors unfit to be elected, and no other son or orphan of a Clergyman qualified as above required shall be found to fill the vacancy, then, and in these cases only, the electors shall elect sons of laymen, being undergraduates who stand in need of assistance, not sons of Clergymen who are well able to bear their own expenses.

Cost of printing the foundation deed to be defrayed out of the trust-fund.

15. If the electors shall deem it expedient to print copies of, or extracts from this Foundation-Deed, to be given to the heads and tutors of the several colleges from which the scholars are to be elected, as well as to the scholars themselves, they are hereby authorised to pay the expense occasioned by it by an equal deduction from the next half-yearly payment to the scholars.

The deed to be read at every meeting for the election of scholars.

16. When the electors meet to elect the scholars, the business shall always be entered upon by having this Foundation-Deed read aloud by one of the electors to the rest.

In witness whereof the said William Bell hath hereunto set his hand and seal, and the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars their corporate seal, the day and year first above written¹.

B. The seventh regulation, as altered, 1812.

The pecuniary position of candidates need not be considered.

Whereas, by the seventh clause in the within written Foundation Deed, it is agreed and ordered that the electors to the Scholarships by the same Indenture founded shall not permit any one to sit as a candidate for them, who is manifestly well able to bear his own expenses: Now it is hereby agreed and ordered, that the said limitation shall from henceforth be repealed, and that sons and orphans of Clergymen shall be allowed to sit as candidates for the said scholarships without any objection being made to them on account of their pecuniary circumstances. But that in electing the scholars from among the candidates, the electors shall govern themselves conscientiously by the following rule, so that the different circumstances of the candidates, as well as their merits, shall be allowed their due weight and influence in the choice: In his eligendis praeipua ratio semper habeatur ingenii, doctrinae, virtutis, et inopiae; ut quo magis quisque ex eligendorum numero his rebus antecellat, eo magis, ut aequum est, praeferatur.

This endorsement to be read with the foundation-deed.

And whereas, in the said Foundation-Deed it is directed that whenever the electors meet to elect the scholars, the business shall be entered upon by having the Foundation-Deed read aloud by one of the electors to the rest: Now it is hereby directed that as often as the said Foundation-Deed is so read, this endorsement shall be read in the same manner immediately after it.

In witness whereof the said William Bell hath hereunto set his hand and seal, and the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars their corporate seal, the twenty-ninth day of January, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and twelve.

29 January.

5. PITT SCHOLARSHIP. 1813.

The Committee of resident Members of the Senate appointed 24 March, 1806, to collect subscriptions for a statue of the Right Honourable William Pitt, to be placed in the Senate-House, finding that the amount subscribed was considerably in excess of that required for the statue, decided, 7 April, 1813, to make the offer to the University contained in the following letter², addressed to the Vice-Chancellor, and read by him to the Senate, 8 April, 1813:

SIR,

The Committee for managing the subscription for Mr Pitt's Statue beg leave to offer to the University of Cambridge the sum of one thousand pounds to found a scholarship, to be entitled The Pitt Scholarship, on the same general plan as those founded by Lord Craven.

Signed by order of the Committee,

J. BROWN³, Secretary.

A Grace was then read, and passed on the following day, thanking the Committee, and appointing a Syndicate to consider what course should be taken with regard to the gift. Before this Syndicate had time to report, the London Pitt Club offered £500 to augment the endowment. A second Grace was therefore passed (19 May) accepting this

The following Rules (A), drawn up by the Syndicate, were read to the Senate 9 December, 1813, and approved by Grace on the same day².

A new statute for this scholarship and for the Craven, Battie, and Davies in common, was proposed by the Council of the Senate, 23 November, 1857, accepted by the Senate 8 December, and, having been adopted by the Commissioners, received the royal assent, 16 April, 1861.

Capital to be invested in the public funds.

1. The sum of £1,000 given by the subscribers to Mr Pitt's Statue for the purpose of founding the Pitt Scholarship, and which has since been augmented by a donation of £500 from the Pitt Club in London, shall be placed in the publick Funds, until the Syndics shall be able to vest it in land; and the clear annual income arising from it shall be paid to the Pitt Scholar.

Electors.

2. The Vice-Chancellor or his deputy, the Publick Orator, the Greek Professor, and two members of the Senate, to be appointed by the different colleges in their turns, shall be the electors. But, if the Vice-Chancellor, the Publick Orator, and the Greek Professor, or any two of them, be members of the same college, no elector in that case shall be appointed by that college according to the cycle of Proctors, but the appointment shall be made by the University. Or, if the Publick Orator or the Greek Professor shall be prevented by illness or otherwise from attending the examination, or if the colleges shall have neglected to signify to the Vice-Chancellor the appointment of the electors according to their respective turns, then Deputies shall be appointed by Grace.

8. Every scholar who shall obtain any ecclesiastical benefice or preferment, or shall be of Master of Arts standing, shall vacate his scholarship¹.

6. TYRWHITT SCHOLARSHIPS.

1817.

The Reverend Robert Tyrwhitt, sometime Fellow of Jesus College, B.A. 1757, M.A. 1760, who died 25 March, 1817², made the following bequest to the University, by Will dated 19 September, 1815:

...I give and bequeath unto the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, the principal sum of four thousand pounds stock in the Navy five per cent. Annuities In trust for the sole encouragement of a general study of the Hebrew Language in the said University¹.

Some delay occurred in settling Mr Tyrwhitt's affairs², and the Senate was not informed officially of the bequest until the end of the year, when (3 December) a Grace was passed appointing a Syndicate to make regulations, with the proviso that they should report within three months³. The appointment of this Syndicate implies acceptance of the bequest by the University.

The Regulations prepared by the Syndicate (A), are dated 18 February, and were approved by Grace 8 April, 1818. They recommend the founding of three Scholarships, with rules for the election and the Scholars, and also the setting apart a fifth portion of the income to form a fund for the promotion of Hebrew learning. These regulations were to remain in force for six years from 1 June, 1819. The first Scholar was elected in that year.

In 1825 (20 April) a Syndicate was appointed to revise the Regulations, on the understanding that they completed their work before Commencement⁴. The new code, however, is dated 6 March, and was confirmed by Grace 14 March, 1826⁵. The most important change is that six Scholars are to be elected, two in each year, who are to be called Scholars of the first class and second class respectively. These regulations were to remain in force till 1 January, 1830. A fresh revision then took place, and new rules, dated 22 April, were approved by Grace 12 May⁶, but the changes are not of sufficient importance to make it necessary to print them⁷.

⁶ Grace Book N, p. 290.

⁷ They are printed in the University Calendar for the years during which they were in force.

They were to remain in force till the first Congregation in the Lent Term, 1836, when the usual Grace for a revising Syndicate passed the Senate (2 March), and their edition of the regulations was approved by Grace 24 March. This was the last complete revision, for, 15 December, 1841, it was agreed that the existing Rules should remain in force until it was the pleasure of the Senate to alter them¹.

In 1857, in consequence of a diminution in the income of the fund, it was proposed by a Syndicate appointed 19 March, to suppress three scholarships, and to establish instead a Prize in Arabic and Syriac of the value of £15; but the report proposing this change, dated 24 March, was rejected (30 April) by 29 Non Placet to 11 Placet.

Soon afterwards a Committee was formed to collect subscriptions with a view to augmenting the original capital, and in 1862 the Vice-Chancellor was able to inform the Senate that the Scholarships could in future be maintained at the rate contemplated in 1836 (B).

14. That the first and second elected Scholars shall not during the first and second year receive a larger proportion of the proceeds of the bequest than they would have received on the supposition that all the Scholarships were then filled, and that in the mean time the unappropriated surplus of the four fifths of the proceeds be invested, as it arises, in the same Stock in which the Benefaction now stands; to be applied to the general purposes of the Bequest.

15. That the accounts of this Bequest shall be kept distinct from the general accounts of the University and shall be annually audited by the Electors at the election of the Scholars; and being so audited shall be laid on the Registrary's table in the Senate House at the next Congregation, for the inspection of the Senate.

B. Augmentation Fund, 1862.

QUEENS' COLLEGE LODGE,
June 4, 1862.

The Vice-Chancellor begs leave to inform the Members of the Senate that he has received from the Rev. Peter Hamnett Mason, M.A., Fellow of St John's College, the Treasurer of a Committee of Subscribers to a Fund for the Augmentation of Mr Tyrwhitt's Benefaction for the Encouragement of Hebrew Learning, a Resolution of the Committee in the following terms:

"The Accounts of the Subscription Fund having been examined, it was found that the whole amounted to £400 Exchequer Bills and £86.

Agreed, that the above amounts be offered to the University in Augmentation of the Tyrwhitt's Hebrew Scholarships Fund."

The Vice-Chancellor wishes to state for the information of Members of the Senate that in consequence of successive reductions of the Interest of the Stock in which Mr Tyrwhitt's Benefaction was invested, not more than £135 per annum is now received by the University on behalf of the Scholarships, whereas the third of the Regulations decreed by the Senate on the 29th of April, 1836, provides, "that out of the net annual proceeds of Mr Tyrwhitt's Benefaction the sum of £150 be divided among the Six Scholars." It was to meet this deficiency in the Fund that the Subscription was opened.

Mr Tyrwhitt's Benefaction, consisting in the first instance of £3,600 Navy 5 per Cents. and augmented by successive purchases of Stock from accumulations of unappropriated Income, is now represented by £4,500 New 3 per Cents. The Vice-Chancellor proposes to invest a Cash Balance of £71. 6s. 1d. now standing at the credit of this Fund in the same Stock on account of the Hebrew Scholarships Fund.

When the produce of the Subscription Fund, now offered for the acceptance of the University, shall have been similarly invested, an income will be provided more than sufficient to maintain the Scholarships at the rate proposed by the Grace of April 29, 1836.

7. CROSSE SCHOLARSHIPS.

The Reverend John Crosse¹, B.A. Oxford, 1768, incorporated B.A. at King's College, Cambridge, 1776, M.A. 1776, Vicar of Bradford, Yorkshire, 1784–1816, who died 17 June, 1816, by Will dated 15 June, 1816, bequeathed a portion of his personalty to George Buxton Browne of Halifax, “earnestly requesting and entreating him to expend the same in furthering and promoting the Cause of true Religion among the Inhabitants of Great Britain and Ireland as to him may appear most eligible.”

The settlement of Mr Crosse's estate was delayed for some years by legal formalities, and the foundation of Theological Scholarships with part of the above funds did not come formally before the University until 1832; but before that date some correspondence had taken place between Mr Browne, the Reverend Ch. Musgrave, B.D., sometime Fellow of Trinity College, and then Vicar of Halifax, and some persons at Cambridge. It may be assumed that Mr Musgrave suggested the idea of the Scholarships, if he did not actually draw up the scheme subsequently submitted to the Senate².

The regulations had been prepared some time before they were submitted to the Senate, for in a letter dated 29 October, 1832, the Vice-Chancellor tells his correspondent that “last week the proposals for instituting three theological Scholarships in the University were submitted to the Heads of Colleges then in residence for their consideration¹”; and he did not inform the Senate that £2000, free of legacy duty, would be transferred to the University “for the purpose of founding three Theological Scholarships to be under the following regulations,” until 30 November, 1832.

The gift was accepted, and the regulations approved, by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 4 December, 1832. It throws the responsibility for the regulations upon Mr Browne:

A deed of trust (A) dated 14 August, 1833, was executed between Mr Browne, as executor to Mr Crosse, and the University, with the approval of the Court of Chancery. It was sealed on the same day².

A statute for these Scholarships was confirmed by the Senate 3 December, 1857, and approved by the Queen in Council 6 April, 1858³. A new statute was approved by the Queen in Council 8 February, 1895⁴.

New regulations were framed by the electors 5 February, 1897, and the report containing them was confirmed by the Senate 25 February, 1897⁵.

8. THOMAS BARNES SCHOLARSHIP.

In 1844 John Barnes, of the Middle Temple, offered to place £2000 3 p.c. consols in the names of certain trustees, upon trust, that during the life of his sister Anne Barnes, the annual income thereof might be applied to her use, and that after her death the capital might be transferred to the University, upon trust, for the foundation of a Scholarship, to be called "The Thomas Barnes Scholarship," in memory of his brother Thomas Barnes.

Mr Thomas Barnes had been educated at Christ's Hospital, and at Pembroke College (B.A. 1808, M.A. 1811). In 1817 he became editor of The Times newspaper, a post which he held till his death, 7 May, 1841¹.

The Vice-Chancellor issued a notice of the proposed Scholarship, with Regulations (A) 1 February, 1844. The offer was accepted by the following Grace, 7 February, 1844:

Placeat Vobis accipere Exhibitionem legibus modo recitatis fundandam, et nomine Thomæ Barnes designandam².

The deed of trust (B) is dated 19 February, 1844; but there is no evidence to shew that the University seal was ever affixed to it.

Miss Barnes died in 1862, but the transfer of the stock was delayed, and the first Scholar was not elected till 5 April, 1867.

In the Michaelmas term of that year the Council of the Senate issued a report (C) dated 24 October, in which they recommend an application to the Court of Chancery for leave to make certain changes in the regulations. This report was confirmed by Grace 31 October, 1867³, and the petition to the Lord Chancellor was directed to be sealed 6 February, 1868⁴. The Order of the Court (D), assenting to the proposed changes, is dated 29 February, 1868.

In 1886 it was decided (Grace 11 March) that the examiners for this Scholarship should be those appointed to examine for the Bell Scholarships⁵.

C. Report of the Council of the Senate, dated 24 October, 1867.

The Barnes Scholarship was accepted by the Senate 7 February, 1844; but the endowment, being a reversion after a life interest, did not take effect until last year², when, for the first time, a Scholar was elected.

The Regulations (which were laid before the Senate 1 February, 1844, and republished 3 December, 1866) are almost precisely the same as those originally framed for the Bell Scholarships.

By Regulation 3 of the Barnes Scholarship it is provided;

“That the Candidates for the Scholarship shall be undergraduates in their first year, that is to say, undergraduates who shall have been admitted between the end of the then last preceding Easter Term, and the end of the then last preceding Easter Term but one.”

In consequence of the alterations in the Statutes of the University the clauses in the above Regulation are in many cases contradictory.

It seems to the Council desirable that instead of the Regulation above mentioned, the following Regulation, similar to that now in force for the Bell Scholarships, be substituted, viz. :

“That the Candidates for the Barnes Scholarship shall be undergraduates in their first year; and that undergraduates shall be deemed to be in their first year, if of not more than one year’s standing from the time of their first residence.”

It seems also desirable that the following Regulation with regard to the Electors, taken from the Statute for the Bell Scholarships, should be added to those for the Barnes Scholarship; viz.

¹ Registry of the University, Box G, No. 23.

² The words should be “this year.”

“That the University shall have power to alter and determine from time to time, by Grace of the Senate, the Regulations respecting the persons who are to examine the Candidates and elect the Scholars.”

The Council recommend that an application be made to the Court of Chancery for these purposes.

D. Order of the Court of Chancery, dated
29 February, 1868.

Upon the Petition of The Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge and of The Reverend James Cartmell D.D. Master of Christ's College and Henry Wilkinson Cookson D.D. Master of Saint Peter's College in the same University on the 21st February 1868 preferred unto The Right Honourable the Lord High Chancellor of Great Britain and upon hearing Counsel for the Petitioners and upon reading the said Petition which has been subscribed by the Petitioners Henry Wilkinson Cookson and James Cartmell and to which the Common Seal of the said University of Cambridge has been affixed This Court doth Order that the Senate of the University of Cambridge be at liberty to insert in the regulations upon which the future elections of Scholars upon the foundation of John Barnes in the Petition named are to be conducted in lieu of the fourth regulation contained in the Indenture of the 19th February 1844 in the Petition mentioned a regulation corresponding with the third clause of the additional Statute respecting the Bell Scholarship in the Petition mentioned and to make a similar alteration in the tenth regulation contained in the said Indenture so far as it relates to the qualification of the undergraduates to whom the said Scholarship is in the events therein mentioned to be thrown open and also to insert in lieu of the third regulation in the said Indenture contained a regulation corresponding with Clause (one) of the said Additional Statute¹.

10. LIGHTFOOT SCHOLARSHIPS. 1870.

These Scholarships were offered to the University in 1870 by the Reverend Joseph Barber Lightfoot, D.D., B.A. 1851; M.A. 1854; D.D. 1864; sometime Fellow of Trinity College; Hulsean Professor of Divinity 1861-75; Bishop of Durham 1879-90. The offer was accompanied by the following letter:

TRINITY COLLEGE,

October 25, 1870.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

May I trouble you to lay the accompanying scheme before the Council, in order that, if approved, it may be submitted to the Senate for acceptance.

The scheme has not been drawn up hastily or without consultation: but it is probable that I have overlooked some points of importance and that improvements may be suggested.

I have long felt that the study of history does not receive proper encouragement in this University; and at the present time, when the just demands of Natural Science are so eagerly urged, there is great danger that an instrument of education, which I venture to consider even more important, may be forgotten.

With the desire of meeting this want to some extent, I make the offer to which the scheme refers. At the same time I have ventured to stipulate that especial, though not exclusive, attention shall be paid to Ecclesiastical History, not only because my connexion with the Theological faculty gives it a direct claim upon me, but also because I regard it, when properly treated, as the most important and instructive branch of historical study.

I am, [etc.]

J. B. LIGHTFOOT.

The Council of the Senate thereupon informed the Senate¹ (31 October) that Dr Lightfoot had offered to transfer to the University a sum of £4500 (viz. £2000 Madras Irrigation Guaranteed Stock, £1500 East Indian Railway Debentures, and £500 Bombay and Baroda Railway Debentures, all bearing interest 5 per cent., together with £500 in the 3 per cent. consols) for the purpose of founding Scholarships for the encouragement of the study of History and more especially of Ecclesiastical History, under the conditions contained in the following regulations, which it may be presumed, were drawn up by Dr Lightfoot himself:

This report was confirmed 24 November, 1870; and the letter of thanks, written by the Public Orator, was ordered to be sealed 8 December. The regulations as then confirmed, remained in force until 1896, when a change in Regulations (11) and (14) was proposed by the Council of the Senate (7 December)¹ and accepted by the Senate 11 February, 1897.

11. ABBOTT'S SCHOLARSHIPS.

1871.

These Scholarships were founded in accordance with the Will of Mr John Abbott, a retired merchant of Halifax, who died 13 May, 1870. His Will is dated 19 February, 1867.

The following extract concerns the Scholarships:

...I give and bequeath to Sir Francis Crossley Baronet of Somerleyton in the County of Suffolk and of Belle Vue in the parish of Halifax aforesaid Henry Wright of Warley in the parish of Halifax aforesaid Gentleman William Lawrence Bowerbank of Ashgrove in Southowram in the said parish of Halifax Woolstapler and John Whiteley Ward of South Royd in Skircoat in the said parish of Halifax Esquire the sum of Ten thousand pounds sterling

Upon trust that they or the survivors or survivor of them or the executors administrators or assigns of such survivor or other the Trustees or Trustee for the time being of this my Will do and shall immediately after my decease pay and apply the same in the founding of three Scholarships at the University of Oxford and two Scholarships at the University of Cambridge the same to be given to the Universities respectively or to any particular College or Colleges therein respectively at the absolute discretion of my said Trustees or Trustee for the time being

It is my wish that the said Scholarships shall be given to undergraduates who have not kept more than three terms at the University or College to which they shall be respectively given and that no one shall hold one for more than three years from his appointment and it is my wish in founding the said Scholarships to give encouragement to learning and to assist Clergymen of the Church of England in sending their sons to the Universities whose circumstances are such as not to enable them to bear the whole of that expense as well as to assist Orphans of Clergymen under similar circumstances in obtaining the benefit of an University education

And in the appointment of Scholars I should other things being equal wish that candidates born in the West Riding of the County of York should have the preference

I should also wish the said Scholarships to be called Abbott's Scholarships¹.

After Mr Abbott's death his executors consulted the Ven. Charles Musgrave, D.D., Vicar of Halifax, and Archdeacon of Craven, who had known the testator. Mr Musgrave communicated the bequest to the Vice-Chancellor, and after some correspondence he approved, and induced the executors to approve, a suggestion that as the object of Mr Abbott was the same as that of Mr Bell, the regulations for his Scholarships should be framed in as close accordance as possible with the regulations for the Bell Scholarships. The executors further stated (10 November, 1870) that if this or some similar scheme should be finally approved they would "be prepared to hand over the £4000 free from all expenses and with Interest at 4 per cent. from Mr Abbott's death on the 13th of May last to the proper authorities of the University at any time on or after the 10th of January next."

The report of the Council of the Senate, dated 30 January, 1871, containing the regulations (A), and most of the above particulars, was confirmed by the Senate 9 February, 1871; and the Vice-Chancellor was authorized, 16 February, to thank Dr Musgrave and the executors².

In 1873 (13 December) a Grace passed the Senate authorizing the examiners appointed by the Senate to examine for the Bell Scholarships to examine for Abbott's Scholarships also³.

12. JOHN STEWART OF RANNOCH SCHOLARSHIPS.

Mr John Stewart of Rannoch, a Scotch gentleman resident in Bristol, who died 19 July, 1884, by Will dated 7 March, 1881, left his property (subject to certain charges) to the University, to found Scholarships value £25 each, in Hebrew, Greek, Latin, and Sacred Music. A letter from Mr Stewart's solicitor to the Vice-Chancellor, dated 20 August, 1884, gives particulars of the property bequeathed:

The Executors and Trustees of the Will of our late client, Mr John Stewart of this city, acting under Probate granted to them by the Bristol District Registry on the 14th instant, instruct us to send you herewith a copy of such will, from which you will please observe that, subject to the payments of the various charges and legacies and to the provision of the annuity as thereby directed, their Testator devises and bequeaths the whole of his residuary Estate to your University for the purposes therein mentioned.

The Estate consists of a freehold farm of about 70 acres at Bishop-sutton near Bristol, of some 8 acres of freehold land at Keynsham near Bristol, of two freehold shops and warehouses, Nos. 5 and 6, Bridge Parade, Bristol, and a freehold cottage at Montpelier, Bristol; and of about £1,200 to £1,300 of personalty. The rental of the freeholds, subject to the usual deductions and to groundrents and land tax is upwards of £600 a year. No. 5, Bridge Parade, is mortgaged for £300.

Our clients estimate that about £3,500 will be required to meet the charges, &c. provided for by the will; and they suggest that the best method of doing this will be for them to realize the several Bristol properties, and, after discharging thereout what has to be paid, to transfer the balance of the proceeds to the University along with the Title deeds of the unsold freeholds; but in offering this suggestion they desire to say that they will be glad to be favoured with the views of the University authorities, with which it will be their pleasure to do their utmost to comply.

The following extract from the Will explains the testator's intentions so far as the University was concerned:

Testator's whole estate left to the University.

...I devise and bequeath all my real and personal estate whatsoever or wheresoever of or to which I shall at my death be seized possessed or entitled or over which I shall at my death have a general power of appointment (except what I otherwise dispose of by this my Will or any Codicil hereto) unto and to the use of the University of Cambridge absolutely subject to and charged with the payment of my debts funeral and testamentary expenses and the legacies and annuities bequeathed by this my Will or any Codicil hereto and the legacy duty thereon

Scholarships to be founded in Hebrew, Greek, Latin or Music.

To the intent that such University may found Scholarships of the annual value of Twenty-five pounds each such Scholarships to be tenable for one year and to be given for proficiency in some or one of the following subjects namely in Hebrew Greek Latin and Sacred Music or in the discretion of the Governing Body of the said University to be tenable for three years for proficiency in some or one of the prescribed subjects the preference in every case to be given to young men natives of the Counties of Wilts Somerset or Gloucester including the City and County of Bristol otherwise the above Scholarships shall be open to all Competitors subject to such restrictions as to age as the said University may think fit but such young men are to be of good moral character and of sober and industrious habits

The fund may be allowed to accumulate.

Provided always that if the Governing Body of the said University shall see fit it shall be lawful for the said University to allow the fund derived from my estate to accumulate at interest and upon such investments as the said Governing Body may deem fit until the said fund is in the opinion of the said Governing Body of the said University sufficiently large to found scholarships as directed in this my Will

Every Scholarship to bear founder's name.

And I hereby direct that each and every Scholarship so founded shall bear my name and be called 'The John Stewart' or 'The John Stewart of Rannoch' Scholarship.

The report of the Council of the Senate, dated 13 October, 1884¹, which contained the above documents, recommended the acceptance of the bequest. This recommendation having been confirmed, 6 November, the matter was referred to the Financial Board. They recommended, in a report dated 3 February, 1886¹, that no Scholarships should be founded until certain sums advanced by the Chest to meet the debts of the estate had been replaced; and that, as a mark of respect to the memory of the testator, the University should undertake for ever to maintain in repair his tomb and monument. This report was confirmed by Grace 25 February, 1886, and the recommendation respecting the grave and monument 25 March, 1886².

The financial business of the trust occupied so much time that a Syndicate to prepare a scheme for the establishment of Scholarships as directed by the Will was not appointed till 1893 (16 February). They issued a report dated 23 May³, which, after discussion (8 June), was referred back to the Syndicate, as was an "amended report" dated 17 November⁴, which was discussed 23 November. A "second amended report," dated 25 November⁵, was confirmed 7 December⁶; and the first election to Scholarships was held in May, 1894.

13. HARKNESS SCHOLARSHIPS.

In March, 1880, the Vice-Chancellor was informed that Mrs Pearson, of Penrith, was desirous of bequeathing to the University, and to the colleges of Newnham and Girton, certain funds for the purpose of founding Scholarships in Geology (including Paleontology) in memory of her brother, Robert Harkness, F.R.S., Professor of Geology in Queen's College, Cork, from 1854 to his death 5 October, 1878.

The Council of the Senate made various suggestions respecting the terms of the bequest, which were adopted by Mrs Pearson, and embodied in her Will, dated 18 August,

The report of the Council of the Senate, dated 27 April, 1885¹, which contained the above extract from Mrs Pearson's Will, and recommended acceptance of the bequest, having been confirmed by the Senate 11 June, 1885, a Syndicate was appointed, 12 November², to frame regulations.

This Syndicate issued a report with regulations 19 November, 1886³, but the members were not unanimous, and the tone of the discussion in the Arts School (2 December)⁴ was adverse. The Syndicate was therefore continued, and an "amended report" issued 28 January, 1887⁵. After criticism in the Arts School (3 February)⁶ a "second amended report" was issued, 18 February, 1887⁷, which was confirmed without opposition, 10 March, 1887⁸. The first Scholar was elected in the same year, 15 June.

14. CLERK MAXWELL SCHOLARSHIP.

1890.

This Scholarship was founded in accordance with the Will of Mrs Clerk Maxwell, widow of James Clerk Maxwell, M.A., F.R.S., Honorary Fellow and formerly Fellow of Trinity College, first Cavendish Professor of Experimental Physics (1871-1879), who died 5 November, 1879. The Will of Mrs Clerk Maxwell is dated 23 May, 1883. She died 12 December, 1886; and her intentions were made known to the Vice-Chancellor in a letter from her executors dated 4 January, 1887. An extract from this letter was published to the Senate 6 January, 1887⁹.

MEMORIAL STUDENTSHIPS AND MEMORIAL FUNDS

I. BALFOUR MEMORIAL.

1883.

(a) The Studentship and Fund.

In 1882 the Council of the Senate, in recognition of the value of the scientific work and teaching done by Francis Maitland Balfour, Fellow of Trinity College (B.A. 1874, M.A. 1877), proposed, in a report dated 27 March, that a Professorship of Animal Morphology, terminable with the tenure of the first Professor, should be established in the University. The following extract from this report deserves quotation :

The successful and rapid development of biological teaching in Cambridge, so honourable to the reputation of the University, has been formally brought to the notice of the Council. It appears that the Classes are now so large that the accommodation provided but a few years ago has already become insufficient, and that plans for extending it are now occupying the attention of the Museums and Lecture-Rooms Syndicate.

It is well known that one branch of this teaching, viz. that of Animal Morphology, has been created in Cambridge by the efforts of Mr F. M. Balfour, and that it has grown to its present importance through his ability as a teacher and his scientific reputation.

The service to the interests of Natural Science thus rendered by Mr Balfour having been so far generously given without any adequate Academical recognition, the benefit of its continuance is at present entirely unsecured to the University, and the progress of the department under his direction remains liable to sudden check.

It has been urgently represented to the Council that the welfare of biological studies at Cambridge demands that Mr Balfour's department should be placed on a recognised and less precarious footing, and in this view the Council concur. They are of opinion that all the requirements of the case will be best met by the immediate establishment...of a Professorship of Animal Morphology terminable with the tenure of the first Professor.

The Council have been in communication with the Board of Natural Science Studies, who have expressed their hearty concurrence with the proposal.

The Council therefore recommend that there shall be established in the University a Professorship of Animal Morphology...¹.

A Grace to establish the Professorship passed the Senate 11 May², and Mr Balfour was elected, 31 May, 1882.

In the following June Mr Balfour went to Switzerland, to recruit his health after an attack of typhoid fever; and (18 July) started from Cormayeur to ascend the Aiguille Blanche de Peuteret. On this excursion he and his guide lost their lives³.

On Saturday, 21 October, 1882, a meeting was held at the New Museums, to consider the most appropriate form of memorial to Professor Balfour. The Vice-Chancellor took the chair, and many of the most distinguished members of the University, with a number of men of science from a distance, were present. After deciding that some memorial should be established, it was agreed:

I. That the Memorial take the form of a Fund, to be called the Balfour Fund, for the promotion of research in Biology, especially Animal Morphology;

II. That the proceeds of the Fund be applied:

(1) to establish a Studentship, the holder of which shall devote himself to original research in Biology, especially Animal Morphology;

(2) to further, by occasional grants of money, original research in the same subject.

III. That a Committee be appointed to collect subscriptions and to draw up conditions, under which, with the sanction of the subscribers at a future meeting, the Fund shall be offered to the University⁴.

The meeting referred to in the third resolution was held 26 May, 1883, when it appeared that so large a sum had been subscribed that £6500 invested capital might be handed over to the University so soon as the Regulations (which were approved by the meeting) were accepted by the Senate¹. When these, however, were discussed (2 June) they encountered much hostile criticism², and were referred back to the Committee for revision. Amended regulations³ were approved by the Senate, and the offer of the subscribers was accepted, 14 June, 1883⁴. The first Balfour Student was appointed 18 October.

When the balance of the fund was handed over to the University, the treasurer wrote to the Vice-Chancellor (6 March 1888) informing him of the names of the subscribers, and enclosing a detailed balance-sheet of the receipts and expenses of the fund⁵.

It appeared from this letter that the subscriptions, amounting to £8451, might be summarized as follows:

The following letter describes the gift of Professor Balfour's Library:

MUSEUM OF ZOOLOGY AND COMPARATIVE ANATOMY,
10 October, 1882.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I have to inform you that the family of the late Professor Balfour has presented his Scientific Library to the University, for the use of the Morphological Laboratory.

It consists of rather more than 500 volumes, together with upwards of 1100 pamphlets, bound in 77 volumes. This latter portion of the Library is particularly valuable, as Professor Balfour had taken great pains to collect the most important papers in Morphology and Embryology; and so extensive a series, especially when arranged, as this is, according to subject, places before students the most important information on any given group of animals, without the trouble of reference to Journals and Transactions.

Besides these works on Morphology, about sixty volumes on general science have been presented to the Philosophical Library.

I am, [etc.]

J. W. CLARK

(Superintendent)¹.

A room at the New Museums, attached to the Department of Morphology, has been fitted up to contain this Library.

2. JOHN LUCAS WALKER STUDENTSHIP.

1887.

The circumstances under which this Studentship was founded are detailed in the following letter written to the Vice-Chancellor 4 November, 1886, by Sir Richard Everard Webster, M.A., of Trinity College, then Attorney-General. His friend, Mr John Lucas Walker, was of the same college (LL.B. 1867).

2 PUMP COURT, TEMPLE, E.C.,
4 November, 1886.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

By the will of my friend, Mr John Lucas Walker, the sum of £10,000 was left to me to be spent as I should think best "in the promotion, without regard to sect or party, of Scientific and Literary Research or of either of those objects in Cambridge or in the Metropolis or in both places."

After careful consultation with Professor Huxley, Sir James Paget, Professor Roy, and several others, I have determined upon the scheme enclosed with a view to the establishment of the John Lucas Walker Studentship.

I have to ask you to be good enough to place the scheme before the University and to take the necessary steps that it may be accepted.

You will observe by the terms of the bequest it was intended that the money should be applied at Cambridge or London or both places at my discretion, and I have associated the President of the College of Physicians as one of the Board of Managers in order that from time to time there may be a fair chance of ascertaining the names of suitable candidates in London.

The above information will probably be sufficient for you, but should you require any further particulars I shall be pleased to supply them.

I am, [etc.]

RICHARD E. WEBSTER¹.

The scheme, otherwise called the regulations, mentioned above was published in the same number of the Reporter as the letter. After discussion (25 November)² and revision by Sir R. E. Webster, it was republished in an amended form, 28 February, 1887³, and accepted by the following Grace, which passed the Senate 10 March, 1887, but not without opposition :

That the John Lucas Walker Fund for the furtherance of original research in Pathology, which has been offered to the University by Sir R. E. Webster, M.A., of Trinity College, Her Majesty's Attorney-General, be accepted: that the Amended Regulations, dated February 10, 1887, be approved: and that the Vice-Chancellor be authorised to convey the thanks of the University to the Attorney-General⁴.

The first Scholar was elected June 10, 1887.

3. PRENDERGAST STUDENTSHIP.

1888.

This Studentship was founded in 1888, by Mrs Prendergast, to commemorate her husband, Colonel Guy Lushington Prendergast, sometime of Trinity College. The Master and Fellows of Trinity College are trustees of the fund.

The following letter, addressed to the Vice-Chancellor, explains the intentions of the foundress:

14, FOPSTONE ROAD, EARL'S COURT, S.W.,
9th January, 1888.

REVEREND AND DEAR SIR,

The Widow of my Father the late Guy Lushington Prendergast having expressed a desire to perpetuate his memory by founding a Greek Studentship of One hundred Pounds (£100) per annum at the University of Cambridge, I have been advised by the Reverend the Master of Trinity, to whom I mentioned the subject, to submit an application to you, with a view to its being taken into consideration with as little delay as possible. I will only state the general outline, leaving details to be filled in as you and the University authorities may deem expedient.

1. It is desired that the Benefaction should bear my Father's name.

2. That the Studentship should definitely and expressly encourage the study of Greek, to which my Father was so devoted.

3. That the Studentship should be tenable by Bachelors of Arts, and carry with it the obligation to prosecute research in the Greek Language, Literature, Archaeology, and Arts.

4. The period for which the Studentship should be held and the question as to whether it would be of greater value to the University if it were only open to competition on alternate years when the value would be £200 instead of £100 must be left for your consideration.

5. It is desired that the Studentship should be limited to men only.

6. My father having kept ten terms at Trinity College¹, and having there acquired his great love for literature in general, and for Greek literature in particular, it is desired that the authorities of Trinity College shall, if possible, be specially associated with the memorial, either as trustees or in any other form which^p may commend itself to you....

Believe me, [etc.]

GUY A. PRENDERGAST, Colonel.

¹ He matriculated 13 November, 1824, but did not proceed to a degree.

The Council of the Senate, to whom the above letter was referred, were of opinion that Mrs Prendergast's offer should be accepted, and, after communication with the Master of Trinity College, drew up regulations which were sent to Colonel Prendergast and approved by him. These regulations, with Colonel Prendergast's letter, were embodied in a report to the Senate dated 4 June, 1888, which ended with the following recommendations:

1. That the Common Seal of the University be affixed to a Deed of Settlement in triplicate¹ by Mrs Elizabeth Sophia Prendergast of a fund amounting to three thousand six hundred and thirty-six pounds ten shillings, two pounds fifteen shillings per cent. annuities, to be called The Prendergast Fund, for establishing, in memory of the late Colonel Prendergast, formerly of Trinity College, a Prendergast Studentship in the University of Cambridge for the furtherance of study and research in the Greek Language, Literature, History, Philosophy, Archæology and Art; and that the thanks of the University be conveyed to Mrs Prendergast for her generous gift.

2. That the Regulations contained in this Report be the regulations for the Prendergast Fund and Studentship.

These recommendations were confirmed by Grace 7 June, 1888; and the deed of settlement was sealed on the following day. The regulations therein contained are identical with those confirmed by the Senate as above². The Vice-Chancellor announced the election of the first student 30 April, 1890.

4. ISAAC NEWTON STUDENTSHIPS.

1891.

These studentships were endowed by Frank M^cClean, M.A., of Trinity College³, in 1890. He wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor (H. M. Butler, D.D., Master of Trinity College):

¹ One part was retained by Mrs Prendergast; one by Trinity College; and the third by the University (Registry, Box G, No. 28).

RUSTHALL HOUSE, TUNBRIDGE WELLS,
3rd November, 1890.

MY DEAR SIR,

I was encouraged by the invitation for outside assistance contained in your recent Address on the reopening of the Senate of the University¹ to write to you on the 3rd October last, submitting an offer of the sum of £12,000 for the purpose of founding three University Studentships in connection with the Sciences of Astronomy and Light.

Subsequently, by your kind proposal, I came to Cambridge on the 1st inst. for the purpose of meeting yourself, Professor Stokes, Professor Cayley, Professor Darwin and Dr Glaisher, and of talking the matter over with you and them.

With the advantage thus gained, I now beg to submit to you my offer to place securities of the value named in the hands of Trinity College as Trustees, for the purpose of founding the Studentships.

They are to be devoted to the study of Astronomy (especially Gravitational Astronomy, but also including the other branches of Astronomy and Astronomical Physics) and Physical Optics.

They are to be called The Isaac Newton Studentships. One Studentship to be filled annually, and to be tenable for three years. The candidate elected to be a Bachelor of Arts under 25 years of age, and to be of the highest attainments in the subjects named and in the branches of Mathematics applicable to them.

The various questions relating to the mode of election, the conditions of tenure, the formation of a reserve fund arising from casual vacancies, and the possible application of any surplus income to the purchase of apparatus, to be provided for in the Regulations in such a way as may be agreed upon.

So soon as the Regulations and other preliminary steps are settled, the Securities set out in the note below to be handed over to the Trustees.

I remain, [etc.]

FRANK M^cCLEAN².

This offer having been referred to the Council of the Senate, they requested Sir G. G. Stokes, Professor Cayley, Professor Darwin, and Dr Glaisher to confer with Mr Frank M^cClean on the subject of his generous offer to found Studentships in Astronomy and Physical Optics. As a result of this conference the above-named members of the Senate drew up regulations which Mr McClean approved, and which the Council submitted to the Senate in a report dated 16 February, 1891¹. It concluded with the following recommendations :

I. That the offer of Mr Frank McClean of securities to the value of about £12,500, for the founding of Isaac Newton Studentships in Astronomy and Physical Optics, be accepted.

II. That the seal of the University be affixed to a letter of thanks to Mr Frank McClean, written by the Public Orator, for his munificent benefaction.

III. That the following Regulations for the Isaac Newton Studentships be approved by the University.

These recommendations were confirmed by Grace 5 March², the Orator's letter was directed to be sealed 12 March, and the first Student was elected 4 November, 1891.

5. ARNOLD GERSTENBERG STUDENTSHIP.

This Studentship was endowed in 1892 by Mrs Leonora Philipps, in accordance with the wishes of her brother, the late Arnold Gerstenberg of Trinity College (B.A. 1884), who bequeathed to her £2000 for that purpose. The intentions of Mrs Philipps and her brother as set forth in the Deed of Trust printed below, were to promote the study of Moral Philosophy and Metaphysics among students of Natural Science, irrespective of sex.

The Senate were informed of the proposed Studentship by a report of the Council, dated 22 February, 1892³, in which they recommended that the offer should be accepted, and proposed regulations. After discussion in the Arts School (2 March)⁴ an amended report was issued (9 May)⁵,

This Fund was commenced in 1893 in order to perpetuate in the University the memory of the Reverend Fenton John Anthony Hort, D.D., Fellow of Emmanuel College, sometime Fellow of Trinity College, Hulsean Professor of Divinity 1878-1887, and Lady Margaret's Reader in Divinity 1887-1892, who died 30 November, 1892.

A public meeting³ was held at the Master's Lodge, Trinity College, on February 22, 1893, at which it was agreed, among other things, that "donations and annual subscriptions be invited towards a Fund to be known as the Hort Memorial Fund, from which grants may be made from time to time for the promotion of Biblical and Patristic research, especially by obtaining collations of MSS. and assisting the publication of unremunerative work."

That the bequest of the late A. W. G. Allen, B.A., of Trinity College, be gratefully accepted by the University; and that the Vice-Chancellor be authorised to invest the amount received in respect of the bequest in one or more of the securities authorised by the Trust Investment Act, and that the Common Seal of the University be affixed to the necessary documents².

The matter having been referred to the General Board of Studies, they issued a report dated 9 November, 1898³, containing regulations for the fund and scholarship. The following extract from the preamble to this report explains the views of the Board:

The Board are of opinion that the money should be employed in founding an annual Scholarship or Studentship for the encouragement of literary or scientific research. In order to diminish the difficulty of selection they propose to divide the subjects of study into two groups, which may be distinguished as (1) Literary and (2) Scientific, and to assign the Scholarship to each group in alternate years. The Board are advised that the terms of the bequest prohibit the award of more than one Scholarship in the same year. It is estimated that the capital sum bequeathed, with subsequent accumulations, will produce an income of about £290.

The Board propose that the subjoined regulations should be enacted for ten years only, so that after some experience the Senate will have an opportunity of reconsidering the use to which Mr Allen's bequest shall be devoted.

The regulations appended to this report were modified after discussion (1 December, 1898)⁴, and issued in an Amended Report, 1 February, 1899⁵. This was confirmed by Grace 16 February, 1899⁶. In the regulations it is directed that the fund shall be called The Allen Scholarship Fund, and that the income shall be devoted to the maintenance of a student to be called The Allen Student.

VIII.
PRIZES

1. BENEFACTION OF THE REVEREND THOMAS SEATON.
1748.

The Reverend Thomas Seaton¹, sometime Fellow of Clare Hall, B.A. 1704, M.A. 1708, by Will dated 8 October, 1738, bequeathed an estate² to the University of Cambridge, the rents to be paid to that Master of Arts who composes the best poem on a sacred subject. Mr Seaton died 18 August, 1741; but the estate was not recovered from the heir-at-law until 1748. The prize was first awarded in 1750.

The bequest was not formally accepted by the University; and no regulations were drawn up until 1898, when a report of the Council of the Senate, dated 23 May, containing those at present in force, was confirmed by the Senate (9 June)³.

The following clause in Mr Seaton's Will explains his views respecting the Prize:

In the Name of God Amen. I Thomas Seaton of the Town of Ravinston in the County of Bucks, Clerk, being in good health and through the favour of God under no disorder of mind do make this my last Will and Testament....

I also give to my cousin John Bull Junior my estate at Kislingbury during the life of my wife Essex Seaton which consists of one yard land now in the occupation of Joseph Butler, and a half yard land better now in the occupation of Mr Marriott of whom it was purchased....

I give my Kislingbury Estate abovementioned to the University of Cambridge for ever: the rents of which shall be disposed of yearly by the Vice-Chancellor for the time being, as he the Vice-Chancellor, the Master of Clare Hall, and the Greek Professor for the time being, or two of them, shall agree. Which three persons aforesaid shall give out a subject, which subject shall for the first year be one or other of the

² The estate, in Northamptonshire, contained about 28 acres, and the yearly value, in 1748, was £17.

³ Printed in Ordinances, ed. 1901, p. 578.

Perfections or Attributes of the Supreme Being, and so the succeeding years till that subject is exhausted; and afterwards the subjects shall be either Death, Judgment, Heaven, Hell, Purity of Heart, &c. or whatsoever else may be judged by the Vice-Chancellor, Master of Clare Hall, and Greek Professor, to be most conducive to the honour of the Supreme Being and recommendation of virtue.

And they shall yearly dispose of the rent of the abovesaid estate to that Master of Arts whose poem on the subject given shall be best approved by them. Which poem I ordain to be always in English, and to be printed; the expense of which shall be deducted out of the product of the Estate, and the residue given as a reward for the composer of the poem, or ode, or copy of verses. And the reason of my thus ordaining it is, the language being changeable, and words growing obsolete, the great God might ever have his Attributes and Perfections celebrated and extolled in a stile perfectly adapted to the taste and understanding of every succeeding generation, and that virtue may be represented also to the world in the most amiable view...¹.

2. CHANCELLOR'S CLASSICAL MEDALS.

This gift is recorded as follows in the Registrum Præmiorum, kept by successive Vice-Chancellors, and now in the Registry:

His Grace Thomas Holles [Pelham] Duke of Newcastle, Chancellor of this University of Cambridge, did in the year 1751, for an Encouragement to the study of the Classic Writers, appoint that a Gold Medal should be annually given by himself to Each of two commencing Bachelors of Arts, who having Senior Optimes shall make the best appearance in Classical Learning.

The Persons appointed by Him to examine the Candidates and to determine the Prizes are: The Vicechancellor; Provost of King's College; Master of St John's; Master of Trinity College; Master of Peterhouse; Master of Clare Hall; Master of Christ's College; and the Senior Fellow of Trinity College elected from Westminster School.

The Duke's benefaction was not formally accepted, but the following Grace, directing that a letter of thanks written by the Public Orator be sent to him, passed the Senate 10 October, 1751 :

Cum illustrissimus vester Cancellarius duos ex iis juvenibus quibus Academiæ honores ob literas severiores foeliciter excultas publice deferuntur, suis etiam præmiis ob foeliciter excultas humaniores literas ornatos velit ;

Placeat Vobis ut ob verum hoc et insigne amoris sui erga nos nostramque disciplinam pignus et testimonium debitæ illi Gratiaë agantur per literas vestro nomine ab Oratore conscribendas¹.

In 1760, a case of equality of votes having occurred, the Chancellor wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor :

CLAREMOUNT,
March 15th, 1760.

DEAR SIR,

I have the favor of your letter of the 12th Instant, and am very clearly of opinion that when there is an equality of voices in the Disposal of the Medals, the Casting voice ought to be in the Vicechancellor, and I should desire that it might always be so determined.

I am with great Respect,

Dear Sir

Your most Obedient

Humble Servant

HOLLES NEWCASTLE.

Sir James Burrough, Vicechancellor of the University of Cambridge².

The following account of the way in which the candidates are to be examined, is worth quotation. It may probably be dated 1762³.

The Names of the Candidates for these [Medals] are brought in to the Vicechancellor immediately after the first Tripos, and he appoints as early a Day after, as his Convenience will permit, for their coming to him in Order for Examination. They are to furnish themselves with a Lexicon and Dictionary. The Vicechancellor allots them a Room where they are to be together, and sets them a Part of some Greek Author to translate into English, furnishing Copies of the Greek

Author without Latin, equal in number to the Candidates, if he can get so many. When they have done this he sets them a Part of some English Author to translate into Latin. These compose the Business of the first Day. He appoints them to come again the next Day or as soon as Convenience permits, and then gives them a Subject for a Latin Prose Composition. When that is done, he gives them one for a Composition in Latin Verse; which finishes the written Part of the Examination. These Exercises, after being perused by the Vicechancellor, are sent round to the other Examiners, and when all, or all who chuse to see them, have had them, the Vicechancellor fixes a Day for Examination, vivâ voce, in the Presence of such Examiners as chuse to attend.

The Candidates are on that Day called out singly, and usually set to construe some Part of a Greek Prose Author, and of a Greek Poet likewise, and also some Part either of a Latin Prose Author or Poet or both, and then the Examiners assign the Prizes. When the Vicechancellor informs the Candidates to whom they are assigned of their success, he at the same Time gives them a Subject to declaim upon on opposite Sides on the Second Tripos Day.

In 1866 (13 December) a Syndicate was appointed :

qui deliberent numquid in regulis Examinationum vel eorum qui honores in Litteris Humanioribus vel eorum qui Numismata earundem Litterarum studiosis ab Academiae Cancellario quotannis proposita petant mutandum sit¹.

This Syndicate issued a report, 12 June, 1867, but it was not submitted to the Senate for confirmation. A second report dated 16 March, 1868, was rejected, 20 May, 1868². Finally a third report, dated 9 March, 1869, was confirmed by Grace, 29 April, 1869³. In the preamble to this the Syndicate say :

They again submit to the Senate the new Regulations for the Chancellor's Medals Examination proposed in a former Report, being convinced that the usefulness of the Examination will be greatly increased by the removal of the mathematical restriction, and by the publication of a list of those students who have highly distinguished themselves.

² In this report, which dealt with the Classical Tripos as well as with the Medals, the part relating to the Medals was rejected by 53 non placet to 27 placet.

³ Grace Book Σ, pp. 471, 486. The part relating to the Medals was carried by 52 placet to 17 non placet.

The following are the regulations accepted by the above Grace :

1. That the Chancellor's Medals each year shall be open to the competition of all students qualified to be candidates for the Classical Tripos of that year. Who may compete.
2. That the examiners for the Chancellor's Medals shall be the Vice-Chancellor, the Regius Professor of Greek, and the Public Orator, together with two other examiners nominated from year to year by the Board of Classical Studies for election by the Senate. Provided that in case any of the ex officio examiners be prevented from taking part in the examination, a deputy shall be appointed in each case by Grace of the Senate. Examiners.
Proviso.
3. That the examiners shall publish, in addition to the names of the two medallists, an alphabetical list of those candidates who have highly distinguished themselves in the examination. List.
4. That the examination for the Chancellor's Medals shall begin on the sixth Monday after the general B.A. admission in each year¹. Date.

In 1881 (4 April) the Board of Classical Studies suggested that these regulations should be modified as regards the first and last regulations, and that the third regulation should be suppressed. The Chancellor signified his approval 6 April², and the new regulations were confirmed by Grace 19 May, 1881³.

3. MEMBERS' PRIZES.

The foundation of these prizes is recorded as follows in the Registrum Præmiorum :

The Honourable Mr Finch⁴, and the Honourable Mr Townshend⁵, Members of Parliament for the University, did in the year 1752 propose, after the example of His Grace our Chancellor, to give Two Prizes of Fifteen Guineas each, to two Senior Bachelors of Arts, and the like to two Middle Bachelors, who shall compose the best Exercises in Latin Prose (upon Subjects, whereof due notice is to be given by the Vice-chancellor) which are to be read publicly by them on a day afterwards to be appointed near the Commencement.

Each Candidate is to send his Exercise, privately, and without his Name, and not in his own hand, but revised and pointed by himself, to the Vicechancellor, on or before a day to be appointed by Him, with some Latin Verse written upon it; and he is at the same time to send a paper sealed up, with the same Latin Verse on the outside, which Paper shall enclose another Paper, folded up, with the Candidate's Name written therein.

The Papers, containing the Names of those Candidates who shall not succeed, are to be destroyed unopened; by which secrecy, the modesty of those who might otherwise fear a repulse will, it is hoped, be effectually consulted.

The Vicechancellor and Heads of Colleges are to determine these Prizes.

A letter of thanks, written by the Public Orator, was read to the Senate 15 December, 1752, and on the following day was ordered to be sealed¹.

The following account of the way in which the Prizes were assigned, was drawn up in or about 1762²:

The subjects for these are usually proposed by the Vicechancellor at some Meeting of the Heads, and delivered out at some Time in March or April. When the Exercises are all sent in to the Vicechancellor and he has perused them, he sends them round to such Heads as chuse to peruse them, and after they have done with them he calls a Meeting of those who have perused them, at which the Prizes are determined, and the Papers containing the Names of the losing Candidates destroyed. After acquainting the successful Candidates with their Success, he appoints a Day or two Days one for the senior and one for the middle Bachelors, as suits his Convenience, for them to read their Exercises in the Law Schools.

In 1826 a change was introduced by which two of the prizes were thrown open to all Bachelors of Arts, and the other two to undergraduates in their third year. The following account of this change is in the handwriting of Dr Wordsworth, Master of Trinity College, Vice-Chancellor 1826-27¹:

Viscount Palmerston to the Vice-Chancellor.

STANHOPE STREET,
25 November, 1826.

"...I have this morning received your Letter of yesterday communicating to me an improved arrangement which the Vice Chancellor and Heads are desirous of adopting with respect to the distribution of the Members Prizes: and I lose no time in expressing my entire concurrence in the proposed arrangement, which cannot fail to be advantageous to the University, and which seems well calculated to give fresh encouragement to Literature by enlarging the sphere of competition...."

A Letter to the like effect was received by the Vice-Chancellor from Sir John Copley, Master of the Rolls, dated George Street, Nov. 28, 1826.

The new regulations herein referred to, and which were agreed to at a Meeting of the Vice-Chancellor and Heads Nov. 23, 1826, as proper to be recommended to the approbation of the Members, were:

1. That two of the four Prizes heretofore given to the Senior and the Middle Bachelors, be open henceforward to all Bachelors of Arts, without distinction of years, who are not of sufficient standing to take the degree of M.A.

2. That the other two be open to all Undergraduates who shall have resided not less than seven Terms, at the time when the Exercises are to be sent in.

In 1869 (25 October) the Council of the Senate proposed new regulations for these prizes, which were accepted by the Senate 11 November².

4. TOWNSHEND PRIZES.

1755.

These prizes were instituted by Charles, third Viscount Townshend. He wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor:

RAINHAM,
October the 5th, 1754.

SIR,

Having observed that several public exercises have been lately instituted in your University with premiums annexed to them for the improvement of education by the advancement of knowledge; and that among these provisions no encouragement is given for the study of the Theory of Trade, I take the liberty of desiring to know from you, Sir, whether it will be agreeable to the University if rewards of the same nature with those lately granted in other branches of learning should be given for the promotion of this.

It is unnecessary for me to point out the infinite advantage which would result to the public if young men could be led early in Life to a diligent study and correct knowledge of a Science so very important in it self and so intimately connected with the affairs and interests of this Kingdom as the subject of Trade is; nor have I any view in making this Proposal but to express in part the gratefull sense I have of the many obligations which my Family have received from the University of Cambridge by an Institution which I should hope they would approve of, as it is but one step more in the System lately began; and as I am confident that, if it be accepted and strictly pursued, it will contribute to the honour of the University and the solid advantage of this country. I am

Sir, your most obedient

humble servant

TOWNSHEND.

The Vice-Chancellor, Dr Yonge, Master of Jesus College, acknowledged the above letter (6 October) and undertook to lay it before the Heads of Colleges at an early opportunity. They were evidently favourable to Viscount Townshend's proposal, for he wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor:

RAINHAM,
October the 26th, 1754.

SIR,

I am much obliged to you for having communicated to the Heads the proposal I took the liberty of making through you to the University; and it gives me great satisfaction to hear from you that they have so entirely approved of my motives and design in making it.

This approbation gives me great hopes that the same Proposal will be received in the same manner by the Body of the University: His Grace the Duke of Newcastle has already assured me, in a letter I have had the honour of receiving from him upon this subject, that nothing shall be wanting on his part that may contribute to the success of a Design which he is pleased to call so usefull an one, and I beg leave to assure you on my own part that the very favorable opinion which his Grace and the Heads have given upon a consideration of this Scheme, are no small additional reasons with me for presuming in a stronger manner than I dared to have done upon my own judgment, that this Institution, if fully executed, will be productive of a real improvement in Education, and consequently of honor to the University and of advantage to the Public.

As you seem to expect from me some account of the mode of this Institution and the manner in which I should wish the Prizes should be determined and given, I am very ready now to submit to your consideration my thoughts upon these Points, not without some hopes, conceived upon the authority of very recent precedents in like Institutions, that the description of the Plan will be an answer to the difficulties to which you allude in your letter.

The premiums I should propose to give are twenty Guineas each to the authors of the two best Dissertations which shall be made by Gentlemen of the University of any Rank or Degree upon subjects included within the Theory of Trade and appointed by those who shall be the Judges at the time under this Institution: the Prizes to be given according to the opinion of the Judges, and either to be delivered in money or vested in any other shape as shall be determined, previous to the execution of the Design itself, at a Meeting of the Heads.

The Persons I should desire to name for Judges are the Vice-Chancellor for the time being, the present Master of Trinity College, the present Master of Christ's College, and two other Persons from the Body of the University to be named by me; and the three first of these Judges to continue such as long as they are Heads of the University, and the two last as long as they are resident in it; reserving to my self a power, which I perceive has lately been reserved in like cases, of filling up the vacancys which shall happen.

It may happen that one of the Heads named to be a Judge may be Vice-Chancellor in which case the Judges will be reduced to four; and therefore to avoid any possible equality of voices in the determination of the Prizes, I would propose, according to the Plan of a late Institution of this sort, that the Senior resident member of the University educated at Eaton School (not being otherwise one of the Judges) may be of course added to the Judges as often as one of the Heads, before named as a Judge, shall be Vice-Chancellor.

I could wish the Dissertations might be wrote in the English Language, and that those which carry the Prizes might be read by the Authors of them in public on a day to be appointed near the Commencement, and as to the manner in which the Candidates are to send their Exercises and the other intermediate regulations between the time of receiving the Exercises and deciding upon them, I cannot think that any better method can be observed, than that which I find set forth in a paper lately published and signed by you in consequence of the Prizes given by the Members of the University.

This is the shape in which I hope to see this Institution take place: and I am the more encouraged to hope that this Plan will be agreeable because it is the same with that which I find the University has approved of in similar cases. I am,

Sir, your most obedient

and humble servant

TOWNSHEND.

A letter of thanks to Viscount Townshend, written by the Public Orator, was ordered to be sealed, 24 January, 1755¹; and the Vice-Chancellor gave notice (18 February) that the subject of the first prize was: In what manner do Trade and Civil Liberty support and assist each other? and that the Essays were to be sent in on or before 1 June, 1755. This subject had probably been suggested by the founder of the Prize, but his letter has not been preserved. There were 14 competitors², and Viscount Townshend expressed his satisfaction that "the new Institution has been so far approved of as to engage in the first instance so great a number of Candidates" (to the Vice-Chancellor, 28 June, 1755).

Soon afterwards he met the Vice-Chancellor and several of the Heads of Colleges at the house of Mr Greaves, at Fulbourn, when a wish was expressed that he "would draw up some questions on the Theory of Trade." Accordingly he sent to the Vice-Chancellor (29 October) a list of six. In January 1756 the Vice-Chancellor announced as the subject of the prize for that year: *What causes principally contribute to render a nation populous?*³ The wording of this sentence did not please Viscount Townshend, as it differed from his own; and he was still more annoyed that the first question on his list, What influence has Trade on the Morals of a Nation? had been passed over (26 January, 1756). The Vice-³ The notice has not been preserved, but the Gentleman's Magazine, under the date 31 January, 1756, mentions the second subject.

Chancellor did his best to justify this omission, on behalf of himself and the Heads (28 January), but Lord Townshend refused to be appeased, and wrote that he was resolved "to let the Institution drop so far as I have been concerned in it, and to give myself no further trouble about it" (26 June)¹.

5. ANONYMOUS BENEFACTION.

1783, 1784, 1785.

The Registrum Præmiorum records this benefaction as follows:

In the year 1783 a Gentleman who desir'd that his name might be conceal'd, gave fifty Guineas for the best English dissertation on the pernicious effects of Gaming; in the year 1784 fifty Guineas for the like on Duelling; and [in the year] 1785 fifty Guineas for the like on Suicide: and appointed the Bishop of Peterborough², the Bishop of Llandaff³, Dr Elliston, Master of Sidney, Dr Beadon, Master of Jesus, and Dr Peckard, Master of Magdalene, to determine the Prizes.

The prize was not brought to the notice of the Senate. It was adjudged in each year to Richard Hey, LL.D., Magd. Coll.

6. BENEFACTION OF THE REVEREND CLAUDIUS BUCHANAN.

1804-1806.

The Reverend Claudius Buchanan, of Queens' College, B.A. 1796, D.D. (per Litt. Reg.) 3 July, 1809, Vice-Provost of Fort William College, Bengal, made the following gifts to the University.

¹ These letters are preserved in the Registry, Vol. xxxviii. 59. It appears from the Gentleman's Magazine (Vol. xxviii. p. 373) that the dissertation by Wm. Bell, M.A., Fellow of Magdalen College, one of those which gained the prize on this occasion, was printed. An analysis is there given of it, and also of an examination of it, by J. B., M.D.

In 1804 Mr Buchanan gave £210 for four Prize Compositions, and proposed to give to the Library a collection of about a hundred volumes, printed in Bengal. The following Graces, which passed the Senate, 11 June, 1804, explain the intention of these Prizes :

In 1805 Mr Buchanan proposed to give £500 to the University for the purposes described in the following letter to the Vice-Chancellor:

SIR,

The good effects which have resulted from the institution of my former Prizes; and the increasing importance of the subjects to which they refer, encourage me to propose to the University of Cambridge another Prize of higher value, which I hope will be honored with your approbation.

For the best Work in English Prose, embracing the following subjects;

1. The probable design of the divine Providence in subjecting so large a portion of Asia to the British dominion.

2. The Duty; the Means; and the Consequences of translating the Scriptures into the Oriental Tongues; and of promoting Christian knowledge in Asia.

3. A brief historic view of the progress of the Gospel in different nations, since its first promulgation; illustrated by Maps shewing its luminous tract throughout the world; with chronological notices of its duration in particular places. The regions of Mahomedanism to be marked with red; and those of Paganism, with a dark colour.

Five hundred Pounds.

The candidates to prefix such Title to the work as they may think fit...¹.

This Prize is proposed to the Universities of Cambridge and Oxford only.

College of Fort William in Bengal, 4th June, 1805².

A Syndicate was appointed 5 February, 1806, to administer the benefaction; and a letter of thanks, written by the Public Orator, was ordered to be sealed 21 March³.

In 1806 Mr Buchanan wrote again to the Vice-Chancellor:

SIR,

I have the honor to enclose a copy of Proposals for translating the Scriptures into the Oriental Languages; which I request you will be pleased to submit to the principal members of your Society.

If the design should appear to you to be worthy of encouragement I would propose that two Sermons shall be preached before the University on the subject of the Oriental Translations, by such members of the University as the University shall think fit to appoint; and at such times as may be convenient.

I request that each of the Preachers will do me the honor to accept the sum of Thirty Guineas, which I have directed my agents Messrs Boehm & Co. of London to present, on delivery of a printed copy of the Sermon for the College of Fort William in Bengal.

I have the honor to be, Sir,

...C. BUCHANAN.

Calcutta, 18 March, 1806.

P.S. The Sermons to be printed on fine Paper in 4^{to} and in a fine type, to correspond with the prize Compositions.

The selection of Preachers was entrusted by Grace, 16 January, 1807, to the Vice-Chancellor, the Regius and Norrisian Professors of Divinity, and the two Proctors or their Deputies¹.

7. CHANCELLOR'S MEDAL FOR ENGLISH VERSE.

1811.

This prize was instituted by William Frederick, Duke of Gloucester, Chancellor of the University 1811–1834. The following account, from the Registrum Præmiorum, though without date, appears to be contemporary. The prize was not formally accepted by the Senate, nor was the founder thanked. The medal was first adjudged in 1813².

² The Duke of Gloucester was elected Chancellor 27 March, and installed at Cambridge 28 June—3 July, 1811. It may be conjectured that he offered the prize on the occasion of his visit, and therefore the first adjudication of the medal might have taken place in 1812, but the Registrum records under that year: "No Poetical Medal adjudged."

His Royal Highness the Chancellor of the University has determined that a third Gold Medal should be annually given, for the encouragement of English Poetry, to a resident undergraduate who shall compose the best Ode, or the best Poem in Heroic verse :

The subject is to be given out on the 25th of October, and the exercises are to be delivered in to the Vice-Chancellor on or before the 26th of March following.

Each Candidate is to send his Exercise privately, and without a name, and not written in his own hand, but revised and pointed by himself with some Latin Verse written upon it, and at the same time he is to send his own name in a paper folded up and sealed with the same Latin Verse on the outside, and the papers containing the names of those persons who shall not succeed are to be destroyed unopened.

The following Examiners are appointed by His Royal Highness to determine the Prizes of all the Candidates for the Chancellor's Three Medals :

1. The Vice Chancellor.
2. The Master of Trinity.
3. The Master of St John's.
4. The Provost of King's.
5. The Master of Peterhouse.
6. The Master of Clare Hall.
7. The Master of Christ's.
8. The Senior resident Fellow of Trinity-College who has gained a Medal.
9. The Public Orator.
10. The Greek Professor.
11. The Professor of Modern History.

N.B. If the Senior Resident Medallist of Trinity should decline to Examine, then the right shall devolve to the next in standing who has gained a Medal, and so down.

It is his Royal Highness's wish, that the Public Orator, The Greek Professor, and the Professor of Modern History, would take such active part in the Examination as might be agreed upon between them and the other Examiners ; leaving it at the same time open to each and all of them to make such further enquiries individually or collectively as they might think proper into the attainments of the several Candidates.

The following additional regulation, limiting the length of the poems, was sent by the Duke of Gloucester to the Vice-Chancellor, 21 November, 1826 :

I shall be obliged to you if you will have the goodness to insert in the Notice of the Subject for the English Poem in the present year, that no Exercise is to exceed 200 Lines in length : and if you will likewise take measures for letting it be understood that it is my wish that the same direction should be continued in future.

No regulations for this prize were approved by the Senate until 1898, when a report of the Council of the Senate (23 May), containing those at present in force, was confirmed by the Senate (9 June)¹.

8. CAMDEN MEDAL; POWIS MEDAL.

1841; 1867.

In March, 1841, George Charles, second Marquess Camden, "wishing to mark his sense of the respect shewn to his late father [Chancellor, 1834-1840] by the University," expressed "to the Vice Chancellor and Heads of Colleges a desire to give annually a Gold Medal as a Prize for the best Exercise composed in Latin Hexameter Verse²."

This benefaction was announced to the Senate 1 April, 1841³; and at the same time regulations for the Prize were read, together with a letter of thanks written by the Public Orator, which was ordered to be sent to Marquess Camden. This letter produced the following answer, addressed to the Vice-Chancellor:

BELGRAVE SQUARE,
April 27, 1841.

DEAR SIR,

I have had the Honor of receiving the letter from the Public Orator to which is affixed the Seal of the University of Cambridge.

It has been most gratifying to me to receive this public acknowledgement that the University has been pleased to approve of the Testimonial I proposed giving in grateful recollection of the High and honourable Station which they conferred upon my late Father.

I have the honor to be, Dear Sir,

Your most obedient humble Servant,

CAMDEN⁴.

² Vice-Chancellor's notice, 30 March, 1841.

³ Grace Book E, pp. 184-188.

⁴ Registry, Vol. xxxviii. 14.

This letter was read to the Senate 28 April, 1841, with a fresh announcement of the Prize, and the following regulations¹, which differ very slightly from those dated 30 March and read to the Senate when the Prize was first announced.

1. That this Medal be called The Camden Medal.
2. That the Subject for the Exercises be appointed by the Vice-Chancellor.
3. That notice thereof be issued on or before the first day of January in every year; and that the Exercises be sent in to the Vice-Chancellor on or before the thirty first day of the following March.
4. That no such Exercise exceed in length one hundred lines.
5. That all Undergraduates, who shall have resided not less than two terms before the day on which the Exercises must be sent in, or who shall at least be then in the course of their second Term of residence, may be Candidates for this Medal.
6. That this Medal be adjudged by the Examiners for the Chancellor's Medals; and that the Prize Exercise be recited publicly at the Commencement.
7. That a Copy of the successful Exercise, when printed, be sent annually to the Marquess Camden, the Donor of the Medal.

Lord Camden died in 1866, and in January, 1867, the Vice-Chancellor received the following letter from Edward James, third Earl Powis, High Steward 1863-91:

POWIS CASTLE, WELSHPOOL,
9 January, 1867.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I am desirous of offering to the University a Medal for Latin Hexameters, so as to continue the very useful prize which was given by the late Lord Camden.

I should propose to retain the prize subject to the same conditions as at present, unless there be any point on which a modification may be desirable.

As however the usual time for the announcement of the subject has passed, I should suggest that this year the copies instead of being sent in on March 31, should be sent in as much later as may be consistent with your convenience and that of the other Examiners.

I have the Honour to be,

Your faithful and obedient Servant,

POWIS².

² Registry, Vol. xxxviii. 50.

This intention was made known to the University by the Vice-Chancellor in a notice dated Christ's College Lodge, 14 January, 1867. Regulations were appended to this notice, copied mutatis mutandis from those to which the Camden Medal had been subject. As on the former occasion, they were not submitted to the Senate for confirmation. A letter of thanks, written by the Public Orator, was read to the Senate 19 January, 1867, and directed to be sealed¹.

The Earl of Powis died 7 May, 1891; and his successor in the High Stewardship, Lord Walsingham, announced his intention of giving a Medal for the encouragement of Natural Science. In the following year, however, George Charles, fourth Earl of Powis, nephew to the former High Steward, expressed a wish "to give annually, as a memorial of the long period during which his uncle was High Steward of the University, a gold medal to be called The Powis Medal."² The Council of the Senate made this wish known to the Senate in a report dated 8 February, 1892, which was confirmed by Grace 25 February. This Grace specified that this Medal was to be subject to "the existing regulations for the Powis Medal³."

9. SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND PRIZE.

The history of this prize will be understood from the following letters⁴ addressed by the Reverend Henry Venn to Professor Corrie⁵:

I.

HIGHGATE,

6 June, 1844.

MY DEAR PROFESSOR CORRIE,

Your experience in the University, no less than your peculiar interest in the cause of Christianity in South India, will I am sure plead my apology for troubling you in a matter in which I am desirous of obtaining your advice and assistance.

When Sir Peregrine Maitland, a few years ago, gave up the command of the Army in South India¹ rather than countenance the participation of the troops in idolatrous ceremonies, some of the friends in India subscribed to commemorate his Christian conduct, by establishing scholarships at Bishop Corrie's Grammar School, Madras, and at an English University—such scholarships to be held by persons willing to devote themselves as Missionaries in South India. When Tucker was in England two years ago he made many enquiries on this subject, but came to the conclusion that it would be impracticable to establish such a scholarship at Oxford or Cambridge.

The Subscribers have since proposed to institute a prize Essay upon some subject connected with the propagation of Christianity in India, and they have placed £1000 at the disposal of Mr Cator² and myself for founding, if possible, such a prize, with the annual interest of the money.

Now I shall be greatly obliged to you if you will give me your opinion of the practicability of this scheme....The prize should be called The Sir Peregrine Maitland Prize, and, if the annual interest were insufficient, it might be each second year. But all such matters of detail can be easily arranged if the general scheme is approved of.

Believe me, [etc.]

HENRY VENN³.

II.

HIGHGATE,

18 November, 1844.

MY DEAR PROFESSOR CORRIE,

I have just received from the Vice Chancellor a letter which informs me that the Heads of Colleges have accepted The Peregrine Maitland Prize according to the scheme which we presented to them. There will be a prize of £100 offered this term.

The Vice Chancellor says that the matter shall be brought before the Senate immediately, I presume on the 27th, as I see that is the next Congregation.

I hope to visit Cambridge for a few days at that time—both to see the matter safely through, and also to consult with friends on any means which it may be possible to employ to procure Missionaries from the members of the University, ready prepared to go out....Pray think about this matter...

Ever believe me, my dear Professor Corrie,

Very truly yours,

H. VENN.

³ B.A. 1818; Fellow of Queens' Coll. 1819; M.A. 1821; B.D. 1828; d. 1873.

The Vice-Chancellor, in a notice dated 25 November, 1844, informed the University of the proposed institution of this prize. The following regulations, which, from what Mr Venn says in his second letter to Professor Corrie, were probably drawn up by himself and Mr Cator, are appended to the notice.

Prize to be given every three years.

1. It is suggested that the Prize should be given once in every three years, and should consist of the accruing interest of the principal sum during the preceding three years.

Subject when to be announced.

2. That the subject should be given out in the Michaelmas Term by the Vice-Chancellor, and the exercises sent in before the division of the Easter Term.

Who may be candidates.

3. That the candidates for the Prize should, at the time when the subject is given out, be Bachelors of Arts under the standing of M.A.; or students in Civil Law or Medicine, of not less than four, or more than seven years standing, not being graduates in either faculty, who shall be required, before they are admitted to become candidates, to produce from their respective Professors certificates that they have kept the exercises necessary for the Degree of Bachelor of Law or Medicine.

Examiners.

4. That the examiners for the Prize should be the Vice-Chancellor and two other members of the University, either Masters of Arts, or of degrees superior to the degree of Master of Arts, to be nominated by the Vice-Chancellor and approved by the Senate, and that their names should be announced together with the subject of the essay.

Essay to be printed by Prizeman.

5. That the essay be printed at the expense of the successful candidate; and that fifty copies be distributed to each of the three following institutions: The Society for the Propagation of the Gospel in Foreign Parts; the Church Missionary Society; Bishop Corrie's Grammar School at Madras.

To whom it is to be sent

This document was read to the Senate 27 November, 1844, on which day a Grace passed the Senate accepting the prize and approving the regulations¹.

10. MUIR PRIZE. 1846.

In 1845 John Muir², a gentleman in the service of the East India Company, offered, at the suggestion of the Lord Bishop of Calcutta³, £500 to the University as "a Prize for the best Refutation of Hinduism, and Statement of the Evidences of Christianity in a form suited to the Hindus." This offer was contained in a paper of "Suggestions," dated "Azimgurh, Bengal Presidency, August 6, 1845," addressed to the Vice-Chancellor, and printed by him in quarto for the use of candidates. In the Lent Term of the following year he issued a notice, dated 30 March, 1846, from which those passages are selected which describe the details of the prize as matured between the donors and the University.

The object of the proposal is to cause to be written "Such a Treatise on the Evidences of Christianity as may in substance and form be best suited for the conviction of Hindus, learned in their own philosophical systems; together with such a refutation of Hinduism as may be necessary to establish the exclusive claims and authority of Christianity, as an object of faith and rule of life for the whole of mankind." To the writer of such a Treatise the sum of £500 is offered, under the following conditions:

A Preliminary Prize of £100 shall be offered and adjudged by the University to one of its Graduate Members for a Dissertation upon a subject preparatory to the above described Treatise, or fitted to form a part of it. The person to whom this Prize is adjudged shall, if required by the University, write such a Treatise on the Evidences of Christianity as is described above; and shall print and publish it; on the event of which publication he shall receive the further sum of £400. The subject of the Preliminary Dissertation shall be the following:

"The Principles of Historical Evidence, applied to discriminate between the authority of the Christian Scriptures and of the religious books of the Hindus."

The proposer of the Prize has drawn up a paper containing suggestions of the course of argument which may be adopted in the Treatise, and of sources of information which may be consulted. These suggestions will be printed for the use of the candidates; it being understood that they are not at all bound to adopt the suggestions.

This offer was accepted by Grace 13 May, 1846; and, 24 May, the following examiners were appointed¹: Dr Graham (Master of Christ's); Dr Robinson (Lord Almoner's Reader in Arabic); Mr Scholefield (Regius Professor of Greek).

The preliminary prize of £100 was adjudged to Rowland

Williams, M.A., Fellow of King's College, and the Vice-Chancellor was authorised, on the recommendation of the examiners, to request him to proceed with the composition of the entire treatise (Grace, 9 February, 1848).

This appeared in 1858 under the title of *Christianity and Hinduism*¹.

1846.

In 1845, Richard Burney², M.A., of Christ's College, empowered his cousin, the Venerable Archdeacon Burney³, to offer to the University on his behalf the sum of £3500, for the purpose of establishing an annual prize for the best English Essay on some moral or metaphysical subject, on the Existence, Nature, and Attributes of God, or on the Truth and Evidence of the Christian Religion.

Mr Burney died 30 November, 1845, the day after this offer was communicated to the Vice-Chancellor, but his sister and executrix, Miss Jane Caroline Burney, being desirous of carrying her brother's intentions into effect, generously renewed the offer, subject to certain regulations.

The Vice-Chancellor's notice, from which the above particulars are taken, is dated 3 June, 1846. It was read to the ² Richard Burney was nephew to Charles Burney (see above, p. 124) and Frances Burney, afterwards Mme d'Arblay, children of Dr Charles Burney, the friend of Dr Johnson, and author of the History of Music. He was born in India, his father, Richard Thomas Burney, being in the service of the Hon. East India Company, but he spent some time, as a child, at Haslingfield in Cambridgeshire, where a relation, the Rev. Steph. Allen, was vicar. In due time he returned to India, where he married, but, losing his wife soon afterwards, he returned to England, entered at Christ's College as a fellow-commoner 22 May, 1818, when 28 years old, and proceeded B.A. 1822. After his degree he returned to India, which he finally left in time to proceed M.A. 17 October, 1838. In 1842 he gave to the University the model of the Taj Mahal, now in the Fitzwilliam Museum. Senate 11 June, when a Grace passed, accepting the prize¹. The Grace to seal the Deed of Trust (A) passed the Senate 27 January, 1847².

The regulations (B), appended to the Deed of Trust, were not formally accepted by the Senate; but as a summary of them is given in the Vice-Chancellor's notice which the Senate accepted in June, 1846, it may be concluded that acceptance of them was included in acceptance of the prize.

In 1853 (23 February) the following Grace passed the Senate, changing regulations (6) and (7):

In 1848 (10 November) the Vice-Chancellor informed the University that a large number of members of the Civil Service of India who had been students at the East India College at Haileybury at various intervals during the thirty years that the Reverend Charles Webb Le Bas, formerly Fellow of Trinity College, was connected with it², desirous of testifying their regard for Mr Le Bas, and of perpetuating the memory of his services, had raised a fund amounting to about £1920 three per cent. consols, which they proposed to offer to the University of Cambridge, to found an annual prize, to be called The Le Bas Prize, "for the best English Essay on a subject of General Literature, such subject to be occasionally chosen with reference to the history, institutions, and probable destinies and prospects of the Anglo-Indian empire," under the following regulations:

1. That The Le Bas Prize shall consist of the annual interest of the above-mentioned Fund, the Essay being published at the expense of the successful candidate. Value of prize.

¹ Grace Book O, pp. 367, 368. The following note was appended to the English Grace paper circulated before the Congregation: "A Communication from the Master and Senior Fellows of S. John's College, signifying their approval of these alterations, will be laid on the Registry's table."

² C. W. Le Bas, B.A. 1800, M.A. 1803, was Mathematical Professor and Dean at Haileybury 1813-37, and Principal 1837-43, when he resigned (31 December). He died 25 January, 1861.

4. That the subject shall be given out in the week preceding the division of the Michaelmas Term in each year, and the Essays sent in before the end of the next ensuing Easter Term.

5. Temporary.

The prize and regulations were accepted by Grace 22 November, 1848¹.

In 1857 (23 November) the Council of the Senate proposed a new statute for this prize, which was accepted by the Senate 10 December, and approved by the Queen in Council 6 April, 1858².

In 1879 (20 October) the Council of the Senate, in consequence of the absence of competition for the prize, suggested that new rules should be substituted for rules (3), (4). This report was confirmed by the Senate 30 October, 1879³.

14. WHEWELL MORAL PHILOSOPHY PRIZES.

In 1849 the Reverend William Whewell, D.D., Master of Trinity College, wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor :

I wish to offer to the University two Prizes of fifteen Pounds each, to be given every year, so long as I hold my present Professorship, to the two Persons who shall shew the greatest proficiency in Moral Philosophy in the examination for the Moral Sciences Tripos, appointed to commence in 1851, provided that, in the judgment of the Examiners, they possess sufficient merit¹.

This offer was made known to the University by the Vice-Chancellor 1 December, 1849, and was accepted by Grace 5 December².

In 1851 Dr Whewell offered a second Prize :

TRINITY LODGE,
June 4, 1851.

MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I wish to offer to the University a Prize of twenty Pounds, to be given every year, for the next four years, to the Person who shall shew the greatest Proficiency in Moral Philosophy in the Middle Bachelors Moral Science Tripos Examination, appointed to commence in 1852, provided that, in the judgment of the Examiners, he possess sufficient merit.

I am, Mr Vice-Chancellor,
Your very obedient Servant,
W. WHEWELL.

This offer was made known to the University 5 June, 1851, and accepted by Grace 29 October, 1851³.

The prizes were adjudged in the Triposes of 1851, 1852, 1853, 1854, 1855. In the latter year Dr Whewell resigned the Professorship. His successors have not continued the prize.

15. CARUS GREEK TESTAMENT PRIZE. 1853.

In 1852 (13 December) the Vice-Chancellor informed the Senate

That several Friends of the Rev. William Carus, M.A., Canon of Winchester, and late Senior Fellow of Trinity College, desirous of testifying their regard to Mr Carus, have raised a Fund amounting to £500. 3 per Cent. Consols, which they offer to the University for the purpose of founding a yearly Prize or Prizes for the encouragement of the accurate Study of the Greek Testament.

³ Ibid. p. 262.

This offer was accepted, and Syndics were appointed to draw up regulations, 2 February, 1853¹. Mr Carus himself subsequently offered £500 in augmentation of the Prize. This gift was accepted 25 May².

The Syndics, appointed as above, drew up regulations, which were accepted by the Senate 25 May, 1853².

In 1894 the fund received a further augmentation from an anonymous donor :

KING'S COLLEGE LODGE,
29 January, 1894.

The Vice-Chancellor has received a letter from a Member of Trinity College, who desires to increase the Carus Prize Fund by the gift of one hundred pounds Stock in the $2\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. Consols, as a thank-offering for the instruction received by him, while an undergraduate, from the late Canon Carus, especially in his Sunday-evening addresses in the room over Trinity Gate. The Donor expresses his hope that such a gift might be acceptable to the University in order at least to make up for the recent diminution in the rate of interest ; but he is willing that the additional sum should be used for increasing the value, or towards an augmentation of the number, of the Carus Prizes. The Vice-Chancellor is not at liberty to publish the name of the Donor.

This gift was accepted with thanks, 1 February³.

16. CHANCELLOR'S MEDAL FOR LEGAL STUDIES.

1854.

In 1854 (24 October) the Vice-Chancellor gave notice that His Royal Highness Prince Albert, Chancellor, had signified his intention to give annually a gold medal for the encouragement of legal studies in the University. A Grace to accept this gift, with thanks to the donor, passed the Senate 27 October, and on the same day a Syndicate was appointed to draw up regulations for the prize⁴.

¹ Grace Book O, pp. 335, 336.

² Ibid. pp. 392—396. The Vice-Chancellor informed the Senate of this gift 20 May, 1853. The regulations are printed in Ordinances, ed. 1858, p. 109; and, with certain modifications, in subsequent editions.

³ Reporter, 6 February, 1894, p. 431.

⁴ Grace Book O, pp. 557, 561.

This Syndicate issued a report, dated 10 February, 1855¹, from which the following passage may be quoted, as shewing the Chancellor's intentions, and the line of study which candidates were expected to follow :

In considering the subject referred to them, they have had regard to the desire, which they learn has been expressed by His Royal Highness, the founder of the Prize, to encourage the study of Law as an important part of general education, not only by students intended for the legal profession, but also by other students to whom such study cannot fail to be of essential service.

The Syndicate recommend that, in conducting the annual examination for the Prize, attention should be paid to this object, the examination being directed to such subjects and the examiners selecting such questions as may not give an undue advantage to students who have adopted the Law as a profession.

The Syndicate recommend that the subjects of examination should be, in general, the Elements of Roman Civil Law, the Principles of International Law, the Constitutional History and Constitutional Law of England, and the Principles of the General Law of England, viz. of the Law of real property, of the Law of personal property and Criminal Law, and of Equity.

This report, which contained a list of books recommended, and regulations, was confirmed by Grace 21 February, 1855².

In 1879 the Board of Legal Studies, in a report dated 11 November, suggested "that a distinction would be added to the [Law] Tripos, and a valuable stimulus given to the candidates at present eligible for the Medal, if the prize were determined by a selected part of the Tripos examination³." This report, however, was rejected, 29 April, 1880.

In 1884 the Special Board for Law, in a report⁴ dated 3 November, revived the proposal of connecting the prize with the Tripos, "in the modified form of giving the medal for a special part of the examination"; with the definite suggestion that the study of English Law "would receive a most valuable stimulus if the present medal were awarded for exceptional merit shewn on the Constitutional History and Law of England and the principles of English Law in general." The report further recommended that the medal be henceforth called The Chancellor's Medal for the encouragement of the study of English Law; and they were able to announce (in their Amended Report) that this change had the approval of His Grace the Chancellor.

This report, slightly altered, with regulations, was confirmed by Grace, 11 December, 1884¹.

In 1887 (Grace, 9 June) the medal was connected with the second part of the Law Tripos².

1856.

The Reverend James Scholefield, M.A., Fellow of Trinity College, and Regius Professor of Greek 1825-1853, died 4 April, 1853.

At a meeting held in the Lent Term of the following year to consider what steps should be taken to establish a suitable memorial to him, it was resolved:

That a Fund be raised by subscription, and be offered to the University, with a request that it may be applied to the encouragement of the Critical Study of the Holy Scriptures.

A Committee was formed to carry this resolution into effect, and early in 1856 they were able to offer to the University the sum of £532. 4s. 9d. 3 per cent. consols.

A Grace to accept this sum on the above condition, and to appoint Syndics to frame regulations, passed the Senate

¹ It was discussed 6 November (Reporter, 1884, p. 159); published in an amended form 19 November (ibid. p. 220); and passed 11 December (ibid. p. 274). The regulations, as then accepted, are printed in Ordinances, ed. 1885, p. 410.

² Amended Report of Special Board for Law, 2 May, 1887 (Reporter, 10 May, p. 657).

30 April, 1856¹. The Syndics proposed, in a report dated 20 May, the following regulations:

That the net proceeds in every year of the Fund presented to the University...be given as a Prize to that student among the Middle Bachelors, who, being in the First Class of Honours in the Theological Examination of that year, shall be judged by the examiners to have shown the best knowledge of the Greek Testament and of the Septuagint version of the Old Testament.

That the Prize be called The Scholefield Prize, and that the Prizeman be distinguished as such by a mark attached to his name in the list of Honours published by the examiners².

These regulations were accepted by Grace, 22 May, 1856.

18. HARE PRIZE. 1861.

The following letter was published to the University 4 March, 1861:

This offer, with the regulations, was accepted by the Senate, 7 March, 1861².

In 1902 (5 May) the Council of the Senate published a report³ substituting new regulations for regulations 3—6 in the above code. This report was confirmed 5 June, 1902⁴.

This prize originated with a committee of the subscribers to a memorial which it was proposed to erect to Bishop Kaye⁵ at Lincoln. After erecting a monument to him in the Cathedral a surplus of £500 remained in their hands, with which they at first proposed to found a Scholarship to be called the Kaye Scholarship, and to be given to that candidate who passed the second best examination for the Crosse Scholarship. Dr Ainslie, Master of Pembroke College, who was consulted by the secretary to the committee, pointed out (11 March, 1861) that this scheme "made what can only be called a secondary recognition of the merits of one who was himself second to none," and suggested instead a prize for an English Dissertation. The committee soon afterwards adopted the following resolution :

At a Committee Meeting held in the Vestry in the Cathedral [of Lincoln] on Saturday, April 10th, 1861, present the Chancellor in the Chair, etc.

It was resolved that this Committee having had several propositions under consideration for expending the residue of the subscriptions for a Scholarship or Prize at Cambridge, approve most of the plan recommended by the Master of Pembroke College, viz. : the formation of A Kaye Prize for the graduate of not more than ten years' standing from admission to his first degree, who shall write the best English dissertation upon some subject or question relating to Ancient Ecclesiastical History or to the Canon of Scripture or important points of Biblical criticism : the successful candidate to print and publish his dissertation at his own expense, and that ten copies be sent to the Cathedral Library, Lincoln, for distribution.

The Committee would prefer the Prize being awarded every second or third year, but they wish to leave the further arrangement of the matter in the hands of the Master of Pembroke College and the Reverend the Sub-Dean of Lincoln¹.

That this Meeting recommends the purchase of £500 Great Northern permanent Debenture Stock which yields 4 per cent. thus giving £40 every second year, which they hope will meet with the approbation of the University authorities, and be sufficient to enable them to offer a prize to be given every second year.

Further correspondence having taken place the committee adopted the following Minute, 28 May, 1861 :

A letter from the Rev. the Vice Chancellor and the Master of Pembroke College having been read, Resolved :

That the Committee are desirous that the Prize should be given every fourth year.

That the Secretary buy £500 Consols, and that any surplus in the Bank Account be devoted for the first Prize, to be given as soon as convenient ; and that the next Prize should be given as soon as a four years' Dividend shall have accrued².

² This and other documents relating to the foundation of the Prize are preserved in the Registry, Vol. xxxviii. 34.

The Council of the Senate, in a report dated 3 June, 1861, informed the Senate of the proposed gift and of the conditions, as expressed in the above Minutes, with the addition of clauses providing for the selection of a subject, the date of sending in the exercises, and the appointment of adjudicators¹. This report was confirmed by Grace, 6 June.

In 1865 Augustus Arthur VanSittart, M.A., sometime Fellow of Trinity College, offered to the University £500 Scinde Railway Stock, "for the purpose of encouraging the study of Geology among the resident members of the University, and in honour of the Rev. Adam Sedgwick, Woodwardian Professor of Geology²." For this purpose he proposed to found a Prize, to be called The Sedgwick Prize, under regulations which he drew up himself, after discussion with the Vice-Chancellor, the Council of the Senate, and Professor Sedgwick. By his own wish, expressed in a letter to the Vice-Chancellor dated 2 February, 1865, his name was not mentioned³.

The Council of the Senate informed the University of the gift and the conditions in a report dated 13 February; which was confirmed by Grace 23 February, 1865⁴.

21. HEBREW PRIZE.

1865.

In 1865 the Council of the Senate informed the University, in a report dated 27 November, that:

The sum of £300 has been subscribed by several members of the University for the purpose of founding a Prize for the encouragement of the study of Hebrew in the University; and the subscribers propose to invest the same in the 5 per cent. stock of the Scinde Railway Company.

The subscribers suggest that the annual income of the Fund be given to that student amongst the Commencing or Middle Bachelors, who, being in the first Class of Honours in the Theological Examination, shall be judged by the examiners to have shewn the best knowledge of Hebrew.

They proceeded to recommend :

that the Prize be accepted; and that for the present it be awarded in the manner suggested. Provided however that it shall at any time be competent to the Senate to alter, by Grace, the conditions of the Prize, in accordance with the object contemplated by the Founders.

This report was confirmed by Grace 7 December, 1865¹.

In 1867 the Reverend Joshua Nussey, M.A., of S. Catharine's College, offered £100 to increase the endowment. His gift was accepted by Grace 28 November, 1867².

In 1871 a Syndicate appointed 31 March, 1870, "to consider the whole question of the Theological Examinations in the University, and the Regulations affecting them," proposed new regulations for this prize, in an "Amended Report" dated 27 November, 1871³. This was confirmed by Grace, 8 December⁴.

The regulations were further altered in 1881 by Grace (2 June) confirming an "Amended Report" of the Board of Theological Studies dated 23 May⁵; and again in 1898 by Grace (27 January) confirming a similar report dated 22 November, 1897⁶.

22. WINCHESTER READING PRIZES.

1867.

The founder of these prizes was John Noble, of Park Place, Henley-on-Thames, but his name was not made public until 1888, when it was announced by the Vice-Chancellor¹.

In 1866 the following letter² was received by the Vice-Chancellor:

WINTON HOUSE, WINCHESTER,
4 October, 1866.

SIR,

A friend of mine, who wishes to remain anonymous, is desirous of founding an annual Exhibition of £40 for ever in each of our two Great Universities, for the encouragement of Elocution, or in other words good reading, among Candidates for Holy Orders. My friend wishes to make no restrictions, his only condition being the aforesaid, namely, that the Premium be competed for by persons intending to take Holy Orders, and by no other.

He would prefer that the sum of £40 should be paid over to the successful Candidate on or after the day of Ordination, but this condition is not essential.

On hearing from you that the Council and Senate of the University accept the offer, I will communicate with him on the subject.

Should the University of Cambridge accept my friend's annual Prize of £40, he proposes to invest a sum sufficient for the purpose in the Indian Government 4½ stock which is transferred to the Bank of England.

I am, Reverend Sir,

Your faithful servant,

C. A. JOHNS³.

A Syndicate was appointed, 29 November⁴, to consider this proposal. They reported, 19 February, 1867, that they were unable to devise a satisfactory scheme of examination, and recommended that the offer be declined. Graces to thank the donor and to decline the benefaction having been rejected by the Senate (4 April), a new Syndicate was appointed (16 May)¹. The preamble to the regulations, which they issued 16 October, is important:

Soon after their appointment they framed a Scheme of Examination for awarding the proposed Prizes, and lost no time in submitting it to the Donor for his approval. The Donor wished a proviso to be inserted, which will be found in the 15th of the following regulations², and then approved the Scheme. He requested that the Prizes should be called The Winchester Prizes. The Syndicate now lay this Scheme before the Senate.

This scheme having been accepted by Grace, 14 November, 1867³, a capital sum of £400 India 4 per cent. stock was transferred to the University; and the prize was first awarded in 1868.

The following extracts from a report of the Council of the Senate, dated 1 March, 1869, give the history of this prize, so far as it can now be ascertained:

A sum amounting to not less than £300⁴ has been offered to the University by several friends of the late Venerable R. W. Evans, B.D., formerly Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, and Archdeacon of Westmorland⁵, for the purpose of founding "a prize or prizes bearing the late Archdeacon's name, to be given annually to those students who distinguished themselves in the Voluntary Theological Examination at Cambridge." The Council recommended the acceptance of the prize, and proposed certain regulations. A Grace to confirm their report passed the Senate 13 March, 1869¹.

The following letters, written to the Vice-Chancellor by Dr Jeremie² in 1870, explain his intention in founding this prize :

TRINITY COLLEGE,
29 Sept. 1870.

DEAR MR VICE CHANCELLOR,

I beg you will have the kindness to communicate to the University my Resignation of the office of Regius Professor of Divinity.

May I take this opportunity of offering the sum of £1000 to found two Annual Prizes for the encouragement of a critical study of the Septuagint? I am anxious that the Examination for those Prizes should be open to all members of the University who are not of sufficient standing to take the Degree of M.A.

With every feeling of respect, I remain, dear Mr Vice Chancellor,

Yours very sincerely,

J. A. JEREMIE.

[Without date.]

MY DEAR MR VICE CHANCELLOR,

...I meant to leave the Regulations to yourself and the Council, but I should wish the Examination to be quite separate, and to have no reference to the Theological Tripos. I hoped that the Divinity Professors would kindly undertake to examine, two each year in turn. It appears to me that the best plan would be to select for each Examination large portions of the Septuagint, from Books of different classes—as, for instance, the Pentateuch, the Historical Books, the Psalms, the Proverbs, not excluding the Apocryphal Books. The main object that I had in view was that our students should become familiar with that peculiar idiom which is the true key to the phraseology of the New Testament. I could also wish that the Examiners should draw attention to the Fragments of the other ancient Greek Versions....

Very truly yours,

J. A. JEREMIE¹.

The Council of the Senate informed the University of Dr Jeremie's intention "to found two annual prizes for the encouragement of a critical study of the Septuagint Version of the Old Testament, and such other Hellenistic literature as may serve to illustrate the New Testament" in a report dated 14 November, 1870. In this they recommended the acceptance of the prize, and submitted regulations².

This report was confirmed by Grace, 8 December, 1870³; and, 16 February, 1871, a letter written by the Public Orator, conveying the thanks of the University to Dr Jeremie, was ordered to be sealed⁴. The £1000 above mentioned was invested in the purchase of £1091. 8s. 1d. consols.

The settlement of Mr Yorke's affairs was delayed by legal proceedings, and the bequest to the University did not come before the Council of the Senate until 1873. The following paragraphs are extracted from the report, dated 10 November, in which they laid the matter before the University :

The conditions of the bequest are of such a nature that, in the opinion of the Trustees, the Masters of Trinity and Magdalene Colleges, they cannot be literally carried out with advantage to the University or so as to fulfil the main design of the Testator. In this view the Council of the Senate fully concur.

The Will and Codicil of Mr Yorke have been the subject of proceedings in the Court of Chancery, and some chief points have been decided by the Lord Chancellor. With regard to this special bequest, no proceedings have yet been instituted, but Sir Richard Baggallay and Mr Rigby, in a joint Opinion¹...have advised that an application be made to the Court of Chancery, by means of an Information, in order to obtain a proper Scheme for the administration of this particular Trust, and they recommend that the Vice-Chancellor and some of the University Authorities mentioned in the Codicil should be the Relators in the cause.

The Council being of opinion that, although the matter is surrounded with difficulties, a Scheme may be framed under the authority of the Court, which would carry out the main design of the Testator and would prove beneficial to the University, recommend that Dr Cookson, Dr Bateson, Dr Power, Professor Clark, and Professor Cayley, be authorized, under the advice of Counsel, to proceed in the manner intimated in the Opinion of Sir Richard Baggallay and Mr Rigby; and that any costs of the proceedings not directed to be borne by the Testator's estate, be paid from the University Chest.

The sum of money, which is the subject of the bequest, is about £3900 Consols².

This report was confirmed by Grace, 20 November, 1873; but various delays occurred, and it was not until 1875 that a Scheme was received, signed John Rigby³. This was laid before the Senate in the following report:

10 May, 1875.

The Relators appointed by Grace of the Senate 20 November 1873, to apply to the Court of Chancery for a proper Scheme for the administration of the Bequest of Edmund Yorke, M.A., of St Catharine's College, for the purpose of founding a Prize for an Essay on the Law of Primogeniture, having prepared for the consideration of the Court, under the advice of Counsel, the subjoined scheme for the said purpose, the Council of the Senate beg leave to recommend that the approval of the Senate be given to it, and that the Relators be authorised to take the necessary steps for obtaining the decision of the Court of Chancery on the subject.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 21 May, 1875; and the regulations, having received the sanction of the Court of Chancery, 1 June, 1875, were also approved by Grace, 9 June, 1875².

In the following year, 15 May, the Council of the Senate issued amended Regulations for the Yorke Prize Essay. The report containing them was confirmed by Grace, 1 June, 1876³.

27. COBDEN PRIZE.

1876.

In 1876 (28 February) the Vice-Chancellor published to the Senate the following communication from the Secretary of the Cobden Club:

The Committee of the Cobden Club offer for the acceptance of the University of Cambridge a prize of £20 to be awarded from year to year under the conditions hereinafter specified:

The prize shall be awarded for an Essay on some subject connected with Political Economy, and shall be payable in money to the successful competitor.

The competitors shall be members of the University who, having commenced residence, are not of more than three years' standing from their first degree.

The judges shall be (1) the Professor of Political Economy in the University of Cambridge for the time being, (2) one person to be appointed annually by the Vice-Chancellor, (3) one person to be appointed annually by the donors: and the prize shall be awarded to that Essay which in the judgment of at least two of the judges, certified under their hand to the Vice-Chancellor, shall show the greatest amount of literary merit together with the greatest knowledge of the subject proposed.

The subject of the prize shall be fixed for the ensuing year by the judges, or a majority of them, for the current year; but the subject of the first prize shall be fixed by the donors, subject to the joint approval of the Vice-Chancellor and the Professor of Political Economy.

The competing Essays shall be sent in to the Registrar of the University on a day to be fixed from year to year by the Vice-Chancellor.

The donors of the prize reserve to themselves the right to determine the said prize on giving one year's notice to the Vice-Chancellor.

The Prize shall be called *The Cobden Prize*¹.

On the same day the Council of the Senate gave notice of a Grace to "appoint a Syndicate to consider the offer made to the University by the Committee of the Cobden Club, and the proposed Regulations for the Prize, and to confer with the Donors thereon²."

This Grace, after discussion, 3 March³, passed the Senate 16 March; and the Syndicate issued a report, dated 18 May, in which they stated that they had suggested to the Committee of the Cobden Club "with a view to increasing the importance and influence of the prize, it should be of the value of £60 offered triennially instead of an annual prize of the value of £20, as at first proposed," with other changes of less importance, and that these suggestions had "been adopted by the donors with obliging readiness." They therefore recommended that the offer of the Cobden Club should be accepted, and proposed regulations⁴. This report, after discussion, 27 May⁵, was confirmed by the Senate 1 June, 1876, but not without opposition⁶.

In 1891 the Vice-Chancellor received the following letter dated 23 January:

We the undersigned, being those Resident Members of the Senate who have acted as examiners for the Cobden Prize, desire to represent to the Council that too short a time is in our opinion allowed for writing the Essays for that Prize. The subject of the Essays is announced in the first half of an Easter Term, and the Essays are sent in on the first day of the following Easter Term. A great deal of special reading is generally required; and the candidates seldom get much further during the Long Vacation than to determine the general drift of their Essays. Most of them are engaged in teaching during the two following Terms, and have not time for working out their Essays satisfactorily. It is within our knowledge that in recent years several promising Essays have, for this reason, been abandoned, and never submitted to the examiners.

Accordingly we venture to suggest that, the other Regulations for the Prize remaining unaltered, the date for sending in the Essays should be changed to the first day of Full Term in the October of the year following that in which the subject of the Essays is announced.

The Committee of the Cobden Club have expressed their assent to the proposed change¹.

This suggestion was approved by the Council of the Senate, who issued a report, dated 16 February, recommending that the third regulation should be altered into its present form. This report was confirmed by Grace, 5 March, 1891².

In 1898 the value of the prize was altered, as explained in the following letter addressed to the Vice-Chancellor:

COBDEN CLUB,
21 February, 1898.

DEAR SIR,

The Committee of the Cobden Club, in view of the Club's many responsibilities in connection with its work, find it expedient to reduce the Triennial Prize of £60, offered for competition to the University, to a Prize of £20 together with a Cobden Club Silver Medal.

The Committee venture to hope that the offer of a Prize of £20 and a Silver Medal, in lieu of £60, will not be unacceptable.

Yours very obediently,

RICHARD GOWING,
Secretary.

P.S. The Committee do not desire, of course, to disturb arrangements which are probably in a forward condition with respect to the forthcoming competition³.

28. GEORGE LONG PRIZE.

After the death of George Long, M.A. (Craven University Scholar, 1821, Fellow of Trinity College, 1823), who died 10 August, 1869, some of his pupils and friends, desiring to testify their veneration for his character, and the high sense they entertained of his services to literature and education, raised a fund amounting to £500, called The Long Memorial Fund, which their committee offered to the University to provide a prize or medal for that candidate in the Law Tripos who shall be most distinguished in the papers on Roman Law and Jurisprudence; but the distinction was only to be awarded in cases of exceptional merit, and not necessarily in each year².

This proposal was made known to the University by the Board of Legal Studies in a report dated 23 March, 1881³. It was offered for discussion (3 May), but no remarks were made; and the Board subsequently replaced it by an "Amended Report" dated 28 May⁴, in which regulations for the prize, and its acceptance by the University, were proposed. In this report the object of the prize is stated as follows:

A sum of five hundred pounds has been offered to the University by the Committee of the subscribers to a Memorial of the late George

This report was confirmed by Grace, 2 June, 1881¹.

29. GEORGE WILLIAMS PRIZE.

In 1881 (8 December), the Board of Theological Studies informed the University that the friends of the Reverend George Williams², B.D., vicar of Ringwood, and formerly Fellow of King's College, who died 26 January, 1878, had collected a sum amounting to £300 for the purpose of founding an annual prize, to be called The George Williams-Prize, for students who distinguish themselves in the Theological Tripos.

Regulations for the prize were appended to the report announcing the proposed gift, in the first of which it was defined that the prizeman should be "that student among the candidates for Honours in the second part of the Theological Tripos, who shall be judged by the examiners to stand first in the papers on Doctrine and the Ancient Liturgies³."

30. MASON PRIZE FOR BIBLICAL HEBREW.

In 1883 (27 April) the Vice-Chancellor was informed that:

M.A., Fellow of S. John's College, for the purpose of establishing a University Prize to be connected with his name, and to be called The Mason Prize for Biblical Hebrew, and the money raised having been invested in 3½ p.c. Birmingham Corporation Bonds, the Secretary and Treasurer of the Fund beg to offer for the acceptance of the University, the abovenamed Stock, and suggest the following regulations with respect to the Prize¹.

When this communication was discussed (26 May) it was pointed out that the second regulation did not express with sufficient clearness the meaning intended². The regulation in question was therefore amended, and the proposal embodied by the Council of the Senate in a report dated 28 May³. This was confirmed by Grace, 31 May⁴.

The second regulation was further altered by Grace, 2 February, 1893⁵.

31. PRINCE CONSORT PRIZE.

1883.

The origin of this Prize is explained by the following documents:

PETERHOUSE LODGE,
May 28, 1883.

1. The Vice-Chancellor begs leave to inform the subscribers to the Memorial to His Royal Highness the late Prince Consort, that by the kind permission of the Master of Trinity College, a meeting of the Subscribers will be held in Trinity Lodge on Tuesday, June 12, 1883, at 4 o'clock P.M., to consider the best mode of disposing of the surplus funds, which amount to nearly £1800.

His Grace the Chancellor of the University has kindly promised to preside⁶.

to His Royal Highness the late Prince Consort, held at Trinity Lodge on Tuesday, June 12, 1883, His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, Chancellor of the University, presiding, the following resolution was proposed by the Vice-Chancellor, seconded by the Vice-Master of Trinity College, and unanimously carried :

“That the surplus of the Fund subscribed for the Cambridge University Memorial to the Prince Consort be paid over to the University, and that the Senate be requested to invest it in such securities as they may think fit, and to apply the income thereof to found a Prize or Scholarship, to bear the Prince Consort’s name, for the promotion of Historical Studies in such manner as they may from time to time determine.”

Her Majesty the Queen has been graciously pleased to express to His Grace the Chancellor that she highly approves of the decision the subscribers have come to with respect to the disposition of the surplus¹.

In consequence of this resolution, the following Graces passed the Senate 23 June, 1883 :

That the offer of the Subscribers to the Cambridge University Memorial to His Royal Highness the Prince Consort, respecting the disposition of the surplus of the Fund, contained in the Resolution adopted at a meeting held on June 12, 1883, be accepted.

That the surplus of the Fund mentioned in the preceding Grace when paid over to the University be invested in the purchase of London and North Western 4 per cent. Preference Stock, and that the Common Seal of the University be affixed to the Transfer Deed².

32. THIRLWALL PRIZE.

In 1884 (6 June) the Vice-Chancellor published the following letter³:

the sum of £1175. 10s., now lying on deposit at Messrs Mortlock's Bank, for the purpose of instituting a Prize in the University, to be called The Thirlwall Prize, for the best Dissertation on some historical subject involving original research.

Believe me, yours very truly,

W. ALDIS WRIGHT,
Secretary.

The following Grace passed the Senate, 12 June, 1884:

That the offer of the Thirlwall Memorial Committee of a sum of £1175. 10s. for the purpose of founding a Prize to be called The Thirlwall Prize be accepted on the conditions contained in Mr Wright's letter dated June 6, 1884, and that the thanks of the University be given to the Subscribers¹.

PRINCE CONSORT PRIZE and THIRLWALL PRIZE in common.

In 1884 (4 December) a Syndicate was appointed "to frame regulations for the Prize or Scholarship (as may seem best to the Syndicate) for the promotion of Historical studies, founded by the subscribers to the Cambridge University Memorial to the Prince Consort, and for the Thirlwall Prize"²; with instructions to report to the Senate before the end of the Lent Term, 1885. Their number was enlarged by the addition of two members on February 19, 1885³. On March 10, 1885, the Syndicate reported that, in their opinion, the end in view would be best attained if the funds were applied to the publication of those dissertations which the examiners in any year should decide to be deserving of that honour, a simple medal being given to the author of each dissertation so printed. They recommended an extension of their powers and of the duration of their office, so as to enable them to make complete recommendations on this basis, if, on further consideration, they still desired to do so⁴. This report was approved on March 19, 1885⁵. The powers of the Syndicate were accordingly prolonged to the end of the Easter Term, and by a subsequent Grace, October 15, 1885¹, to the end of the Michaelmas Term².

This report is dated 12 November, 1885. After a brief history of the gifts, and the paragraph of which the substance has been quoted above, they state that "they see no reason for departing from the opinion expressed in their first report"; and recommend the adoption of regulations for the two prizes on that basis. This report was confirmed by Grace, 17 December, 1885³.

In 1898 (27 October) the Senate sanctioned a change in the fourth regulation for both prizes, by substituting the words "under the age of twenty-seven years" for the words "four years' standing from admission to their first degree⁴."

33. { MARSHALL POLITICAL ECONOMY PRIZE, 1886 ;
ADAM SMITH PRIZE IN ECONOMICS, 1891.

This prize was originally founded in 1886 by Alfred Marshall, M.A., who had been elected Professor of Political Economy in 1884. It was then called The Marshall Political Economy Prize. The following documents explain the history and change of name.

17, CHESTERTON ROAD,
15th March, 1886.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I desire to offer through you to the University a Political Economy Prize of £15 in each of the next five years to be spent in economic books; and to be awarded by an examination in Political Economy open to all members of the University under the standing of M.A. I should wish that the examiners be directed to publish the names of those who acquit themselves in a manner deserving honourable mention; and that the first award be in June, 1887.

² Report of Syndicate dated 12 November. Ibid. 24 November, p. 193.

³ Reporter, 7 January, 1886, p. 297. The regulations are printed in Ordinances, ed. 1888, pp. 470—474.

⁴ Amended Report of Special Board for History and Archaeology, 3 May, 1898; Reporter, 24 May, p. 841. The first edition of this report is dated 15 May, 1897 (Reporter, 25 May, p. 978).

I hope that a prize may be offered under these or similar arrangements during the whole of my tenure of my chair : but, as the scheme is in some respects a new experiment, I think it best to ask the Senate to sanction it for five years only in the first instance.

I propose to put the sum of £10 each year in the hands of the Vice-Chancellor for the expenses of the examination. I should be glad that this money should be placed at the disposal of the Moral Sciences Board, who have consented, should the scheme be approved by the Senate, to conduct the proposed examination, which in their view should consist of the papers on "Political Economy" in Part I., and on "Advanced Political Economy" in Part II., of the Moral Sciences Tripos.

My reason for making this proposal is that our present examinations do not allow scope for all the interests that are connected with economic studies. Provision has indeed been made for the most important of them by the Moral Sciences and Historical Triposes ; and to their broadening and stimulating influence much of the recent progress of English Political Economy is due. But the Science has many sides. On some sides the best preparation is to be found in Natural Sciences studies, on others in Mathematical and on others in Legal ; while the speculations of Aristotle and Plato often direct the attention of Classical students to the subject. The events of our own age are leading all thoughtful men constantly to read and talk on economic problems, especially if they intend to become ministers of religion or are looking forward to a political career. Thus Economics holds a singular position. It is, I think, the only subject of which the unsystematic study in the University exceeds the systematic : the only one which finds a great portion of its ablest and most diligent students among those who are preparing for, or have graduated in, Triposes in which it is not represented. I want to supply an examination which, by offering public recognition of thorough work, will help to steady and systematise this unsystematic study. To do this effectively its standard must be high : but it must be confined to the Science itself, so that it may not repel men who can spare but a limited time from their own pursuits. Those who enter for it will, I trust, often be led on to the philosophical and historical studies which are intimately connected with Economic Science.

I am, Dear Mr Vice-Chancellor, Yours faithfully,

ALFRED MARSHALL¹.

The letter having been discussed (20 May)², the Council of the Senate, in a report dated 7 June, published regulations for the prize, suggested by Professor Marshall, and recommended that the prize be accepted and the regulations confirmed¹. A Grace to this effect and to thank Professor Marshall, passed the Senate 10 June².

When the five years for which the prize was offered had nearly expired, Professor Marshall wrote again to the Vice-Chancellor proposing a change in the nature of the prize, and suggesting regulations for a new prize, to be called The Adam Smith Prize:

24 January, 1891.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

The term of five years for which The Political Economy Prize—or, as it has been called by the Council, The Marshall Prize—was sanctioned by the Senate, is now drawing to a close. The main object of the scheme was to give a definite aim to the reading of Economics by such Graduates under the standing of M.A. as were already inclined to take an interest in that subject, but lacked either the time or the inclination to enter for the Moral Science or Historical Tripos. It seemed especially desirable to offer to those, who were likely to be candidates for College Fellowships, an opportunity of obtaining a certificate of the value of any thorough work they might do in a subject that lies outside of the most beaten tracks of University study.

The scheme has worked fairly well so far as its main purpose is concerned. But some objection has recently been made to it on the ground that, especially under the new Regulations for the Moral Sciences Tripos, it may have the undesirable side effect of inducing candidates for the Second Part of that Tripos to select Political Economy as their main subject, when they would not otherwise have done so. Moreover that Tripos now goes some way towards meeting the wants of those students who wish to have their knowledge of Economics tested at the end of their fourth year of Residence.

For these reasons I propose to discontinue the Examination Prize, and to substitute for it a triennial Essay Prize, the Essays for which should be sent in at times midway between those proposed for the Cobden Prize Essays. I desire thus to work by a new route towards my old aim of attracting to the study of Economics men who are able to bring to it highly trained minds, and who may have gradually acquired, by intelligent observation of what goes on around them, a sound knowledge of contemporary economic conditions; but who, for the present at all events, cannot give their whole time to economic studies. Accordingly, in the draft regulations which I enclose, as indicating the general drift of my wishes, I propose that each candidate should choose his own subject; and that no one should be put at a great disadvantage through the want of extensive literary and historical knowledge.

The next Cobden Prize will be awarded in 1892; and should my proposal be sanctioned by the Senate, I should send to the Secretary of the Financial Board in 1894, and in each successive third year during the continuance of the scheme, the sum of £70, of which £60 would be for the Prize and £10 for the additional Examiner.

I have the honour to remain, Dear Mr Vice-Chancellor,

Yours very truly,

ALFRED MARSHALL.

P.S. The Draft Regulations have been approved by the Special Board for Moral Sciences. A. M.¹

The above letter and the regulations were embodied by the Council of the Senate in a report dated 16 February, 1891, which was confirmed by Grace, 5 March².

34. WALSINGHAM MEDAL. 1891.

In 1891, Lord Walsingham, High Steward of the University, expressed a "wish to give annually for three years a Gold Medal [to be called The Walsingham Medal] for the best Monograph or Essay giving evidence of original research in any subject coming under the cognisance of the Special Board for Biology and Geology."

This proposal was made known to the University by the Council of the Senate in a report dated 16 November, 1891; which contained also regulations, to be in force for three years, for the award of the Medal, drafted by the Special Board for Biology and Geology, and approved by the High Steward³.

³ Ibid. 17 November, 1891, pp. 185, 186.

The High Steward was thanked for his generous offer, and the regulations were approved by Grace, 3 December, 1891¹.

In 1895, in accordance with regulation 9, the Special Board issued the following report²:

25 January 1895.

In 1892 no Essay was received.

In 1893 five Essays were received, two being on Zoological subjects, one on Botany, one on Geology and one on Physiology. On all these Essays Reports were obtained in accordance with the regulation (no. 6) and the Medal was adjudged to E. W. MacBride, B.A., Fellow of St John's College.

In 1894 two Essays were received, one on a Zoological, the other on a Botanical subject. These were referred according to the regulation and the Medal was adjudged to I. H. Burkill, B.A., Shuttleworth Scholar of Gonville and Caius College.

The notice required by the regulations was in each year duly given by the Board, but the small number of Essays received seems to shew that some of those who would otherwise willingly compete for the prize find that the period during which they are qualified is insufficient for the accomplishment of such original investigation as they would consider likely to be successful. The Board are of opinion that this period might with advantage be extended, and therefore recommend :

(1) That, should the High Steward continue his generous offer, regulation No. 3 should run as follows :

Candidates for the Medal shall be Graduates of the University who at the time fixed for sending in the Essays are under the standing of Master of Arts.

(2) That in regulation 5 the word 'tenth' be substituted for the word 'first.'

(3) That regulation 9 should stand thus :

That the regulations be subject to revision from time to time by the Special Board for Biology and Geology with the consent of the Donor of the Medal.

(4) That the following regulation be added :

10. That the Medal shall not be awarded twice to the same person.

When this report was discussed (7 February) Professor Newton stated his dissent from regulation 10³. The report was, in consequence, referred back to the Board and reissued, 15 March, as an *Amended Report*¹ without the regulation which had been objected to. In this form it was confirmed by Grace, 9 May, 1895. On the same day the University was informed by the Vice-Chancellor, that "the High Steward has signified to the Vice-Chancellor his intention of continuing the annual award of the Walsingham Medal, originally offered for three years only."

In 1898 (10 June) the Special Board issued a report in which they stated that the High Steward had "suggested the desirability of awarding a Second Walsingham Medal in cases of exceptional merit, and had expressed his willingness to give a bronze replica of the Medal for this purpose²."

In the same report it was proposed "that those who have graduated as Advanced Students be not admissible as candidates" for the Walsingham Medal. After the report had been discussed (3 November)³, an Amended Report was issued (28 April, 1899⁴) in which this proposal assumed the form now printed in the Ordinances (ed. 1901, p. 575). It was confirmed in two Graces, 11 May, 1899⁵.

35. TYSON MEDAL.

Mr Henry Tyson, formerly Manager of the Bank of Westmorland, Kendal, who died 27 March, 1852, by will dated 13 August, 1851, made the following bequest to the University of Cambridge:

That the sum of three hundred pounds be paid to the Cambridge University the interest annually to be for a gold medal for the best proficient in Mathematics and Astronomy in the same way as Dr Smith's⁵ and to bear the donor's name⁶.

The bequest was subject to the life-interest of his widow, who died in the course of the year 1880.

⁶ The Will was proved in the Consistory Court at Lancaster, 16 July, 1852. The above extract is from an office copy of the Will preserved in the Registry, Vol. xxxviii. No. 61.

On 18 August, 1880, the Vice-Chancellor was informed by Messrs Sharp and Son, Solicitors, Lancaster, that the legacy of £300 was then payable to the University. The matter was referred to the Board of Mathematical Studies, who reported in favour of accepting the bequest. The sum was paid, and was invested at the end of the year 1880 in the purchase of consols; but, by inadvertence, steps were not taken immediately after the receipt of the bequest to frame regulations for the award of the Medal and submit them to the Senate for approval.

In 1893 (22 May) the Council of the Senate issued a report¹, from which the above particulars are derived, recommending that regulations for The Tyson Medal, framed by the Special Board for Mathematics, should be accepted. This report was confirmed by Grace, 15 June, 1893².

In 1893 (13 June) the University confirmed the degree of Doctor of Law (honoris causa) upon His Highness Takhtsinhji, Maharaja of Bhaonagar. Shortly afterwards, before returning to India, he informed the Vice-Chancellor that he desired to found a prize at the University of Cambridge; and for this end he sent a sum of £200. His Highness desired that the prize should be a medal, and that the conditions for the award of the medal should be determined by Sir James Peile, Member of the Council for India, Dr Peile, Master of Christ's College, and M. M. Bhownaggee, Esq., C.I.E. These gentlemen, "after full consideration of the possible applications of His Highness' gift," were of opinion that it would "be best employed in the establishment of a Bhaonagar Medal which shall bear the likeness of the Maharaja and shall be given to the selected candidate who (being a Cambridge man) stands highest on the combined results of the examination for selection for the Indian Civil Service and of the final examination which must be passed by selected candidates after their year of probation at some University.”

The Council of the Senate, in a report dated 30 October, 1893¹, from which the above particulars have been taken, recommended that the gift should be cordially accepted, as a further link between the University and India, and expressed their concurrence in the scheme for the award of the medal which had been submitted to them.

They further recommended that the thanks of the University should be conveyed to the Maharaja, and proposed regulations. This report was confirmed by Grace, 23 November, 1893².

37. GEDGE PRIZE. 1897.

The founder of this prize was Joseph Gedge, of Gonville and Caius College, M.B. 1869. He accompanied Sir Samuel Baker's Egyptian Expedition as medical officer, and died at Khartoum, 21 October, 1870. His Will (A), drawn up before he left England in 1869, and the codicil (B), drawn up at Khartoum in March, 1870, are as follows:

Signed on the twenty sixth day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy by

JOSEPH GEDGE

26 March 1870.

These documents were published by the Vice-Chancellor 1 March, 1871¹. On the death of Mr Gedge's mother, which took place in 1897, the Council of the Senate recommended (15 November) that the prize should be accepted, and that the Special Board for Biology and Geology should frame regulations². This recommendation having been confirmed by Grace, 25 November, 1897, the Board published the regulations which, with certain changes, are still in force, in a report dated 1 March, 1898³, with the following explanatory preamble:

The Board are of opinion that Mr Gedge intended by his bequest to encourage in the University that branch of knowledge which since his death has had assigned to it a Professorship, namely that of Physiology. At the same time the testimony of those who were well acquainted with Mr Gedge during his life leads to the belief that a broad interpretation of the word Physiology would be consonant with Mr Gedge's intentions. The Board have accordingly in drawing up the following regulations for the administration of the Prize introduced words which they think will prevent the award of the Prize being limited by a too restricted use of the word Physiology.

The Board are further of opinion that by the words "Museums of Anatomy and Physiology," the testator meant what is now called the Museum of Zoology.

This report ended with the following clause:

The Board, understanding that the question of the admission of Advanced Students as candidates for University Prizes is now under the consideration of the General Board of Studies, have not suggested any regulations dealing with this class of students.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 26 May, 1898. Shortly afterwards, it having become known that the General Board of Studies did not propose to offer any regulation which would cover the case of Advanced Students in relation to the Gedge Prize, the Special Board issued a report, dated 10 June, 1898⁴, in which they recommended that Advanced Students should not be admissible as candidates. After discussion this report was reissued as an "Amended Report," 28 April, 1899¹, in which the above recommendation was adhered to. The Council of the Senate, however, declined to submit it to the Senate for confirmation, on the ground that Counsel's opinion should first be taken on the powers of the University with regard to Advanced Students. The case was submitted to Mr Ingle Joyce, who replied that it was not competent for the University to exclude Advanced Students; but, as to the possibility of the University obtaining the power to do so, he stated:

Inasmuch as circumstances have changed since the Testator's death by the admission of Advanced Students under the Regulation with respect thereto, I do not doubt that upon a proper application by the University to a Judge of the Chancery Division by originating Summons in Chambers (with the Attorney General as respondent) a proper scheme could be obtained without difficulty embodying the regulations with reference to the Gedge Prize which the University Authorities desire to have legalised; and such scheme being approved by the Judge would be legally binding upon everyone even though its terms or some of them might be at variance with the literal terms of the Will or Codicil².

The Board therefore recommended that such application should be made³, and their recommendation was confirmed by Grace, 15 February, 1900⁴.

In accordance with this Grace of the Senate, an application was made to the Chancery Division of the High Court of Justice, and on 28 May, 1900, the following order was obtained:

The Judge doth declare that notwithstanding the terms of the Will and Codicil of the above named Testator Joseph Gedge it is proper and expedient that the existing conditions of competition for the Gedge Prize be varied so as to make the competition more equal as between Advanced Students and other Students in the University of Cambridge.

And it is Ordered without prejudice to the powers vested in the Senate under the Testator's Will that the Plaintiffs be at liberty for the purpose aforesaid to vary the conditions of competition for the aforesaid Prize (1) By making it a condition that candidates who have been admitted to the University as Advanced Students must be of not less than three years' and not more than five years' standing from matriculation and (2) By making it a condition that a candidate who has received a Certificate of Research from the University shall not be entitled to submit an Essay which is substantially the same as the Dissertation for which such Certificate of Research was granted and (3) By introducing any alterations consequent upon the foregoing changes.

This order was published by the Council of the Senate in a report dated 22 October, 1900¹, which ended with the following recommendations:

1. That the following clause be added after the words "from matriculation" in Regulation 3 for the Gedge Prize.

"Provided that a candidate who has been admitted to the University as an Advanced Student must be of not less than three years' and not more than five years' standing from matriculation."

2. That the following clause be added at the end of Regulation 2 for the Gedge Prize.

"Provided that a candidate who has received a Certificate of Research from the University shall not be entitled to submit an Essay which is substantially the same as the Dissertation for which such Certificate of Research was granted."

This report was confirmed by Grace, 8 November, 1900².

38. RAYMOND HORTON-SMITH PRIZE.

In 1900 (26 February) the Council of the Senate reported as follows:

They have received a communication from Mr Richard Horton-Smith³, M.A., one of Her Majesty's Counsel and late Fellow of St John's College, in which he offers to the University a fund of £500 Great Northern Railway 4 per cent. Preferred Converted Ordinary Stock together with the dividend accrued thereon in August 1899, in memory of his third son, Raymond John Horton-Smith, M.A., M.B., late Scholar of St John's College⁴; who after a distinguished career in the University and at St Thomas's Hospital in London died on the 8th of October 1899 in the twenty-seventh year of his age.

The desire of the donor is that a University Prize should be founded for the encouragement of Medicine and Pathology ; and his offer is accordingly made subject to the approval by the Senate of the following conditions, which are set forth in the form of regulations for the proposed Prize.

The Council have ascertained that the Special Board for Medicine would welcome the establishment of such a Prize, and that the proposed regulations¹ have their approval.

The Council accordingly recommend :

“That the offer to the University by Mr Richard Horton-Smith, M.A., Q.C., of St John’s College, of a Fund for the establishment of The Raymond Horton-Smith Prize be gratefully accepted ; that the regulations for the Prize set forth in this report be approved by the Senate ; and that the Vice-Chancellor be authorised to convey to the Donor the thanks of the University for his benefaction².”

A Grace to confirm this recommendation passed the Senate 15 March, 1900³.

In February, 1900, the Vice-Chancellor communicated to the Council of the Senate an offer that he had received from the Reverend Thomas Wiltshire⁴, M.A., of Trinity College, to present to the University two Egyptian Unified Bonds of £100 each with the object of promoting the study of Geology and Mineralogy by the foundation of a University Prize to be awarded annually for proficiency in these two subjects.

The Council referred the offer in the first instance to the Special Board for Biology and Geology and the Special Board for Physics and Chemistry, and in the report (dated 21 May) in which they announced the prize to the Senate, they were able to state that at a joint meeting of the two Boards held on May 14 it had been unanimously agreed to approve regulations for The Wiltshire Prize which had been approved by the donor, and to recommend that the prize be accepted subject to these regulations¹.

Graces to accept the prize, to thank the donor, and to approve the regulations passed the Senate 14 June, 1900².

40. GLADSTONE MEMORIAL PRIZE.

The history of this prize is contained in the following extract from a report of the Council of the Senate, dated 13 May, 1901³:

Towards the end of 1899 the Vice-Chancellor received from Lord Tweedmouth, Chairman of the Committee of the Liberal Memorial to Mr Gladstone, a letter informing him that the Committee of the Memorial Fund proposed to establish Gladstone Memorial Prizes to be given in books at certain Universities and University Colleges in Great Britain for proficiency in History, Political Science, and Economics.

The offer made to the University of Cambridge was a biennial prize of the value of £20 to be given for proficiency in the above-named subjects or any of them at the discretion of the University; and the Trustees afterwards stated that they would be pleased to substitute for the biennial prize of £20 an annual prize of the value of £10.

This proposal was referred by the Council to the Special Board for History and Archaeology. They drafted regulations, which, after approval by the Trustees of the Gladstone Memorial Trust, were submitted to the Senate in the above report. A Grace to confirm this, to accept The Gladstone Memorial Prize, with the regulations, and to thank the donors, passed the Senate, 6 June, 1901⁴.

1. SKINNERS' COMPANY.

a. SIR JAMES LANCASTER.

There are four Exhibitions connected with the benefaction of Sir James Lancaster (A.D. 1618), of the value of £21 a year each, in the gift of the Skinners' Company.

They are intended for students of Divinity, two being tenable at the University of Oxford and two at Cambridge.

b. MR EDWARD LEWIS.

There is also an Exhibition, tenable only at the University of Cambridge, connected with the benefaction of Mr Edward Lewis (A.D. 1673), of the value of £21 a year, in the gift of the Skinners' Company.

The above-mentioned Exhibitions are awarded as a rule to Undergraduates who have already kept their first year or three terms at the University.

Students who have taken the degree of B.A. are not eligible.

When a vacancy occurs, notice is sent to the Tutor of each College and to the Censor of Non-Collegiate Students.

It is usual, when there is a vacancy, to fill it up in November.

Any Undergraduate who, being qualified to be a candidate, wishes to have notice of a vacancy, should write to the Clerk of the Company, Skinners' Hall, Dowgate Hill, London, E.C., in September.

2. LEATHER SELLERS' COMPANY.

The various benefactions for the assistance of poor students at the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge, made, among others, by Mrs Ann Elliott, Mr George Humble, Mr William Moseley, Mr Robert Rogers, and entrusted to the above Company, are now administered by them in accordance with schemes settled by the Court of Chancery. The following particulars are derived from the circular issued to candidates by the Clerk to the Company :

1. Poor students alone are eligible.

2. There are 8 exhibitions of £25 a year each, tenable by non-collegiate students only, viz., 4 at Oxford, and 4 at Cambridge, for students of two terms' standing, and which are awarded on the recommendation of the Non-Collegiate Students' Board or Delegacy. Further particulars can be obtained from the Censors, the information mentioned below not being applicable to these exhibitions.

3. There are also 8 Exhibitions for which both collegiate and non-collegiate students are eligible. Four of them are limited to students of Divinity.

4. Of the 4 Divinity Exhibitions—

The exhibitions may usually be held for about 3 years from matriculation, subject to the conditions above mentioned, and provided the student continue resident at the University which he shall have entered, and also in the case of divinity exhibitions, that he shall not receive any "ecclesiastical preferment" during such residence.

3. VISCOUNTESS LUMLEY.

Elizabeth, Viscountess Lumley, by Will dated 8 October, 1657, made certain bequests in favour of schools at Sinnington and Thornton in the County of York. Among these bequests is the following :

That the said Minister Churchwardens and Overseers [of Sinnington] were also to pay to the poore Scholars of Cambridge and Oxford educated in the said School (if any such there were) and in default thereof to so many poore scholars not exceeding tenn who were to be nominated by the Convocations of the said Universityes £4 a yeare a peice till they became Graduates five of which were to be of Cambridge and five of Oxford¹.

The Scheme by which this Charity is now administered empowers the Governors (Sect. 64) "if the income of the Foundation is sufficient, to maintain Exhibitions at any institution of higher education approved by them."

4. CHRIST'S HOSPITAL, WINCHESTER.

In 1895 the Charity Commissioners made a Scheme for the administration of two foundations in the City of Winchester: (1) Christ's Hospital, founded under the Will of Peter Symonds dated 24 April, 1586; (2) Pemerton's or Pemberton's donation. These foundations were to be united, and administered by a Governing Body under the name of Christ's Hospital in Winchester. This Scheme was approved by the Queen in Council, 13 May, 1896.

It was provided (among other things):

61. The Governors shall maintain two Exhibitions, each of a yearly value of not more than £15, tenable for not more than four years by Students in Divinity:

One at the University of Oxford; and

One at the University of Cambridge.

63. The Scholarships and Exhibitions shall be established in such manner and order as to secure as nearly as may be a regular rotation of award, and, subject as herein provided, shall be awarded and held under such regulations and conditions as the Governors think fit. Every Scholarship and Exhibition shall be given as the reward of merit on the result of such examination as the Governors think fit, and shall, except as herein provided, be freely and openly competed for, and shall be tenable only for the purposes of education².

¹ From a report of a suit in Chancery, 5 May, 1739. Registry, Vol. xxxviii. No. 40.

² Registry, Vol. xxxviii. No. 69.

This Exhibition is given as the reward of merit on the result of the first part of any Tripos examination to a candidate who is, or intends to be, a student in Divinity. It is tenable for one year, but the holder is re-eligible. The Governors require from each candidate a statement of his birth-place, of the names and residence of his parents, and of their position and means¹.

5. CLOTHWORKERS' COMPANY.

The Clothworkers' Company give six Exhibitions of £30 a year (with additions on admission to a degree) to Non-Collegiate Students at Cambridge; one of these is awarded annually in November to a Student nominated by the Censor after residence for not less than a year. These Exhibitions are given to those students only who propose to take Holy Orders.

MARMADUKE LEVITT SCHOLARSHIP.

In 1886 the Council of the Senate were informed that Mr Marmaduke Levitt had left funds "for promoting the cause of education whether in middle-class schools or otherwise or by founding Scholarships in the University of Cambridge"; and that his trustees proposed to assign £1000 for the establishment of a Scholarship to be held at Cambridge by persons of small means. The Council suggested that this sum should be increased to £1500 consols, and that the award of the Scholarship should be entrusted to the Local Examinations Syndicate. The trustees accepted both these suggestions, and asked for a form of conditions, as the basis of the Deed of Trust. The Vice-Chancellor having referred the matter to the above Syndicate, they recommended:

that the capital sum be given to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge in trust to pay the interest in each year towards the maintenance of a scholar of the University of Cambridge such scholar having been selected for his attainments by the Syndicate appointed to conduct the Local Examinations of the University from among the candidates presenting themselves for the Local Examinations, no such candidate being eligible for selection unless satisfactory certificates are produced of his moral character and of the inability of his parents or guardians to send him to the University of Cambridge without such assistance; and that the Chancellor Masters and Scholars have full power to authorise the said Syndicate to hold over the payment to an individual scholar to meet any special circumstances such as his absence from the University from ill health without deferring the period at which the next selection shall be made or to advance a portion of the interest for the payment of the Caution Money or other initial expenses of a new scholar, and generally to make regulations; and that if on any occasion no suitable candidate is found or the tenure of the Scholarship by a scholar terminates prematurely the interest up to the time when the next selected scholar enters upon the Scholarship shall be added to the capital sum.

The report¹ embodying the above recommendation, dated 25 October, 1886, was confirmed by Grace, 11 November².

The Scholarship is worth about £40 per annum.

UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS

1. THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY.

I. Revenue.

a. Benefaction of Tobias Rustat, 1667.

In January, 1666-67, Tobias Rustat¹, second son of Robert Rustat, M.A. (Jes.), gave to the University the sum of £1000, to be laid out in land of £50 or £60 yearly value, which sum was to be spent in buying "the choicest and most useful books for the public library of the said University," as is set forth at length in the following document, signed and sealed by Rustat himself, and presumably drawn up by him. It bears no date, but as the receipt of the money on behalf of the University is dated 3 January, 1666-67, and sewed to Rustat's Order and Directions with an impression of his seal above the stitches, it is evidently intended that the date should apply equally to both documents.

I Tobias Rustatt Yeoman of the Robes to his most Sacred Majestie King Charles the Second, being really sensible of the infinite goodnes of God by whose especiall favour and blessing uppon mee (in his Majesties my most gracious Masters miraculous restauracion) I have obtained a comfortable estate, and calling to minde that an obligacion lyes uppon me, to be therefore truely thankfull to the divine majestie I have resolved to expresse the same in freely giveing some part of what I have received towards the advancement of the true Religion now established in this Realme, good learning and the honour of God.

TOBIAS RUSTAT¹.

A few days later (8 January) a Syndicate was appointed "to treat and conclude about any purchase that shalbe offered unto them for the laying out the thousand poundes given by Mr Tobias Rustat²."

The Syndics having selected an estate at Ovington in Norfolk, comprising the Manor and the Advowson of the Rectory, for which was to be paid not only the £1000 given to Cambridge, but a second £1000 given to S. John Baptist's College, Oxford, a deed of trust (A) was drawn up, in virtue of which the whole estate was conveyed to Cambridge, for the purposes described above, subject to the payment of a yearly rent of £50 less taxes to S. John's College, Oxford. This deed is dated 20 November, 1667, and a Grace passed the Senate 14 December to pay the £1000 to the vendor³.

In 1807 (30 May) a Syndicate was appointed

“qui de Reditibus agelli ad Ovington siti ex dono Tobiaë Rustat in usum Bibliothecæ Academicæ applicandis, inquirant, et quod sibi de istâ re compertum fuerit, ad Senatum referant¹.”

These Syndics issued the following report; but no Grace was offered to the Senate to confirm it. As, however, it is entered at length in the Grace Book, and a marginal note records that it was “Read in Congregation by the Vice-Chancellor 16 November, 1808²,” it may be concluded that the Senate accepted it.

Directions of Mr Rustat.

The Instrument or Declaration of Mr Rustat directs that the rents and profits arising from his benefaction, as they shall yearly be received, be laid out in the purchase of choice Books for the Public Library—that the purchases shall be made by the advice and consent of the Vice-Chancellor, the Provost of King’s College, the Masters of Trinity and St John’s, the Professors of Divinity, Law and Physic, the Professors of Mathematics, and the Professors of the Greek and Oriental Languages or by the advice and consent of any 5 or more of them, all being summoned to a meeting appointed for that effect by the Vice-Chancellor—that at this meeting the Vice-Chancellor shall give an account of the receipt and expenditure of the profits and monies aforesaid, as he doth of other monies belonging to the University at his Audit, producing the receipts of the Booksellers for his acquittance of such monies as shall have been laid out—that the Books shall be substantially bound in the same form and manner, and with the Impression of Mr Rustat’s Arms, and that a fair book of Vellum be prepared for registering the names of all Books bought from this Benefaction and no other.

The Syndics find that the whole of the Rents and Profits arising from this Benefaction from 1666 to Michaelmas 1807 have been laid out in the purchase of books for the public Library, and the binding of them. But it does not appear that this has been done by the consent and advice of the persons nominated for that purpose in Mr Rustat’s Declaration, nor have the books been uniformly bound or stamped with his arms or registered in a separate catalogue.

In order that the intention of Mr Rustat may for the future be complied with the Syndics have directed Mr Marshall the Deputy Librarian to provide and keep at the Library a Book containing a list of all Books which shall be bought from this Benefaction. They have also directed him to provide another Book in which he shall from time to time enter the titles of such Books as may be recommended by persons having a right to use the Library. This second Book they have directed him to present to the Vice-Chancellor at the division of every Term for the Inspection of the persons abovementioned by whose advice and consent the Books are to be purchased. And they have directed Mr Marshall to attend to the uniformity of binding, and to the impression of Mr Rustat's Arms.

Books to be bound uniformly, and stamped with Rustat's Arms.

In 1858 a new statute for Rustat's benefaction was approved by the Queen in Council (6 April)¹.

b. Benefaction of William Worts, 1709.

c. Benefaction of the Reverend John Manistre, M.A., 1829.

The Reverend John Manistre (B.A. 1769, M.A. 1772), sometime Fellow of King's College, by Will dated 2 April, 1811, bequeathed £5000 to his executors, upon trust, as follows:

I do hereby give and bequeath unto Samuel Vines of Lincolns Inn in the County of Middlesex, Esq., and Thomas Osbaldeston of Hatfield in the County of Hertford, Surgeon,...the sum of Five thousand pounds, upon trust that they...do lay out and invest the same...in some or one of the public Stocks or Funds of Great Britain, or upon Government or real securities at interest [for the benefit of Mary Hare Gowan or her issue but] immediately after the decease of the said Mary Hare Gowan and such failure of issue as aforesaid pay assign or transfer the said trust monies or the Stocks Funds or Securities in or upon which the same shall or may be laid out or invested unto the Chancellor Vice Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge for the time being absolutely to be laid out and disposed of by them in the purchase of Books in aid and augmentation of the Public Library of the said University².

Mr Manistre died early in 1829, and Mary Hare Gowan having predeceased him without issue, the money was at once paid by the executors. A receipt to them was ordered to be sealed 3 April, 1829³.

II. Site and Buildings.

As the history of the site of the University Library and the buildings which it now occupies has been related in detail in The Architectural History of the University and Colleges, it will be unnecessary to do more in this place than to mention the most important benefactions.

A portion of the site was given before 1278 by Nigel de Thornton, doctor in medicine¹.

The foundation of the building on the north side of the quadrangle is said to have been laid by Sir Robert Thorpe, Master of Pembroke Hall, and afterwards Lord Chancellor. He died in 1372, leaving his goods to the disposal of his executors, one of whom, Richard de Treton, afterwards Master of Corpus Christi College, caused 40 marks to be given to the University, to be laid out upon this building. Besides this gift, the work was promoted by his brother, Sir William Thorpe, for in 1398 it was decreed that he and his wife should be commemorated on two days in the year, because his executors had caused to be built "Divinity Schools, with a Chapel for the souls of the aforesaid William and Grace his wife" (scolas theologorum cum capella pro animabus dicti Willelmi et domine Gracie consortis sue)².

The west and south sides were undertaken next, partly with funds in the hands of the University, partly by subscription (but the names of the subscribers have not been preserved); lastly, about 1472, the east side was built by Thomas Rotheram, Bishop of Lincoln, and Chancellor both of the realm and the University. As soon as the building was finished the University decreed (13 May, 1475) that he should be enrolled among their benefactors, and that even during his life an annual service should be held for him, because he had "completed the schools, with a new library over them"³.

The present façade to the Library, including the east room, was built between 1754 and 1758; the cost being defrayed, in the main, by subscriptions⁴. A list of the receipts from this source is given below :

Reduced Annuities in the names of three trustees, to be paid over with accumulated interest, and applied to the completion of the Public Library, or towards executing any further part or parts of the accepted design. A letter of thanks for this gift, written by the Public Orator, was read to the Senate 22 June, 1842, and a Grace to seal it and present it to Mr Halford was sanctioned on the same day⁵.

The trustees for this gift were Geo. Peacock, D.D., Dean of Ely, John Lodge, M.A., Librarian, and Joseph Romilly, M.A., Registrary. The money was transferred to the Uni-

A large number of Mr Cockerell's plans and drawings were given to the University in 1887 (Reporter, p. 432), and others in 1903. They have been deposited in the Library.

Meanwhile the Library Syndicate, in a report dated 6 May, 1885⁵, had published a paper by the Librarian, H. Bradshaw, M.A., suggesting, among other things, that an extension of the Library, so far at least as the old gateway of King's College, was urgently needed; and they were authorised, by Grace 27 May, 1886, "to consult Mr Pearson, R.A., with regard to carrying on Scott's building to the Old Gateway so as to include a safe room, and to ask him to furnish such a plan as might form a scheme for completing the quadrangle¹." A few months later (3 November)² the Syndicate were able to report that they had received such plans from the architect; and, 15 November, the Vice-Chancellor announced that they were on view³. Finally, 31 January, 1887, the Council of the Senate issued a report⁴ on the Hancock benefaction, which ended as follows:

The Council have carefully considered in what way the capital of the Hancock Bequest could be most usefully applied in accordance with the conditions of the will, and at a meeting held on December 6, 1886, passed the following resolutions:

(1) That the property bequeathed to them by the late Mr Hancock to be applied in whatever way shall seem best to them to promote the general interests of the University may be applied under present circumstances with advantage to such interests towards such extension of the Buildings of the University Library as may be sanctioned by the Senate.

(2) That steps should be taken to secure that Mr Hancock's name may be permanently associated with that portion of the University Library which may be erected from his bequest.

The Council therefore recommend:

(1) That the sanction of the Senate be given to the proposal of the Council that the capital of the Hancock Bequest be applied towards such extension of the Buildings of the University Library as may be sanctioned by the Senate.

(2) That Mr Hancock's name be permanently associated with that portion of the University Library which may be erected from his bequest.

This report was confirmed by Grace 10 February, 1887. The foundations were laid in the Long Vacation, 1887, and the building was handed over by the architect to the Vice-Chancellor at the beginning of 1890⁵.

Benefaction of Ch. Taylor, D.D., 1889.

While the work was proceeding, Dr Taylor, Master of St John's College, gave to the University £400, being his stipend as Vice-Chancellor for the academical year 1887-88; and, with his consent, it was expended on the statues which occupy the external niches in the new buildings¹.

Benefaction of Art. Cayley, Sc.D., 1890.

When the building was ready for use, Professor Cayley, in a letter to the Financial Board, dated 21 April, 1890², offered £500 to the Library. This offer was accepted with thanks 22 May, and in the following December the Financial Board recommended that the money should "be applied towards providing the necessary fittings of the new building³." This report, dated 3 December, was confirmed by Grace 5 February, 1891⁴. The money was spent on the bookcases required for the Manuscript Room.

III. Benefactions for the purchase of books.

(a) The Reverend John Mainwaring, Fellow of S. John's College, and Lady Margaret's Reader in Divinity 1788-1807, who died 15 April, 1807, bequeathed to "the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University three hundred pounds stock for purchasing Divinity Books for their Public Library." In October, 1814, £270 stock (being £300 less legacy duty) was transferred to the account of the University at the Bank of England⁵.

(b) At a meeting held in the Hall of King's College 16 March, 1886, to consider ways and means for procuring a bust of the late Henry Bradshaw, M.A., Librarian, it was decided, among other things:

That, after defraying the cost of the bust, any surplus be applied towards the purchase of some of Mr Bradshaw's books, or of other choice books, for the University Library.

As a result of this vote £230 was spent on the purchase of books which had belonged to Mr Bradshaw; and £171. 14s. 3d. was placed at the disposal of the Library Syndicate. This sum was brought to account in the year ending 31 December, 1900¹.

(c) In 1894 a cheque for £500 was forwarded to the Financial Board of the University in payment of a legacy bequeathed by Samuel Sandars, M.A.², in the following terms:

I bequeath to the University Library at Cambridge a sum of £500 free of Legacy Duty to be applied in the purchase of rare English books for the said Library. And I declare that the receipt of the Vice-Chancellor of the University or other the Chairman for the time being of the Library Syndicate and of the University Librarian for the time being shall be a complete discharge to my Executors and Trustees for the said sum and from all responsibility as to the application thereof.

Mr Sandars had already, in 1887, given £25 towards the purchase of a copy of Lascaris' Greek Grammar, the first Greek book ever printed; and, in 1890, £50 to the Library towards the purchase of the MS. chartulary called *The Red Book of Thorney Abbey*³; and in each year from 1891 to 1894 he gave £50 "to be spent on rare books at the sole discretion of the Librarian."

IV. Gifts of books.

As a volume, to be called The Annals of the University Library, is being prepared, no gift of books to the Library will be recorded here.

2. THE SENATE HOUSE.

The history of the Senate House has been related in The Architectural History of the University, etc.³ The cost was, to a great extent, defrayed by subscriptions, a list of which is given below. It is derived from the Audit-Books of the University from 1719 to 1734, with additional particulars supplied from a manuscript list, framed in the Library.

The west end of the building, as first constructed, had been left rough, in preparation for the addition of a west side, as designed by Gibbs. This having been abandoned, Sir James Burrough, Master of Gonville and Caius College, who died 7 August, 1764, left by Will £150, to be applied towards defraying the cost of facing it with stone. This was done between 1766 and 1768¹.

In 1888, Samuel Sandars, M.A., of Trinity College, offered to place on the pediment and balustrade of the Senate House the urns shewn by James Gibbs in the design as published in his works. This offer was communicated to the University by the Council of the Senate in a report dated 10 December, 1888², which was confirmed with thanks to the donor, 14 February, 1889³.

3. THE PRINTING-HOUSE.

At a meeting of the subscribers for erecting a statue of Mr Pitt, held 18 June, 1824, it was unanimously resolved:

That the surplus of the Fund, after defraying the expense of the statue in Hanover Square...be applied to the erection of a handsome and appropriate building at Cambridge, connected with the University Press ; such building to bear the name of Mr Pitt.

The sum contributed, as appears from a subsequent Minute of the Committee dated 3 March, 1831, was £9000. With this sum the building which forms the façade towards Trumpington Street was erected. It was completed in 1832¹.

4. THE BOTANIC GARDEN.

a. Foundation by Richard Walker, D.D., 1762.

In 1762 the Reverend Richard Walker, D.D., Vice-Master of Trinity College, who died 15 December, 1764, executed a deed (A) conveying certain freehold messuages and garden grounds to the University in trust, among other things, for a public Botanic Garden for the use and benefit of the said University². Further, he appoints the Chancellor, or, in his absence, the Vice-Chancellor of the said University, the Master of Trinity College, the Provost of King's College, the Master of St John's College, and the Professor of Physic in the said University, for the time being, perpetual Governors and Visitors of the Garden to regulate and govern the same, with a Reader on Botany, and a Curator or Superintendent of the Garden.

Dr Walker also drew up "Statutes, Rules, and Orders for the better regulating, ordering, and governing of the said Botanic Garden," which were corrected by Lord Hardwick, then High Steward of the University³.

³ These Statutes are printed in Endowments, ed. 1876, pp. 248—251. They contain many curious particulars respecting the garden, and the buildings that stood there ; but, as their interest is chiefly archaeological, they have not been reprinted. Dr Walker states in his Will (Ibid. p. 252) that they were "in the hands of the Vice-Chancellor"; but they do not appear to be now in existence. They are certainly not in the Registry. They appear in a slightly different form in "A Short Account of the late Donation of a Botanic Garden to the University of Cambridge," 4to. Camb. 1763. It is anonymous, but is referred to by Dr Walker in his Will as "my account of the Garden" (Ibid. p. 252). For Dr Walker's life see Dict. of Nat. Biogr. Vol. lix. p. 81.

Dr Walker, by Will¹ dated 14 January, 1764, bequeathed certain estates at Swavesey in the county of Cambridge to Trinity College, and, further, made that Society his residuary legatees. In February of the same year he had executed a bond (B) to the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University, in virtue of which he bound himself to secure to them an annuity of £50 to be spent on "the further improvements of the Botanic Garden²."

¹ From a copy of the original deed made in June 1827, and now in the Registry of the University, Box K.

Whereas the above-bounden Richard Walker hath by Indentures of lease and release, bearing date respectively the 24th and 25th days of August, 1762, conveyed, settled and assured unto the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the said University and their successors, a certain capital messuage or tenement, garden-ground and other freehold and leasehold premises in Cambridge aforesaid, In trust to be employed and made use of as a Publick Botanic Garden for the use and benefit of the said University, under the direction and government of such persons, and for such purposes, and subject to such Statutes Orders and Regulations as the said Richard Walker has already, or the governors therein appointed shall hereafter make by the said Indentures of lease and release, reference being thereunto had, may more fully appear.

b. Benefaction of Charles Viscount Maynard, 1775.

This benefaction has a curious history. By Will (A) dated 13 February, 1775, Charles Viscount Maynard¹ bequeathed to Thomas Maynard, Esquire (afterwards Sir Thomas Heselrige, Bart.), the Reverend Henry Hubbard, then Fellow of Emmanuel College and Registry of the University, and the Reverend John (afterwards Archdeacon) Law, £500 in trust "for or towards erecting or beautifying any publick building or buildings for the University of Cambridge but shall not be begun at the time of my decease, or for the use of the Public Physic Garden there." The money was invested in the purchase of stock in the 3 per Cent. Reduced Bank Annuities; and the interest, as it became due, was regularly invested and added to the principal until 18 November, 1788, when the stock was sold, and the money, amounting, with interest, to £745. 18s. 4d., was paid to the Vice-Chancellor, Dr Barnes, Master of Peterhouse, to be used towards the erection of a new building opposite to the Senate House, which was expected at that time to be immediately erected. As, however, the scheme was abandoned², the trustees requested that the money might be returned to them. This was done, and it was reinvested in the same security as before.

In 1807 (11 February) the following Grace passed the Senate:

Cum Reditus a Vobis aliisque Benefactoribus Horto Botanico assignati ejusdem expensis necessariis neitiquam sufficiant:

Placeat Vobis ut summa quingentarum librarum ab Honoratissimo Domino Domino Carolo Vicecomite Maynard, vitâ functo, ad publicum aliquod Ædificium apud Vos aut extruendum aut ornandum, vel in Horti Botanici usus, Academiæ legata, una cum summæ ejusdem incrementis, jam tandem in Horti Botanici usus transferatur; ita tamen, ut

d. Removal of the Garden to a new site.

It appears from the Minute Book of Dr Walker's trustees¹ that so early as 1819 they were "willing to receive proposals from the Fitzwilliam Syndicate for exchanging the present Botanic Garden for other land suitable for the same purposes"; and that in 1824 (29 March) it was "Agreed that on account of the surrounding Buildings and other circumstances it is desirable to remove the site of the Botanical Garden to a more convenient place, if such change can be legally effected." It may be presumed that it was in consequence of this Minute that in the following year (27 April, 1825) a Syndicate was appointed with the following preamble:

Quum ex Fundatoris Præscripto penes vos sit situm Horti Botanici mutare, aliasque vicissim terras in eandem rem dicandas coemere; quumque propter loci angustias et horto circumjecta ædificia situs et incommodus et Fundatoris proposito parum aptus esse inveniatur; quumque etiam inter Academiam valeat opinio situm in alium quendam et amœniorem et salubriorem commodè mutari posse²; Placeat [etc.].

This Syndicate expired without issuing a report; as did a second Syndicate appointed 21 March, 1828³. In the following year (3 December, 1829) the Trustees agreed:

That it is very desirable that the present site of the Garden should be removed to some more suitable Place without further Delay; and the Trustees recommend that a Grace should be proposed to the Senate for a Syndicate to consider the best means of effecting this object.

On this occasion the Trustees were successful. A Syndicate appointed 9 December, 1829⁴, and reappointed 26 February, 1830⁵, reported (26 May) in favour of removing the Garden to its present site, and of obtaining an Act of Parliament to enable the removal to be effected. This report having been confirmed by Grace 31 May, steps were taken to obtain the necessary Act, which received the royal assent 30 March, 1831.

Act of Parliament, 1 William IV. Cap. 5.

[The preamble, after reciting indentures of lease and release whereby in August 1762 Richard Walker DD conveyed to the University certain messuages and garden ground in the parish of S^t Edward in Cambridge for the purpose of making and establishing a public Botanic Garden for the use of the University and of appointing a Reader on Botany and a Curator of the Garden, sets forth that a Botanic Garden was in consequence duly made and then proceeds as follows.]

The Garden has become unsuitable by the extent of the town and for other reasons.

And whereas although the site of the said Botanic Garden was at the time of the date and execution of the said recited indenture of release and assignment near the outskirts of the town of Cambridge, yet by the great increase and extension of the same town the said Botanic Garden is now nearly surrounded by buildings, whereby the free circulation of air is impeded and obstructed, and the situation thereof hath been rendered too confined for the health of the various plants therein, and the soil thereof hath become greatly impoverished, and the site of the said garden, which contains about three acres and one half of ground, hath been found by experience to be much too small for the purposes of a Botanic Garden, and for the successful and efficient teaching and study of Botany in the present improved state of that science, and it is therefore desirable that a new garden should be formed of larger extent and in a more open commodious and eligible situation :

Trinity Hall is seised in fee-simple of a certain estate,

And whereas the Master Fellows and Scholars of the college of the Holy Trinity commonly called Trinity Hall, are seised of or well entitled to the fee-simple and inheritance of a certain close or parcel of ground situate in the parish of St Andrew the Less in the town of Cambridge containing by admeasurement, thirty-eight acres and twenty-three perches or thereabouts (being the hereditaments comprised in the First Schedule to this Act)...

and the Chancellor etc. of another.

And whereas the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars are seised of or well entitled to the fee-simple and inheritance of and in a certain close or parcel of ground situate in the said parish of Saint Andrew the Less in the town of Cambridge, containing by admeasurement seven acres three roods and two perches or thereabouts (being the hereditaments comprised in the Second Schedule to this Act)...

The Trinity Hall ground is very suitable for a garden.

And whereas the said close or parcel of ground containing thirty-eight acres and twenty-three perches...is by reason of its open and airy situation, its contiguity to the town of Cambridge, its easy access by roads on each side thereof and other local advantages, eminently calculated for the site of a Botanic Garden :

An agreement for an exchange has been

And whereas with a view to appropriate an adequate part of the said close or parcel of ground...to the formation of a Botanic Garden in lieu of the said present Botanic Garden of the said university founded by the said Richard Walker deceased, as aforesaid, the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars (acting with the privity and sanction of the governors and visitors of the said Botanic Garden) have proposed and agreed to give to the said Master Fellows and Scholars of Trinity Hall aforesaid, in exchange for the said close or parcel of ground containing thirty-eight acres and twenty-three perches...all that the said close or parcel of land belonging to the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars containing seven acres three roods and two perches...and also such a sum of money (by way of equality of exchange) as should be equivalent in amount to the excess in value of the said close containing thirty-eight acres and twenty-three perches over the said close containing seven acres three roods and two perches, and the said Master Fellows and Scholars are willing and have agreed to make such exchange as aforesaid:

made between the two bodies.

And whereas a survey and valuation hath been made of the said two closes or parcels of ground containing respectively thirty-eight acres and twenty-three perches, and seven acres three roods and two perches, and the former of the said two closes hath...been estimated and valued at the sum of two thousand nine hundred and ninety-eight pounds seven shillings and four-pence, and the latter of the said two closes hath been estimated and valued at the sum of seven hundred and eighty-seven pounds nineteen shillings and four pence, so that the value of the said close or parcel of ground comprised in the First Schedule to this Act exceeds the value of the close or parcel of ground comprised in the second Schedule to this Act by the sum of Two thousand two hundred and ten pounds eight shillings:

A valuation of the two properties has been made.

And whereas such exchange as aforesaid and the approbation and conversion of the close or parcel of ground comprised in the First Schedule to this Act or of a sufficient part thereof as and for a public botanic garden for the use and benefit of the said university in lieu and substitution of the present botanical garden of the same university founded and established by the said Richard Walker as aforesaid, would be of great and important advantage to the said university and to the students thereat;

The exchange would be of great advantage to the University.

And whereas by reason of the extended and increasing population of the said town of Cambridge it would be advantageous and beneficial to the said Master Fellows and Scholars of Trinity Hall aforesaid, if provision were made for enabling them to grant building leases of the close or parcel of ground and hereditaments comprised in the Second Schedule to this Act; but the several beneficial objects and purposes aforesaid cannot be attained without the aid and authority of Parliament:

It would benefit Trinity Hall to grant building-leases of the other property.

Wherefore Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the said University of Cambridge on behalf of themselves and their successors, and the Governors and Visitors of the said botanic garden on behalf of themselves and their

And be it further enacted, That the Botanic Garden by this Act authorised to be made and formed, and all houses conservatories hot-houses green-houses and other erections and buildings which may be erected and built in or upon the same or belonging thereto, shall be and are hereby declared to be under and subject to the directions government management and superintendence of such officers and persons, and subject to such statutes orders rules and regulations, and with such and the same powers of making amending altering and repealing statutes rules orders and regulations, and with all such other powers and authorities and provisions for the maintenance support management government superintendence and conduct thereof, as are in and by the said recited indenture of release and assignment declared and expressed or referred to of and concerning the now present Botanic Garden of the said University, or such of them as shall be subsisting and capable of effect at the time of passing of this Act; and the several persons who at the time of the passing of this Act shall hold the office or offices of Governors and Visitors, Reader and Curator and Superintendant or any other office or offices of or appertaining to the now present Botanic Garden of the said University founded by the said Richard Walker as aforesaid, shall from and after the passing of this Act hold and enjoy the same offices respectively with respect to the Botanic Garden by this Act authorised to be made and formed for such time or times and in such manner as they respectively might or would have held and enjoyed the same under the directions and provisions of the said recited indenture of release and assignment, or any statutes rules orders and regulations made by virtue thereof with respect to the now present Botanic Garden of the said University in case this Act had not been passed....

Opinion of Counsel, 1886.

In 1886 the opinion of Counsel was requested on the following points:

1. What powers the University possess of dealing with such parts of the land received by them from Trinity Hall in 1831 as have not been set apart for the purpose of the Botanic Garden.
2. Whether if such powers are in anyway defective they can be supplemented by the authority of the Court of Chancery or otherwise.
3. Whether any one method is to be preferred to any other and if so for what reason and
4. Generally in the matter.

The following opinion was sent to the University by E. A. Hadley, M.A. (Trin.), barrister-at-law:

1. I am of opinion that these parts of the land are not subject to the trust declared by the 9th Section of the Act of 1831, which trust seems confined to those parts of the land which have been appropriated for the Botanic Garden. I think, therefore, that they constitute lands vested in the University within the meaning of the 1st, 10th and 11th Sections of the Universities and College Estates Act 1858 and may be sold or leased under the provisions of that Act.

2. I do not think any supplementary authority necessary; but, at all events, I do not see that the Court has any jurisdiction which would be available.

3 and 4. The only method, as it appears to me, is to use the power of the Act of 1858. This, however, will be sufficient for all the purposes now in view. I may add, however, that I am not advising, as to the propriety or otherwise, in reference to the University expending money in building upon the land.

Further opinion.

As to the further question whether the unappropriated parts of the ground belong to the University unfettered by any trust for keeping up the Botanic Garden which has been submitted to me: I think, assuming that the piece of seven acres given up by the University in 1831 was land belonging to the University for its general purposes and not subject to any special trust, and that the £2210. 8s. was derived from the proceeds of sale of the old Botanic Garden, that the unappropriated parts belong to the University free from any trust for the Botanic Garden. The language of the Act is ambiguous, as it is silent as to what is to be done with the surplus pieces and contains no power such as would be expected, if it were intended to declare trusts of the surplus pieces such for instance as are contained with reference to the Trinity Hall land. I think, therefore, that the recitals may be looked at (Howard Lord Shrewsbury 17 Eq 378 Hopkinson Lush 34 Beav 215). Reading the recitals, with the assumptions of fact I have mentioned, I think that the declaration of trust is effectual only in respect of the appropriated parts, and there is a resulting trust for the general purpose of the University of the unappropriated part¹.

e. Appropriation of the Site of the Old Botanic Garden to the University, 1853.

A Syndicate was appointed by Grace, 2 February, 1853², to consider whether any and what steps should be taken for appropriating to the University the site of the Old Botanic Garden, and to confer with the Governors of the Botanic Garden thereon. This Syndicate issued a report dated 7 March, 1853³, in which they stated, among other things, that the Governors were willing to give up to the University their rights in the site of the Old Botanic Garden in consideration of receiving for the use of the New Botanic Garden the sum of £3448. 4s. 4d. (the difference between the value of the site and the sum already expended by the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars on account of the purchase of the New Botanic Garden and its approaches). This report was confirmed by Grace, 11 March, and the Syndicate was authorised to take such steps as they might deem necessary to appropriate to the University the site of the Old Garden¹.

In a second report, dated 25 October, the same Syndicate (which had been continued by Grace, 25 May)² announced that they had been advised that the object they had in view could be attained by an Order of the Court of Chancery.

Application was accordingly made, and an Order of the Court obtained dated 29 July, 1853, in which it was directed that the above arrangement between the University and the Governors should be carried into effect; and for that purpose it was ordered that the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars do pay the Governors the sum of £3448. 4s. 4d. and all their costs, charges and expenses of and relating to the said arrangement, and of and relating to the application to the Court; and further, that the land and premises constituting the site of the Old Botanic Garden should be and continue vested in the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars released and absolutely discharged of and from the trusts created with respect thereto³.

5. THE FITZWILLIAM MUSEUM.

Richard, Viscount Fitzwilliam, of Trinity Hall, M.A. 1764, by will dated 18 August, 1815, bequeathed to the University his pictures, engravings, books, etc., together with £100,000 (A). He died 5 February, 1816; his bequest was announced to the University by the Earl of Pembroke, the sole executor, 22 February following; and the collections were removed to Cambridge a few months afterwards. The bequest was not accepted by Grace⁴.

³ This Order is in the Registry, Vol. xxv. 65. The sum in question was paid by the Vice-Chancellor to the Account of the Governors of the Botanic Garden 27 October, 1853.

The history of the disposal of the collections on their first arrival, and of the present Museum, has been fully related in the Architectural History, Vol. iii. pp. 198—229, and need not be repeated here. The collections were moved in 1848, and the first Syndicate of Management was appointed by Grace 29 April, 1849.

BEQUESTS TO THE MUSEUM.

1. Mesman Collection of Oil-paintings.

Extract from the Will of Daniel Mesman, Esq., dated 11 March, 1830.

...I give and bequeath unto my said brother, Charles Mesman, the use of all my pictures, framed and not framed, prints and drawings, and all the frames, for and during the term of his natural life; and from and after his decease I give and bequeath the same absolutely to the Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Cambridge for the time being upon trust and to the end, intent and purpose that the same may be placed in the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge, where I wish Mr John Seguier of Coventry Street to be permitted to arrange and superintend their hanging¹.

Mr Mesman's Will was proved 7 May, 1834, and, his brother having surrendered his life-interest in the collection, the 281 pictures and drawings comprised in it were removed to Cambridge in the summer of 1834. The Vice-Chancellor announced (18 October) that they were on view at the Pitt Press. The bequest was not accepted by Grace. Five additional pictures were subsequently bequeathed by the Reverend Charles Mesman².

2. Benefaction of Bishop Maltby, 1859.

The Will of Edward Maltby, D.D., of Pembroke College, M.A. 1794, D.D. 1806, Bishop of Durham 1836-1856, who died 3 April, 1859, contains the following bequest:

...I bequeath to the Trustees of the Fitzwilliam Museum at Cambridge to be placed in the Library of the Museum, the Portrait of Dr Parr painted by Lonsdale for the late Duke of Sussex and my Bust in the Dining Room at Upper Portland Place³.

4. Benefaction of George Crawford Heath, M.A.

George Crawford Heath (M.A. 1810), Fellow of King's College, bequeathed a marble bust of Napoleon I¹.

5. Collections of Lieut.-Colonel William Martin Leake.

The following is an extract from the Will, dated 17 January, 1859, of Lieut.-Col. W. M. Leake. He died 6 January, 1860, and his wife 12 April, 1863.

...And whereas, considering the importance of a systematic Collection of Greek Coins to every branch of literature connected with the Greek language, and considering also the danger to which such property is peculiarly liable, and that such a Collection, to be useful, ought to be deposited in a place habitually frequented by persons likely to refer to the Collection; and that it should be regularly accessible to them, under such conditions and regulations as may be deemed necessary or expedient, I am desirous of making the bequest next hereinafter contained: I do therefore declare and direct, that from and immediately after the decease of my said Wife, all the said Coins, Cabinets, Maps, Manuscripts, Electrotypes, Vases, Statues, Marbles, Bronzes, Gems, and Articles of Vertue, and such of my Books as relate to, or have connection with, my Collection of Coins and Antiquities, and also all the printed or published Books written or published by me, and all other Books relating thereto or referred to therein, shall go and be bequeathed unto my Nephew Stephen Martin Leake and to my Nephew William Martin Leake, hereinafter called my said Trustees, their Executors and Administrators, upon the Trusts following: that is to say, upon Trust, within twelve calendar months after the decease of my said Wife, to offer and dispose of the same to the Chancellor, Masters, and Fellows of the University of Cambridge, hereinafter called 'The University of Cambridge,' for the sum of five thousand pounds sterling, to be paid by the said University to my said Trustees, at such days and times, not exceeding three years from the decease of my said Wife, and in such instalments and proportions as my said Trustees shall in their absolute and uncontrolled discretion deem proper; provided nevertheless, and the before-mentioned bequest is on this express condition, that it shall not be lawful for my said Trustees to dispose of the said Coins, Cabinets, Maps, Manuscripts, Electrotypes, Vases, Statues, Marbles, Bronzes, Gems, Articles of Vertu, and Books, to the said University, unless and until a Resolution or Grace has been passed by or in the Senate of the said University to the effect that the same shall for ever remain and be the property of such University, and that the Coins shall be kept without alteration as a separate and distinct Collection, except so far as it may be desirable to augment the same by making additions thereto¹.

A Syndicate appointed (29 October, 1863) to discuss the whole question of the above offer, recommended the purchase in a report dated 11 February, 1864. The adoption of this report was opposed by Dr Whewell (22 February) on the ground that no large purchase ought to be made out of funds derived from Viscount Fitzwilliam's bequest so long as the Museum remained unfinished. He was answered by the Rev. Churchill Babington, B.D. (Joh.); and the report was confirmed by Grace, 25 February, 1864².

6. Benefaction of Rev. Ric. Edw. Kerrich, M.A. (Chr.).

Mr Kerrich, by Will dated 3 January, 1868 (A), bequeathed his collections to the University, "to form an addition to the Fitzwilliam Collection"; and, by a codicil dated 12 November, 1868 (B), he added the sum of £1000 for the purpose of "keeping them in proper repair and condition."

Mr Kerrich died 13 May, 1872, and, 3 June, these documents were laid before the Senate by the Vice-Chancellor. Three days afterwards, 6 June, the following Grace was offered to the Senate:

The Fitzwilliam Syndicate, after inspecting the collection of pictures, books, prints, &c. bequeathed by the late Rev. R. E. Kerrich, having come to the conclusion that it would be impossible to receive the whole of the bequest at the Museum, and having recommended that the bequest (including the legacy of £1000) should be renounced on the understanding that the Representatives of Mr Kerrich should allow the Syndicate to select any portion of the collection which they might think desirable for the University, that the Vice-Chancellor and Syndicate be authorised to carry out such an arrangement with the Representatives of Mr Kerrich¹.

This Grace having been rejected by a majority of 31, the Syndicate issued the following report 26 October, 1872:

The Collection of Pictures, Prints, Books, &c., bequeathed by the late Rev. R. E. Kerrich to the University, has, with the consent of the Administratrix, been deposited in the Museum, pending the decision of the Senate as to the bequest. The Pictures and Engravings have been arranged in the large Gallery, and the books in the North Room on the ground floor, where they are open to the inspection of Members of the Senate.

The Syndics are of opinion that there are but few of the Pictures which it would be desirable to receive into the Museum. They think, however, that some of the Prints and Books would be a valuable addition to the Museum Library.

Under these circumstances the Syndics do not think that the University would be justified in accepting the bequest according to the terms of Mr Kerrich's will.

The Syndics therefore recommend that the bequest (including the legacy of £1000 Consols) be relinquished by the University, on the understanding that the representatives of Mr Kerrich will allow the Syndics, aided by competent advice, to select any portion of the Collection which they may think desirable for the Museum; and that the Vice-Chancellor and the Syndics be authorised to carry out such an arrangement with the representatives of Mr Kerrich².

This report was confirmed by Grace, 21 November, 1872, without opposition³; and a release to the executors of Mr Kerrich was directed to be sealed 6 March, 1873⁴.

When I had the honor to command his Majesty's Fleet in the Mediterranean, I obtained permission, from the Pacha of Candia, to search for antiquities amongst the ruins of its ancient cities; the person whom I employed had the good fortune to discover a valuable sarcophagus, of which the enclosed is a description.

For years I have had the pleasure of being well acquainted with many distinguished members of your University, particularly with those of Trinity College, of which my brother the Rev^d Gilbert Malcolm was a Fellow; In consequence, I feel a strong attachment towards it; and it is therefore, with great pleasure, that I offer through you, Sir, this relic of antiquity to the University of Cambridge; and I shall be highly gratified, should it be considered worthy of a place in its Museum.

Eighteen Italian oil-paintings, collected by the Venerable Julius Ch. Hare, M.A. (Trin.).

The circumstances under which this collection was received are detailed in a report of the Syndicate dated 7 March, 1855 :

It had been long the intention of Archdeacon Hare to bequeath to the Fitzwilliam Museum a collection of eighteen Pictures, as a token of grateful regard and affection to the University ; but having become much interested in the erection and endowment of an additional Church and School in his parish of Hurstmonceaux, and considering that the importance of that object gave it a paramount claim upon him, he was induced several years ago to devote his Pictures to the accomplishment of it.

At the time of the Archdeacon's death³ a plan for providing additional church and school accommodation for his own and two adjoining parishes had been partly accomplished by the exertions of himself and others without the sale of his Pictures ; and he considered that the contribution of £1000, in addition to what he had already expended, would complete the portion of the work which properly fell to his share.

Mrs Hare, considering herself bound to fulfil the intention of her late husband with regard to his parish in the first instance, is desirous also of carrying into effect as far as possible his original intention of presenting the collection of Pictures to the University ; and she now offers to present the Pictures to the Museum, reserving to herself the possession of two of them⁴ during her lifetime in accordance with her husband's wish, if the University will enable her by the payment of £1000 to satisfy the claim which she conceives the parish to have upon her.

The Syndics have obtained the assistance of a competent professional judge in estimating the value of the Pictures, and it appears by his estimate that their value very much exceeds the sum named by Mrs Hare ; and, though the Syndics are of opinion that the funds of the Museum should not in general be expended in the purchase of works of art until the existing debt is paid, and the internal fittings of the Museum are completed, they recommend that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the offer of Mrs Hare be accepted.

The above report was confirmed by Grace 14 March, 1855; and, on the same day, Mrs Hare was thanked in the following terms:

Placeat Vobis ut liceat Domino Procancellario gratias academiæ Dominæ Hare persolvere ob donum suum pretiosum¹.

A collection of music, amounting to more than 1000 volumes	Ric. Pendlebury, M.A. (Joh.)	21 November, 1889 ⁶

After the death of Mr Pendlebury, 13 March, 1902, Dr James, Director of the Museum, wrote the following description of his collection in a letter to the Vice-Chancellor dated 1 May, 1902:

At the desire of the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate I am addressing to you, for the information of the Senate, a few details of the munificent donations of Music which have been made to the Museum by the late Mr Richard Pendlebury during a period of over twenty years.

In 1880 Mr Pendlebury presented one hundred volumes of printed Music to the Museum, and, in each of the nine years following, continued to present the same number. After that period he made yearly gifts of varying numbers of volumes. His latest contributions came into the Library within a very few days of his death.

² Report of Library Syndicate, 15 November, 1876 (Reporter, p. 117). This report gives a list of the volumes, and a rough description of their contents. It was confirmed by Grace 30 November (ibid. p. 137). Authority to sell duplicates was asked for in a Report of the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate, 24 November, 1877 (Reporter, p. 137), confirmed by Grace 6 December (ibid. p. 176).

The collection which the Museum owes to the unwearied generosity of this single benefactor consists of about two thousand bound volumes. It comprises not only the best collective editions of the works of all the great musicians, together with a large mass of miscellaneous vocal and instrumental music, but also the best Musical Dictionaries, Histories, and other works of reference. Considered merely with reference to its pecuniary value, this gift ranks high among the possessions of the Museum, while it may fairly be said that no benefaction received by the institution since its foundation rivals in the extent of its general utility that for which we have to thank the unselfish care of Mr Pendlebury¹.

Transcripts of the works of Geo. Fre. Handel, in sixty-seven volumes	Fra. Barrett Lennard, Esq.	8 May, 1902 ⁶

This collection was described as follows by the Director, Dr James, in a letter to the Vice-Chancellor dated 1 May, 1902 :

I have the pleasure to inform you that a very valuable gift has recently been made to the Fitzwilliam Museum by Mr Francis Barrett Lennard; who, in memory of his father, the late Henry Barrett Lennard, Esquire, of Hampstead, has presented to the Museum, through Dr A. H. Mann, King's College, University Organist, the collection of transcripts of the works of G. F. Handel, which has long been known to students as the Barrett Lennard collection.

⁵ Ibid. 16 May, 1899, p. 880.

⁶ Ibid. 13 May, 1902, p. 863.

It consists of sixty-seven volumes, which are preserved in a very handsome old mahogany bookcase, once the property of Handel. All, or nearly all, the volumes are in the writing of the composer's favourite amanuensis, J. C. Smith. From Smith's possession they passed to that of Dr Ireland, Dean of Westminster, from him to Mr Brownsmith, and from him again to the late Mr H. Barrett Lennard.

The accession of this very valuable collection materially raises the position of the Fitzwilliam Museum as a depository of Handelian manuscripts. The Museum already possesses a number of exceedingly important autographs of the composer; and in view of the gift now made to it by Mr Barrett Lennard it could, I believe, be held to rank second only to the Royal Library at Buckingham Palace, where the large majority of Handel's original manuscripts are preserved¹.

6. MUSEUMS OF CLASSICAL ARCHÆOLOGY, AND OF GENERAL AND LOCAL ARCHÆOLOGY AND OF ETHNOLOGY.

In 1879 (8 December) the Council of the Senate recommended the appointment of a Syndicate to consider: (1) whether any rooms can be provided temporarily for the immediate reception of objects illustrative of the history of this country in British, Roman, Saxon, and medieval times (including the collections of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society, should the Society decide to give them to the University³); (2) what permanent provision can be made for the same objects⁴. This report was confirmed by Grace, 11 December, 1879⁵; but the Syndicate was unable to find an answer to the above questions.

⁴ Reporter, 9 December, 1879, p. 161.

⁵ Ibid. 16 December, p. 196.

While these matters were proceeding the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate issued the following report:

[11 March, 1882.]

Museum of Greek and Roman Art required.

In the opinion of the Syndicate an adequate Museum of Greek and Roman Art, consisting principally of casts from works of ancient sculpture historically arranged, is urgently needed in the University alike for the study of Art and for that of Classical Antiquity. This need has made itself especially felt since the establishment of the new section D in the Classical Tripos. A Museum of the kind in question forms part of the educational apparatus of nearly every important University on the Continent and of some in America: one such is in course of formation in London, another at Oxford.

Room in Fitzwilliam Museum used for exhibition of casts has become too small.

To the collection of casts from works of ancient sculpture presented to the Fitzwilliam Museum in 1850 by J. Kirkpatrick, M.A., considerable additions have from time to time been made both by gift and purchase. The collection thus formed remains, however, quite inadequate for the purposes of systematic study and teaching: at the same time it is already too extensive for the room in which it is placed. This room, moreover, is not well suited to the exhibition of sculpture, and might, if the casts were removed elsewhere, be turned to better account for the exhibition of other portions of the Fitzwilliam Museum collections.

Separate building to be provided and paid for out of Reserve Fund.

The Syndicate are of opinion that for the required Museum of Ancient Sculpture a separate building should be provided, contiguous to or easily accessible from the existing building. They are further of opinion that the Reserve Fund of the Fitzwilliam Museum, which amounted at the last audit to £7166. 2s. 9d., may properly be applied to the erection and equipment of such a Museum; it being expressly stated in the Will of the Founder that his bequests to the University were made "for the purpose of promoting the increase of learning and the other objects of that noble foundation."

No space near the Museum can be obtained.

The Syndicate have had under their consideration, at intervals during the last six years, various plans for giving effect to the opinions above expressed. The plan of building galleries of the kind required on the ground belonging to the Museum on either flank of the existing building was, after careful consideration and the inspection of plans and models, abandoned on architectural grounds. Subsequent endeavours to acquire a site immediately in the rear of the existing building, and then another towards the south-west, were unsuccessful.

Suitable site west of church of St Mary-the-Less.

The Syndicate have now ascertained that a suitable site is to be had within a short distance of the Museum. The piece of ground in question, nearly a third of an acre in extent, lies at the back of the church of St Mary-the-Less, and is approached by Little St Mary's Lane, which bounds it on the north; on the south it is bounded by the buildings of Peterhouse, and on the west by the road leading to Coe Fen. Part of the ground is at present occupied by malt-houses. These buildings cover an area of about 5000 square feet; they are in good repair, and could be converted at a comparatively trifling cost into excellent sculpture galleries. The site is moreover well adapted for the erection of additional buildings, which might be made sufficient to accommodate not only the required collection of ancient sculpture, but also, for some time at least, the archæological collections of the University, as well as a library and lecture-room for the study of ancient art and archæology.

Buildings on site can be converted into sculpture galleries.

The property in question belongs to Peterhouse, and is divided into two portions, both held on lease for forty years by Messrs Foster Brothers. The lease of one portion will expire on October 10, 1901, that of the other on October 10, 1902. The price required for the remainders of the two leases together is £1000. The Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate on November 17, 1881, unanimously agreed that it was desirable to purchase the leases for that sum. They further caused plans to be prepared showing how the present and the proposed additional buildings might be divided between the Fitzwilliam Museum collection of Ancient Sculpture and the Archæological Collections. These plans have been submitted to, and unanimously approved by, the Archæological Collections Syndicate. Each Syndicate separately has since inquired of the Master and Fellows of Peterhouse whether they would be willing to sell the properties in question, or else to cancel the existing leases, and grant a new lease of the whole for 99 years from Michaelmas last.

Property belongs to Peterhouse.

Price of remainder of leases £1000.

Plans have been drawn to shew how proposed buildings may be divided between Ancient Sculpture and Archæological Collections.

The Master and Fellows of Peterhouse have not yet returned an answer to this inquiry. On that answer must depend the ultimate recommendations both of the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate and the Archæological Collections Syndicate. But pending the decision of the College, the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate are of opinion that it is desirable without delay to secure the remainders of the existing leases for the price specified. They would thus be enabled, at a comparatively small cost, both to relieve the existing pressure on the space within the walls of the Fitzwilliam Museum, and to make provision, at any rate during the next twenty years, for an important branch of study in the University; objects which it has proved difficult to attain by any other plan.

The Syndicate therefore recommend that they be authorized to pay from the Special Reserve Fund (Grace, May 3, 1877) the sum of £1000 for the purchase of the leases, for twenty years from October 10, 1881, and October 10, 1882, respectively, of the two portions of the property belonging to Peterhouse, and bounded on the south by the buildings of that College, on the east by the road at the back of the Church of St Mary-the-Less, on the north by Little St Mary's Lane, and on the west by the road leading into Coe Fen ; together with any expenses incidental to the said purchase¹.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 23 March, 1882², and the leases were acquired without delay.

The Syndicate next reported (22 May, 1882)³ in favour of surrendering the leases and obtaining a fresh one from Peterhouse, but their report was not submitted to the Senate for confirmation. A few months later (28 October) they issued a second report, with the following recommendations :

Fresh lease for 99 years to be obtained from Peterhouse.

(1) That they be authorized to accept the offer of the Master and Fellows of Peterhouse of a fresh lease of the property, to the west of St Mary's-the-Less, of which they have lately acquired a lease for twenty years from Messrs Foster Brothers, for ninety-nine years from Michaelmas, 1882, at a ground rent of £150 a year.

£5000 from Reserve Fund to be spent on buildings.

(2) That they be authorized to expend a sum not exceeding £5000 from the Reserve Fund of the Fitzwilliam Museum upon the erection of new buildings and the alteration of those already existing on the site in question, in accordance with the plans laid upon the Registry's table.

Rooms to be reserved for Local and General Archaeology.

(3) That the sum of £2000 be paid out of the University Chest towards the completion of the same buildings, provided that the rooms marked E, F, G, H on the plans be reserved for the exhibition of the Collections of Local and General Archaeology belonging to or hereafter to be acquired by the University.

Sinking Fund.

(4) That a sinking-fund of £50 annually be set apart from the income of the Fitzwilliam Fund and accumulated at compound interest in order to make provision against the expiration of the proposed lease⁴.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 7 December, 1882.

In 1883 (3 March) the Syndicate issued a report⁵ in which they discussed (1) a detailed estimate of the probable cost of the Museum, and asked to be allowed to expend £1800 in addition to the £5000 already granted; (2) the provision of materials for study in it. On this latter point they wrote as follows:

So far as the study of classical art and archæology is concerned, for which alone the Syndicate consider that the Fitzwilliam Fund ought to be called on to provide, the materials in question consist (a) of an archæological library, and (b) of casts and models, especially casts of Greek and Græco-Roman sculpture.

With reference to (a), the Director reports that he is collecting by private subscription a fund which promises to be sufficient to provide the New Museum with an adequate library of classical archæology (assuming the Leake books and some of those already in the Fitzwilliam Museum to be also placed there).

With reference to (b), one or two members of the University have also subscribed for the purchase of casts, but the main collection will doubtless have to be bought from the Fitzwilliam Fund.

The cost of these casts was estimated at £1500. This report was confirmed by Grace, 15 March, 1883¹.

Before the building was completed the President of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society sent the following communication to the Vice-Chancellor², with a request that he would lay it before the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate at their next meeting:

At a Special General Meeting of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society, held at the New Museums, on Friday, 2 November, 1883:

I. The following Minute of the Council was read:

CAMBRIDGE ANTIQUARIAN SOCIETY,

18 October, 1883.

1. The Cambridge Antiquarian Society, not possessing any buildings of its own, is not able to accommodate its collections or library.

Position of the Society.

2. The Society has been doing its utmost for some years to put forward the importance of preserving local antiquities, whether relating to the University, the Town, or the County; and already possesses the nucleus of a good Museum. In this place it will be necessary to mention only the Roman Antiquities collected by the late Dr Webb at Litlington, by Mr Inskip at Shefford, and more recently by Professor Hughes and other members of the Society at Chesterford. This latter collection it has been found impossible to arrange, or even to study, owing to want of space in which to lay out the objects. It is believed that these collections, if properly put together, arranged, and displayed in glass cases, would be recognised as valuable and instructive, and would soon be largely increased by donations.

Collections of local antiquities.

¹ Reporter, 20 March, p. 533. A complete statement of the cost of the Museum, which was in excess of the estimate, was presented to the Senate in a report dated 8 November, 1884 (Reporter, p. 151), confirmed by Grace 11 December, 1884. The amount allowed for casts was also found insufficient, and a further sum of £950 was allowed by Grace 1 May, 1884 (Reporter, 6 May, p. 679).

² Ibid. 4 December, 1883, p. 155.

Ethno-
collections.

3. Besides the objects enumerated above (§ 2), two ethnological collections formed in Fiji, the one by the Hon. Sir A. Gordon, M.A., of Trinity College, the other by A. P. Maudslay, M.A., of Trinity Hall, have lately been deposited in the New Museums under the care of Mr J. W. Clark. If proper accommodation be provided for these collections there is no doubt that they will be presented to the University, and will attract similar donations.

Library.

4. The library, if catalogued and made accessible, would no doubt attract donations, particularly in the direction of books specially relating to Cambridge, of which the University does not possess any separate collection at present.

A Curator necessary.

5. The collections and library would still be of little use unless the services of a specially qualified Curator could be secured, as stated in the Report of the Council of the Society (13 March, 1883), which was adopted by the Archæological Collections Syndicate (24 April, 1883, Reporter, p. 620). Such Curator would take care not only of the collections now belonging to the Antiquarian Society but also of the ethnological collections mentioned above.

His salary must be paid by University.

6. It is obvious that the Society, the main object of which is to collect antiquities, and to print and publish information, cannot, out of a slender and somewhat precarious income, either pay the salary of such an officer (to whom, as stated in the above-mentioned Report, less than £150 a year could not be given), or do more than contribute towards the fitting up of the proposed Museum with proper cases. It would therefore be desirable that the salary in question should be defrayed by the University.

Management of Collections and Library might be entrusted to an Antiquarian Committee.

7. The management of the collections and library might be entrusted to a Committee, to be called the Antiquarian Committee, consisting of (say) six persons; as, for instance, the Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum, and two members of the Fitzwilliam Museum Syndicate appointed by the Syndicate, the President of the Antiquarian Society, and two members of the Council of the Antiquarian Society appointed by the Council of that body. The proposed Curator, who would be elected by them with the consent of the Vice-Chancellor, might be directly responsible to them, and act as their Secretary.

8. Before the appointment of this Committee, however, it appears desirable that a few definite conditions should be agreed upon by the University and the Society, which should not be altered except with the express leave of both.

Conditions to be accepted by Society and University.

These conditions should define, among other things, the amount of control which the Society might still be allowed to exercise over the Museum and Library ; and the position of the Members of the Society especially as regards access to the rooms when they are closed to the public.

II. The following Resolutions were agreed to unanimously :

1. That, subject to certain conditions, the entire collections of the Society be presented to the University.

Collections to be given to University

2. That all articles presented to the Society in future, whether antiquities or books, be treated in the same way as those mentioned in the preceding Resolution.

III. The following conditions, above referred to, were then agreed to unanimously :

on certain conditions.

1. That the Cambridge Antiquarian Society's Museum and Library be recognized (under the name of the Cambridge Antiquarian Museum and Library) as a special branch of the University Museum of Classical and General Archæology.

2. That the Society undertake to use efforts to increase the collections.

3. That the Cambridge Antiquarian Society be allowed the use of a suitable room or rooms in which the meetings of the Society may be held, in the Museum of Classical and General Archæology.

4. That Members of the Cambridge Antiquarian Society shall, as far as is practicable, have access to the Cambridge Antiquarian Museum and Library at all reasonable hours in addition to those at which it is generally open.

5. That the alienation of objects shall, in all cases where the objects in question have come into possession of the University through the Antiquarian Society, require the sanction of the Council of the Society.

6. That the University shall provide the stipend of a Curator, and such assistance as may be necessary.

IV. It was unanimously agreed that the following Regulations be suggested as convenient for adoption :

Regulations for the Curator.

1. That the Curator be appointed by the Antiquarian Committee with the consent of the Vice-Chancellor ; and be removable by the same authority.

2. That the Curator shall at all times recognize the authority of the Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum.

3. That it be the duty of the Curator :

- (1) To use his best endeavours to increase the antiquarian collections ; to carry on such correspondence as may be deemed expedient for that purpose ; to keep all such collections duly and properly named, arranged, and catalogued ; and especially to take precautions against their sustaining injury in any way.
- (2) To assist those who may desire to consult the collections, due regard being had to the safety of the books and specimens.

4. That it be the duty of the Curator to reside in the University during full term, and during at least six weeks of the Long Vacation, between 1 July and 31 August, except with special leave obtained from the Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum, or, in case of his absence, from the Vice-Chancellor.

5. That he attend at the Museum for not less than four hours on each of five days in each week of his residence ; except with special leave obtained from the Director of the Fitzwilliam Museum, or, in case of his absence, from the Vice-Chancellor.

6. That the foregoing Regulations (Nos. 1—5) be subject to alteration from time to time by the Antiquarian Committee.

7. That the Antiquarian Committee meet at least once in every term ; and that they present an annual report to the Senate before the end of each academic year.

Signed on behalf of the Society, JOHN WILLIS CLARK, President.

The Syndicate published the above communication in a report dated 10 November, 1883, and approved the conditions and suggestions, which they embodied in a series of recommendations¹. This report having been discussed (22 November) was reissued as an Amended Report (29 November) and confirmed by Grace, 6 December².

The two Museums were formally opened by the Vice-Chancellor 6 May, 1884, when Professor Colvin announced that a library had been given to the Museum of Classical Archæology by a body of subscribers, headed by the Chancellor ; and that the fund thus raised had amounted to nearly £900³. BEQUESTS TO THE MUSEUM.

1. Benefaction of Walter K. Foster.

In 1891 (19 October) the Council of the Senate published to the University the following codicil dated 25 April, 1891, to the Will of Walter K. Foster, of 45 Leinster Gardens, Hyde Park, London :

I bequeath to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge to be deposited in their Archæological Museum my collection of Antiquities subject to the condition that the prehistoric and Anglo-Saxon portions of such collection shall be kept and exhibited together and shall be designated "The Walter K. Foster Bequest" and if such condition shall not be complied with I bequeath the said Collection to my Wife Mary Hichens Foster I direct my Executors to ascertain and determine what is included in the above bequest and their decision shall be final. I further direct my Executors to pay any legacy duty chargeable upon the above mentioned bequest out of my pure personalty I give to the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge the sum of one hundred pounds legacy duty free for the purpose of purchasing a case or cases for the exhibition of the above mentioned bequest in their said Archæological Museum And I direct such legacy to be paid out of my pure personal estate I bequeath to the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge for the said Archæological Museum such of the Antiquarian works in my Library as they may choose to accept and I direct my Executors to pay any legacy duty chargeable upon such bequest out of my pure personal estate.

The Council recommended :

1. That the several bequests to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge, specified in a codicil to the Will of the late Walter K. Foster, be accepted.

¹ Grace 9 November, 1893, confirming report of Antiquarian Committee dated 3 June, 1893 ; Reporter, 6 June, 1893, p. 925 ; 14 November, p. 187.

2. That the prehistoric and Anglo-Saxon portions of the collection of antiquities, which is one of the above-mentioned bequests, be kept and exhibited together in the Museum of General and Local Archaeology, and be designated *The Walter K. Foster Bequest*¹.

These recommendations were confirmed by Grace, 22 October, 1891²; and the collections were shortly afterwards removed to Cambridge, Mrs Foster generously adding the cabinets and cases belonging to them, and 600 additional volumes of books.

2. Benefaction of H. B. Brady.

In 1891 Mr Brady bequeathed a collection of weapons, implements, and ornaments from the South Sea Islands.

3. Benefaction of W. Wiles Green.

In 1891 Mr Green bequeathed a small collection of stone implements, and of British and Roman pottery, of considerable local interest.

7. THE OBSERVATORY.

The benefaction of Thomas Plume for the building of an Observatory has been related above⁴; and the history of the existing Observatory (begun 25 June, 1822) in *The Architectural History*⁵.

1. The Northumberland Telescope.

In 1835 (8 June) Professor Airy informed the Vice-Chancellor that his Grace the Duke of Northumberland, then High Steward of the University, had announced "his wish to present a large telescope of 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ inch aperture constructed by M. Cauchein of Paris," and further that he was prepared to defray the cost of mounting, and of erecting a building to contain it. He received the thanks of the University 3 July, 1835⁶.

2. The Newall Telescope.

The following letter was addressed to the Vice-Chancellor by Robert Stirling Newall shortly before his death, which took place 21 April, 1889:

FERNDENE, GATESHEAD.

4 March, 1889.

SIR,

You may be aware that some years ago I erected here a refracting Telescope, 25 inch aperture and 30 feet focal length.

Owing to unfavourable atmospheric conditions and other reasons, the instrument has done no systematic work in its present position. I should much like to place it where it would work under capable direction.

I contemplate offering my Telescope and the dome and instruments connected with it to the University of Cambridge. The part that the University has taken of late years in the advancement of Science induces me to hope that the possession of an instrument especially adapted to the study of stellar Physics may give impetus to the development of the subject.

I beg you therefore to give the matter consideration and let me know what proposals can be made to ensure proper use and maintenance of the instruments, and publication of yearly reports, in case my offer is acceptable to the University.

I have the honour to be, Sir, [etc.]

R. S. NEWALL.

A Syndicate was appointed, 14 March, 1889, to report upon this offer. They examined the telescope, and considered the expenditure likely to be incurred in moving it to Cambridge, fitting it up in a suitable building, and providing for its use. Their three Reports¹ on these subjects were discussed 27 February, 1890², and referred to the Financial Board, who adopted a Resolution adverse to the acceptance of the gift:

That, having regard to the increasing annual expenditure in other directions (as for instance the newly incurred poor rate and the maintenance of new buildings) which will fall upon the University Chest in the immediate future, the Financial Board are of opinion that unless some considerable increase in the income of the Chest can be obtained from fees or from some other source, it will be unwise to pledge the University to an expenditure of £300 a year for the maintenance of the Newall Telescope.

Thereupon H. F. Newall, M.A., of Trinity College, wrote as follows to the Vice-Chancellor:

TRUMPINGTON,
11 March, 1890.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I have learnt from Dr Foster that he spoke in Council yesterday with respect to the Telescope question, and at his suggestion I beg leave to put in writing what I have said to him.

⁴ February, 1890 (ibid. p. 430).

² Reporter, 4 March, 1890, p. 510.

I gather that it is the opinion of those who are competent to judge of the matter that the offer which my father made to the University should be accepted with a view to the development of the study of Stellar Physics in Cambridge :

that there are financial difficulties in the way of accepting the offer in such a way as to carry out the wishes of the donor :

that these difficulties are of a temporary kind, and that if they were surmounted the University would see its way within a few years to setting the new observatory on a permanent footing on the lines suggested in the Report of the Syndicate.

It seems to me therefore that an offer from private sources may help towards a solution and I would ask to be allowed to make such an offer.

Supposing that it is possible to find a site for a private house adequately near the new observatory, I am prepared to offer my services as observer without salary for a term of years, say five years ;

or, should I be unable to obtain a site, or should it be otherwise preferable to the Syndicate, I am ready to guarantee a sum of £200 a year for five years to help towards the annual expenses of the new observatory ; and in any case I am prepared to offer £300 towards the initial expenses.

In case I became observer and subsequently withdrew before the completion of this term of five years, I would guarantee a sum of £200 a year for the remaining years of the term.

You will understand that these offers are contingent on the arrangements being such as will carry out what I am sure was my father's wish in making his original offer.

I am [etc.],

H. F. NEWALL.

After receipt of this letter the whole question was referred back to the Syndicate by the Council of the Senate. They reported (22 April)¹ in favour of accepting the late Mr Newall's offer, with other recommendations, dealing with the name of the telescope, the site of the building to contain it, the engagement of an additional observer, and other matters². At the same congregation thanks were given to H. F. Newall, M.A., "for his generous offer of personal service and pecuniary support."

¹ Reporter, 29 April, 1890, p. 659. The above Minute, and Mr H. F. Newall's letter, are printed in this report.

² Printed in Ordinances, ed. 1901, p. 321.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 22 May, 1890; and in the course of that year and the following the telescope was removed to Cambridge and remounted in a special building erected to receive it, on a site adjoining that of the Observatory. This site was purchased from St John's College. To the cost of this site Professor Adams contributed £100, and subsequently, when an additional strip was found necessary, he bought it at his own expense. A special report of the Observatory Syndicate, dated 2 June, 1892, gives a detailed account of the erection of the Newall Dome, and the mounting of the telescope¹.

8. MUSEUMS AND LECTURE ROOMS FOR NATURAL SCIENCE.

The history of these buildings to the end of the year 1884 has been related in *The Architectural History*². Additions to both site and buildings since that date have now to be noticed.

a. Site.

In 1884 (19 June) the site of the Perse Almshouses, at the south-west corner of the Museums ground, was bought at a total cost (including the removal of the Almshouses to another site) of £2675³.

In 1888 (3 May) the site of the Perse School for Boys, abutting on the former site to the north, with a frontage of 218 feet to Free School Lane, was bought for £12,500, but not without opposition⁴.

In 1896 (11 June) the "garden-ground and adjoining premises at the back of Messrs Mortlock's Bank, extending from Parson's Court to Freeschool Lane, and comprising an area of 28,924 square feet," were bought for £12,000, but not

b. Buildings.

The history of the building for the Department of Experimental Physics, now called the Cavendish Laboratory³, has been related in *The Architectural History*⁴, but, as it was erected at the sole cost of His Grace the Duke of Devonshire, then Chancellor, some particulars respecting it belong to the Endowments of the University. The Chancellor's intention was announced in the following letter:

HOLKER HALL, GRANGE, LANCASHIRE,
Oct. 10, 1870.

MY DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I have the honour to address you for the purpose of making an offer to the University, which, if you see no objection, I shall be much obliged to you to submit in such manner as you may think fit for the consideration of the Council and the University.

I find in the Report dated Feb. 27, 1869, of the Physical Science Syndicate, recommending the establishment of a Professor and Demonstrator of Experimental Physics⁵, that the buildings and apparatus required for this department of Science are estimated to cost £6300.

I am desirous to assist the University in carrying this recommendation into effect, and shall accordingly be prepared to provide the funds required for the building and apparatus, so soon as the University shall have in other respects completed its arrangements for teaching Experimental Physics, and shall have approved the plan of the building.

I remain,

My dear M Vice-Chancellor,

Yours very faithfully,

DEVONSHIRE⁶.

The Rev. the Vice-Chancellor.

⁵ See above, p. 247.

⁶ Reporter, 19 October, 1870, p. 13.

The building was completed by 16 June, 1874, when the Chancellor received the thanks of the University, and, at the close of his reply, handed the key to the Vice-Chancellor¹. Shortly afterwards he expressed his "wish to provide all instruments for the Cavendish Laboratory which Professor Maxwell may consider to be immediately required either in his lectures or otherwise²."

In 1894 the Cavendish Laboratory was increased by the erection of a building in Freeschool Lane. The cost was defrayed, in part, by £2000 given by Professor Thomson from the balance of fees received³.

The new Chemical Laboratory was begun in December, 1885; and was "in working order," 14 May, 1889⁴.

In 1889 the provision of new buildings for the Departments of Physiology and Human Anatomy, with a lecture-room common to both departments, engaged the attention of the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate. The estimated cost of these buildings being in excess of what the Financial Board felt themselves justified in recommending, the following proposal was made by Hen. Sidgwick, Litt. D.:

I offer to give £1000 now and £500 more within the next two years, as a contribution to the expense of the proposed new buildings for the Department of Physiology, provided that the Financial Board, in consideration of this offer, feel themselves justified in reporting in favour of commencing these buildings without delay⁵.

The Board recommended the acceptance of this offer, and Graces to confirm their report and to thank Dr Sidgwick passed the Senate 21 November, 1889⁶. The buildings were finished early in 1891⁷.

Anatomy.

The central portion of the Engineering Laboratory was begun in June, 1893, and the south wing in November of the same year¹. These buildings were formally opened, 15 May, 1894, and, in a report dated 9 November, 1895², the Syndicate stated that, except for [a] grant of £1000 from the University the cost of building and furnishing the laboratory has been met by public subscription. The subscriptions paid to the Engineering Laboratory fund amount to £5038. 16s. This sum, with £53. 1s. 8d. of Bank interest, and with the £1000 granted by the University, has placed a total of £6091. 17s. 8d. at the disposal of the Syndicate.

A list of these subscriptions is appended to this report.

In 1898 (17 October) the Vice-Chancellor published the following letter :

Hopkinson
Memorial.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I desire, jointly with my son and daughter, Bertram and Ellen Hopkinson, to give £5000 towards an extension of the Engineering Laboratory in the University of Cambridge—to be erected in memory of my husband John Hopkinson, and of our son John Gustave Hopkinson, who was entered as a Student in the Engineering School for this October, and would have followed his father's profession.

It seems to us a peculiarly fitting Memorial, as Dr Hopkinson, from the first, was warmly interested in the new School, and quite lately expressed a strong desire that an addition should be made to meet the rapidly increasing demand for accommodation, and had stated his intention of taking immediate steps to further this extension. It was also a special satisfaction to him that our son Jack was to benefit by the opportunities afforded in the Engineering Laboratory under Professor Ewing, whose fine teaching and masterly scientific work he felt ought to have the fullest possible scope. We hope that our gift, which we should like to see applied as soon as may be, will make this wider field possible.

Trusting it will meet with your approval,

I am, dear Sir, faithfully yours, EVELYN HOPKINSON³.

This offer was accepted by Grace, 27 October, 1898, and a letter of thanks written by the Public Orator was

Medical School.

In 1899 (16 March) a Syndicate was appointed "to consider what steps should be taken for the erection of new buildings for the Medical School upon the site assigned for the purpose by Grace (25 November, 1897)³."

This Syndicate issued a report (22 February, 1900), stating that they had considered the accommodation required for Medicine and Surgery, Pharmacology, Pathology, and Public Health; that they had consulted E. S. Prior, M.A. (Gov. and Cai.), architect; and that they had obtained plans from him for a Museum which they recommended should be called The Humphry Museum, in commemoration of the services rendered to the University by the late Sir Geo. Murray Humphry, a Downing Street Wing, and a Corn Exchange Street Wing⁴. They were authorised by Grace (14 June, 1900) to obtain detailed plans and tenders for the Downing Street Wing; and (31 January, 1901) for the Museum. Leave had previously been given (6 December, 1900) to pull down the old buildings on the site⁵. The tenders were accepted by Grace, 23 May, 1901⁶.

Towards the cost of these buildings (besides special gifts in the Benefaction Fund) the State Medicine Syndicate contributed £2000⁷; and, for the fittings in the Museum, Lady Humphry and others £350⁸.

Sedgwick
Memorial Museum.

It was decided by Grace, 11 March, 1897, that the Sedgwick Memorial Museum should be built on part of the ground bought from Downing College, at the corner of Downing Place and Downing Street⁹; and a Syndicate was appointed (13 May) to obtain plans and estimates from an architect¹⁰. The Senate gave "a general approval" (16 February, 1899) to a design submitted by T. G. Jackson, R.A.¹; and the building was completed in 1903.

Towards the cost of this building the Sedgwick Memorial Committee, appointed at a meeting held in the Senate House 25 March, 1873, to consider a fitting memorial to Professor Sedgwick, contributed the sum originally subscribed, namely, £11,153. 18s. 6d., together with the accumulations of interest, which, before the work was completed, produced a total of £26,125².

For the bronze statue of Professor Sedgwick, by Onslow Ford, R.A., the Reverend Will. Selwyn, D.D. (Joh.), gave £500.

Part of the cost of providing fittings for the library, and of embellishing the north façade of the building, was defrayed out of a sum of £2000, given by the Reverend Hen. Latham, M.A., Master of Trinity Hall.

A Syndicate was appointed 16 March, 1899, "to consider what steps should be taken for the erection of new buildings for the Department of Botany...upon a site on the ground purchased from Downing College³." They consulted W. C. Marshall, M.A. (Trin.), architect, from whom they obtained plans which were approved by Grace 14 June, 1900⁴. Tenders were accepted 14 March, 1901⁵; and the building was ready for use in the Michaelmas Term, 1903.

Botanical School.

On the same date a second Syndicate was appointed "to consider what steps should be taken for the erection of a Law School and Library" on part of the same ground. They published a report⁶ dated 8 May, 1900, which begins as follows:

Law School and Squire
Library.

They consider that the best position for such School and Library is on the north side of the ground purchased from Downing College, the Library to be built adjacent to the Geological Museum, and the School on part of the remaining north front of the ground, adjacent to the Library. They are happy to report that they have received an extremely munificent offer from the Trustees under the will⁷ of the late Miss R. F. Squire to defray the cost of building the Law Library and of furnishing it with internal fittings. In accordance with the wish of the Trustees the Library will form a distinct and self-contained part of the whole building, but its entrance and staircase, which will be at the western end, will also afford access to the different rooms of the School. ...The main entrance to the University buildings on the Downing Site, with a Porter's Lodge, is provided under the Library. The Trustees do not object to this arrangement, but consider that as such general entrance and Porter's Lodge will be for the convenience of other University buildings, besides the Library, some part of the cost of providing this arrangement should be borne by University funds.

The Syndicate have consulted Mr T. G. Jackson, R.A., the architect of the Geological Museum, and have obtained from him plans which have been submitted to the Trustees of Miss Squire's will, and approved by them.

They next give a description of the plans, which ends with the following paragraph:

It should be added that, with the consent of the Master of Trinity Hall, Mr Jackson proposes to devote part of the Master's generous contribution of £2000, to the embellishment of the Downing Street front of the Law Library, and to the provision of ornamental gates. This will be in addition to the sum to be expended by the Squire Trustees upon the fabric. The proposed embellishment is shewn on the perspective view exhibited by Mr Jackson¹.

In conclusion they recommend:

1. That the offer of the Trustees under Miss Squire's Will to defray the cost of building a Law Library, and of furnishing it with internal fittings, be gratefully accepted, and that the Library be named the Squire Law Library.

2. That a general approval be given to the plans for the Law School, Law Library, entrance from Downing Street and Porter's Lodge, prepared by Mr T. G. Jackson, R.A., and that the Law School and Library Buildings Syndicate be authorised to obtain specifications and tenders for the erection of buildings according to these plans with such modifications of detail as the Syndicate may approve.

These recommendations were confirmed by Grace, 7 June, 1900².

c. Gifts to the Museums.

Department of Anatomy.

In 1804 (24 April) the Senate allowed an annual sum of £10, if wanted, to keep the Anatomical collections in safety¹. In a subsequent Grace, passed 28 May, 1822², increasing the grant to £30, it is explained that the former sum was required because the Senate had accepted from the Regius Professor of Medicine, Sir Isaac Pennington, M.D., a small but choice anatomical collection formed by Dr Lawrence.

Benefaction of Professor Flinders Petrie, 1898.

11 October, 1898.

DEAR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

Our Museum has just received from Professor Flinders Petrie a most magnificent donation of 19 cases of skulls and bones from his excavations at Hierakonpolis, Egypt. This is the second donation of the kind we have received from him, and as these include the remains of the prehistoric and earliest dynastic races they are of immense value.

With this addition our Collection of specimens of Egyptian Anthropology is not only the largest in Great Britain (probably in Europe), but it is also thoroughly representative, as it now consists of specimens which represent all the periods of Egyptian History from prehistoric times down to the Battle of Tel el Kebir.

Very sincerely yours,

ALEX. MACALISTER³.

A Grace to return thanks for this gift passed the Senate 27 October, 1898⁴.

REVEREND SIR,

Sensible of the great honour done me by the University many years ago in conferring upon me the title of their Professor of Botany, and of the continuance of their favour in bestowing the same on my son upon my resignation, I am desirous of making some acknowledgment.

I therefore desire the Chancellor, Masters, and Scholars of the University of Cambridge to accept of my printed Books relating to Botany, and of my Hortus siccus, containing a considerable number of dried specimens of Plants collected from most parts of the known world. The whole is contained in eight wainscot cases, which I desire may be repositied in some convenient place for the use and under the care of the present Professor of Botany, and of his successors for the time being.

I hope, Sir, the University will not disdain to receive this small donation from their most obliged, humble Servant

JOHN MARTYN¹.

The gift was accepted with thanks on the same day.

2. Benefaction of Lady Bunbury, 1888.

In 1888 (16 June) the University accepted by Grace² the collections, recent and fossil, formed by Sir Ch. Bunbury, Bart. They were offered by Lady Bunbury in the following letter:

MILDENHALL,
23 May, 1888.

DEAR MR CLARK,

As I am now ready to transfer to the University of Cambridge the Botanical collections belonging to my husband, the late Sir Charles Bunbury, of which I have frequently spoken to you, I beg leave to inform you of the conditions under which I am willing to present them, in accordance with what I know to have been his wish. The collections consist of:

1. A cabinet of Lichens, formed by the late Mr Eagle of Bury St Edmund's.

2. A collection of British plants, arranged according to the Linnean system, formed by Mrs Rickards, wife of the Rev. S. Rickards, sometime rector of Stow Langtoft, Bury St Edmund's, who died in 1865.

² Reporter, 19 June, 1888, p. 908. The Grace confirms a report of the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate, dated 29 May. Ibid. p. 828.

3. Eight boxes of dried plants, unarranged, partly given to Sir Charles by friends, partly purchased.

4. A collection of seeds and fruits, formed by Sir Charles Bunbury.

5. A general herbarium, formed by Sir Charles Bunbury at different periods during his whole life. It is contained in upwards of sixty boxes, exclusive of the Mosses, Lycopodiums, and Equisetums, which I propose to retain for a few months, until I have completed their arrangement. All the specimens are in good order, accurately determined, with locality and date, and recorded in a catalogue which will accompany the collection. I may add that many of the papers to which the plants are attached, have been annotated by Sir Charles.

Of these collections, I give the first four without any restriction whatever, with the exception that I propose to retain Mrs Rickards' collection (2) during my life: but, as regards the fifth, I give it under the condition, which I hope the University will not consider onerous, that it be not amalgamated with their general Herbarium, but kept, so far as possible, as it is at present, and be called Sir Charles Bunbury's Herbarium. If, however, the University should at any time think proper to print the Catalogue, or to have a new one compiled, they are at liberty to adopt whatever arrangement may be thought desirable.

In addition to the above collections Sir Charles formed a cabinet of fossil plants. This I propose to retain during my life, but, after my death, I give it to the University of Cambridge, to be placed in the Botanical Museum. This also I wish to be kept separate, and to be regarded as part of my late husband's Herbarium.

I remain (etc.)

FRANCES J. BUNBURY.

3. Benefaction of Cha. Cardale Babington, M.A., 1895.

Professor Babington, who died 22 July, 1895, bequeathed his collections and part of his library to the University, as stated in the following letter from his widow:

BROOKSIDE, CAMBRIDGE, Aug. 7, 1895.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I write to tell you that my Husband, the late Professor Charles Cardale Babington, has bequeathed the entire valuable Collection of Plants belonging to himself to the University, and I ask you kindly to accept the same, and to record the gift in the way that you will best know how to effect.

I also would add that the whole of his Botanical Library which is at the Museum is also given to the University; this latter gift my Husband had already notified to Mr J. W. Clark in June, 1888, and I have a letter from the latter, dated June 5, 1888, saying that the matter had been duly entered on the Minutes of the Museums Syndicate.

I beg to remain [etc.]

ANNA MARIA BABINGTON¹.

The thanks of the University for the herbarium were expressed by Grace 22 October; and for the Library 5 December, next ensuing².

4. Benefaction of Cha. Packe, M.A. (Oxford), 1897.

In 1897 the following letter was written by Professor Marshall Ward:

UNIVERSITY BOTANICAL LABORATORY,
1 March, 1897.

DEAR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

A collection of Pyrenean and Alpine plants, made by the late Charles Packe, M.A., Christ Church, Oxford, has been presented to the Herbarium by his widow, Mrs Charles Packe, Stretton Park, Leicestershire. The specimens, on about 3700 sheets, are mounted and named, and were for the most part collected by Mr Packe himself between 1858 and 1893. The gift is a valuable addition to our European collection.

I am, yours sincerely,

H. MARSHALL WARD³.

The thanks of the University were expressed by Grace 11 March, 1897⁴.

Department of Mineralogy.

The collection originated with the minerals bought by Grace, 20 November, 1822, from the executors of the Rev. Edw. Dan. Clarke, LL.D., Professor of Mineralogy 1808–1822, who died 9 March, 1822.

1. Benefaction of the Reverend Will. Whewell, M.A., 1832.

Mr Whewell resigned the Professorship of Mineralogy 11 November, 1831; and in the following February, he addressed the following letter to the Vice-Chancellor:

TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE,
Feb. 17, 1832.

MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I beg respectfully to state, for the information of the Members of the Senate, that it is my wish to present to the University my private Collection of Minerals, as soon as the University will provide a suitable room for their reception.

The Collection consists of a considerable number of articles (I believe about 1000), illustrative of most kinds and properties of minerals; and in a great measure arranged ticketed and Catalogued. I am ready to transfer these into the possession of the Professor of Mineralogy, as the property of the University, so soon as I am certified that they will be speedily placed in a room where they may be well preserved and consulted by students. I would beg to direct that the fitness of any room proposed for this purpose be decided upon by the Professor of Mineralogy, the Woodwardian Professor of Geology and the Professor of Chemistry, for the time being respectively, or by any two of them.

I am also ready and desirous to present to the University at the same time and under the same circumstances, a Collection of books on Mineralogy, including most of the principal works on that Science.

I am also desirous to present to the University the sum of one hundred pounds; namely fifty pounds to be employed in fitting up for the reception of the above and other minerals, any room appointed by the University for that purpose, and approved as above; and fifty pounds for the erection of any such room, or of any building of which such a room shall form a part. This latter sum I am ready to pay, as soon as a plan for such a building has been adopted by the University, and orders given for its execution.

I have the honour to be [etc.]

W. WHEWELL¹.

This gift was accepted by Grace, 7 March, 1832².

2. Benefaction of Viscount Alford, 1841.

This collection was offered to the University in the following letter:

LONDON, June 10, 1841.

MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

Viscount Alford has commissioned and requested me to offer to the University for their acceptance the Mineralogical Collection now in his possession, which was brought together by his Lordship's grandfather Sir Abraham Hume. I am persuaded that the University will accept with gratitude this act of munificence on the part of his Lordship; and I may perhaps be permitted to remark, with regard to the value of the Collection, that it was made at great expense, and catalogued by Count de Bournon, whose catalogues will be transferred along with the Collection. The cabinets in which the collection is contained will also be presented to the University; these are, I understand, five in number.

I am to state also that it would be agreeable to the donor that the collection should be kept together, distinct from the rest of the mineralogical collection of the University; and that it should be designated by some name commemorative of the founder of the collection, as for example the "Humian Museum." I may add, as having formerly held the office of Professor of Mineralogy in the University, that I conceive this mode of preserving the collection would add to its scientific value and interest.

I have the honour to be [etc.]

W. WHEWELL¹.

The thanks of the University were conveyed to Viscount Alford in a letter written by the Public Orator, 16 June, 1841².

3. Benefaction of Cha. Brooke, M.A., 1857.

The collection formed by Hen. Ja. Brooke, F.R.S., was offered to the University by his son, Ch. Brooke, M.A. (Joh.), "on condition that it be maintained entire as the Brooke Collection."

This offer was announced to the Senate by the Vice-Chancellor 31 October, 1857, and accepted by Grace 12 November, 1857. A letter of thanks, written by the Public Orator, was ordered to be sealed on the same day³.

4. Benefaction of Howard Warburton Elphinstone, M.A., 1858.

The following notice was issued by the Vice-Chancellor,
19 October, 1858:

The Vice-Chancellor has great pleasure in announcing to the Senate that Mr Howard Warburton Elphinstone, M.A., of Trinity College, offers to give to the University the Collection of Minerals belonging to his late great uncle, Mr Henry Warburton, M.A., formerly of Trinity College, subject to the following condition, viz. that, if the Minerals are not all unpacked and placed so that they can be seen and made use of within the space of one year, they be forfeited.

Mr Elphinstone states that he is willing that any specimens should from time to time be sold and the money laid out in the purchase of new specimens, or that they should be exchanged for others, or given to scientific men, or that they should be used for any purpose which, in the opinion of the Vice-Chancellor, and the Professor of Mineralogy for the time being, may promote the study of Mineralogy in the University or the interests of that science generally.

The Vice-Chancellor begs leave, further, to inform the Senate that the Professor of Mineralogy has inspected the collection and is of opinion that it would form a very valuable addition to the University collection. He states that there is one small cabinet in it of especial interest, containing a suite of exquisitely perfect mineral crystals and crystallized laboratory products, which he has reason to believe were collected by the inventor of the reflective Goniometer.

The Professor further states that there is a space on the west side of the Mineralogical Museum where glass cases may be conveniently placed to contain the Collection, so as to fulfil the condition to which the gift is subject.

A Grace to accept the collection, to seal the Orator's letter of thanks to the donor, and to order the necessary cabinets, passed the Senate 28 October, 1858¹.

5. Benefaction of the Reverend Tho. Wiltshire, M.A., 1897.

The arrival of this collection was notified to the Senate in the following letter:

THE MINERALOGICAL MUSEUM, CAMBRIDGE, 21 October, 1897.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I beg leave to inform you that the Reverend Professor Wiltshire, M.A., of Trinity College, has generously presented his very extensive and valuable Collection of Minerals to this Museum. Since the arrival of the Collection there has not been time to completely unpack the specimens or to inspect them, and it will be some time before the full value of the gift can be estimated. But I have already seen enough to convince me of its containing a large number of beautiful and expensive specimens suited for display in the show-cases, and also of specimens of special crystallographic and mineralogical importance. It will also fill up gaps in our Collection, and more especially in specimens discovered during the last 40 years.

Professor Wiltshire has likewise presented three cabinets of drawers which relieve in an appreciable manner the state of congestion of our drawers and cases which the addition of his Collection necessarily to some extent causes.

Very faithfully yours, W. J. LEWIS¹.

A Grace to thank the donor passed the Senate 28 October, 1897².

Department of Zoology.

1. Benefactions of Mrs Strickland, 1867, and of Miss Strickland, 1874.

In 1867 (21 March) the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate published a report containing the following letter, addressed to the Superintendent of the Museums of Zoology and Comparative Anatomy:

7 March, 1867.

SIR,

Offer.

I wish to offer for the acceptance of the University of Cambridge through you the Superintendent of its Zoological Museum the Collection formed by my deceased husband, H. E. Strickland, Esq., M.A., F.R.S., &c., late Deputy Reader in Geology in the University of Oxford.

Description.

Conditions.

The Collection consists of upwards of a thousand Bird Skins in good order and occupying comparatively small space. The conditions on which I make the offer are that the Collection shall be called The Strickland Collection, and shall be suitably lodged in your Museum in Drawer Cabinets; that regulations shall be made to ensure its safe custody, combined with due facilities being afforded to all persons who (under proper restrictions) may wish to study or examine its contents; and that none of the specimens of which it is composed shall at any time be permanently alienated from the University.

Further stipulations I do not propose to make, but as I had for some years assisted my husband in forming the Collection, and since his death it has been in my charge, I venture to indicate in what way it seems to me likely that the Collection can be made useful to the study of the Science its formation was intended to promote, and my suggestions I leave to the consideration of the University, trusting they will be followed.

My object in offering the Collection to the University is to aid professed Naturalists, not to furnish a means of instruction to beginners, and still less as an additional object of interest to mere sight-seers.

As the Collection almost entirely consists of specimens to which reference is made in the published writings of my husband, my father (Sir W. Jardine, Bart.) and other Ornithologists of established reputation, nearly each specimen in it is the Type of some description on record, and I therefore recommend that it be kept separate from any other which the University may now possess or hereafter acquire, in order that persons wishing to consult those Types, may the more readily do so; and still further to facilitate the study and examination of these Types, it is desirable that none of the specimens it contains should be lent, or mounted, except under very special circumstances.

Recommended to be kept separate.

I believe that the publication of a Catalogue of the contents of this Collection would be regarded by Ornithologists in all countries as an eminently useful work¹. I possess in MS. such a Catalogue, and I shall be happy to render any assistance in preparing it for the Press should the University give me reason to hope it will undertake the printing in such a form as the present state of science demands.

Catalogue.

In conclusion I have only to request that you will favour me with a reply at your early convenience, and,

Believe me, [etc.]

C. D. M. STRICKLAND.

J. W. Clark, Esq.

This report was confirmed by Grace 28 March, 1867².

The cabinets and cases required for the protection of this collection, and others in the possession of the University, were provided by the generous help of Colleges and individuals, through whose liberality a sum of £762. 5s. 6d. was subscribed. In the spring of 1869 the Strickland collection arrived, and was arranged by Mrs Strickland³.

2. Bequests to the Museum.

a. Benefaction of Rob. McAndrew, F.R.S., 1873.

In 1873 (2 December) the Vice-Chancellor published the following:

Extract from the Will of Rob. McAndrew, dated 6 December, 1871, with a Codicil.

I bequeath to the University of Cambridge all the Shells in my arranged collections (including those in the upright case but not the Cabinets and case containing them). Subject nevertheless to the University undertaking that any Shells which the Vice-Chancellor for the time being of the University or any Professor or other Official nominated by him shall deem to be sufficiently represented in the collection of the University Museum shall be handed over by the University to the Curator or other principal officer of the Museum of Science and Art in Edinburgh to be placed by them in such Museum and subject also to the University undertaking that the Shells retained by them shall be placed and for ever thereafter kept under the care of a competent Curator or Assistant-Curator in such Museum or other place as will render them most easy of access to the general public and more especially to Students and that they shall be distinguished from all other specimens of shells in any collection of which they may for the time being form part by some peculiarity in their mounting and that my name shall be upon each of the labels. I bequeath all such of my said arranged collections of shells as shall not be retained by the University to the Museum of Science and Art in Edinburgh. I also bequeath to the University of Cambridge to be placed in their Museum or a Library connected with it such of the purely Conchological Works in my Library as the Vice-Chancellor or any Professor or other Official nominated by him shall select provided they are works which they do not already possess. And I hereby declare that so soon as the Senate or other governing body of the said University of Cambridge shall have signified their willingness to accept the collection of Shells and Books aforesaid on the conditions aforesaid my executors shall be at liberty to deliver the said Collections to such person as the Vice-Chancellor of the said University for the time being shall name for the purpose and shall not afterwards be under any liability to see that the Conditions aforesaid are fulfilled. And I further direct that my executors shall in their sole discretion determine what works shall be deemed purely Conchological Works within the meaning of the above bequest and that they shall not be bound to ascertain whether the University possesses a duplicate of any work selected.

This is a Codicil to the last Will and Testament of me Robert McAndrew of Isleworth House in the County of Middlesex Esquire which Will bears date the 6th day of December 1871. Whereas by my said Will I bequeathed to the University of Cambridge to be placed in their Museum or a Library connected with it such of the purely Conchological Works in my Library as the Vice-Chancellor or any Professor or other Official nominated by him should select provided they were works which they did not already possess. And I thereby declared that so soon as the Senate or other governing body of the said University of Cambridge should have signified their willingness to accept the Collection of Shells and Books therein mentioned on the conditions therein specified my executors should be at liberty to deliver the said Collections to such person as the Vice-Chancellor of the said University for the time being should name for the purpose and should not afterwards be under any liability to see that the conditions therein mentioned were fulfilled. Now I hereby revoke the aforesaid bequest of my Conchological Works and the aforesaid declaration and in lieu thereof I bequeath to the University of Cambridge to be placed in their Museum or a Library connected with it such of the purely Conchological Works in my Library as the Vice-Chancellor or any Professor or other Official nominated by him shall select provided they are Works which the said University does not already possess (otherwise than in the Public Library of the said University). And I hereby declare that so soon as the said University shall have signified by Grace of the Senate their willingness to accept my said Conchological Works and the Collection of Shells bequeathed by my said Will to the said University on the conditions therein mentioned my executors shall be at liberty to deliver the same respectively to such person as the Vice-Chancellor of the said University for the time being shall name for the purpose and shall not afterwards be under any liability to see that the conditions in my said Will mentioned are fulfilled. And in all other respects I confirm my said Will. In witness etc.

The bequest was accepted by Grace 13 December, 1873, when the thanks of the University were returned to the executors¹. The cabinets were subsequently given by Mrs M^cAndrew. The collection reached Cambridge in December 1873.

great part of his life at San Francisco, where he made extensive collections, illustrative of the Fauna of the Pacific seaboard from Alaska to Panama, and especially of Vancouver's Island, California, and Sitka Sound. It was known to be his wish that these Collections should become the property of the University, although he left no express directions respecting them in his Will: and in consequence his representatives, W. H. FitzHerbert, Esq. of Somersal Herbert, Uttoxeter; Charles Bill, Esq. of Farley Hall, Cheadle; and Mrs Wright, of Aldercar Hall, Langley Mill, Nottingham, most generously carried out his intentions, by presenting them after his death, which occurred in 1869.

Mr Hepburn having devoted most of his time to the study of Ornithology, it was to be expected that Birds would be best represented in his Collection. There are over 1500 skins, all in excellent condition, representing about 330 species, of most of which the series is extremely good, having, to all appearance, been selected to shew the differences caused by sex, age, season or locality, particulars as to these points being carefully recorded in a MS. Catalogue... They are accompanied by a large collection of eggs and nests carefully identified and authenticated.

Of mammals there is a small series, chiefly of skins, with two complete skeletons of the Northern Fur Seal (Callorhinus ursinus).

Of Reptiles, Amphibia, and Fish, there is a considerable number, preserved in spirit.

Of Invertebrata there is a very large collection, consisting of Mollusca in spirit, Shells, Crustacea, and Insects. The shells are all carefully marked with their names and localities, each species, of which there is often a long series, having generally a box devoted to itself. It has been impossible at present to estimate fully the extent of this portion of the Collection; but it certainly consists of many hundred species, selected, like the Birds, under various conditions of age and locality.

There is also a very interesting series of 28 Skulls of Indians, and a great quantity of Arms, Vessels, Idols, and the like, illustrative of the habits of the Aborigines...

Besides the above Zoological Collections there is a small but important series of Minerals, chiefly illustrating gold, and the rocks in which it is deposited. There are also a few Fossils.

Mr Hepburn's specimens have reached us in the most admirable condition and order, notwithstanding his sudden death, which, in the case of a less methodical naturalist, would have caused his collections to be left in a state of confusion....

Jan. 9, 1888.

DEAR SIR,

My mother (Lady Caroline Russell) and I wish to offer for the acceptance of the University the Collection of British Birds' Eggs made by the late Mr J. P. Wilmot³, and by him bequeathed to my late father, George Lake Russell⁴.

Professor Newton knows the collection, and has a list of its contents, which he will, I am sure, show you. You will see that it contains one specimen of the great Auk's Egg, a good example, and, as I believe, that from which Mr Hewitson took the plate which is in his work. We therefore think the collection not unworthy of the acceptance of the University.

But we make the offer conditionally, viz.: that we be permitted to place upon the Cabinet which contains it, (if the Cabinet is retained by the University) or else upon the Cabinet in which it shall be placed, a plate saying that it is given in memory of my father. If there is any reason why this cannot be done, please consider that our offer is withdrawn. I would submit the language, which we propose to use, to you before doing anything.

My father was a Cambridge man, I am a Cambridge man, and we should therefore like our University to possess the Collection.

Professor Newton suggested to me that I should in the first instance write to you.

I am, [etc.]

CECIL HENRY RUSSELL.

many years ago. Mr Hewitson, in the several editions of his 'British Oology,' largely availed himself of specimens from this collection to figure or describe—among others of the Great Auk's egg, terming it "the most beautiful egg which I have seen."

The collection, which Mr Russell was so kind as to shew me a few weeks ago, seems to have been untouched since Mr Wilmot's death, and is in admirable order. I trust that no one in the University will raise any objection to the very reasonable and moderate condition attached to the acceptance of so valuable an offer.

for the meetings of their Council and for other purposes¹. In this room their library was accommodated.

In 1880 (25 October) Professor Newton, then President of the Society, informed the Vice-Chancellor that

The books have now become so numerous that a larger apartment is required for their convenient accommodation.

The want of a central Scientific Library in the New Museums, for the use of the Professors, Lecturers, and students, has long been felt, and recognized in various ways by the University.

If such a Library were founded and placed in a suitable room, the Council of the Philosophical Society would be prepared to recommend to the Society that their Library should be deposited in it, under regulations to be approved by the Society. It would thus form a nucleus for such a collection of books as is required, which, there is reason to believe, would before long be largely increased by donations².

This letter having been referred to the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate, a conference between the Syndicate and Council was held at which the following report was adopted (10 December):

1. The Library of the Philosophical Society, consisting of about 5000 volumes, has become too large to be conveniently accommodated in the room in the New Museums where it is at present placed.

2. This Library, consisting chiefly of scientific periodicals and the publications of learned Societies (British and foreign), which last are received by the Society in exchange for its own publications, would, if rendered more accessible to the Professors, Officers and Students engaged at the New Museums and Lecture Rooms, be a most valuable assistance to them in the execution of their duties and prosecution of their studies.

3. The recent alteration in the central block of buildings of the New Museums has given a large room, at present unappropriated, which from its size and convenient situation seems admirably fitted, among other purposes, for a library.

4. If the books of the Philosophical Society could be removed to this large room, and be placed under proper custody and regulations so that they could be used by those who work in the New Museums and

² Reporter, 17 May, 1881, p. 565. The following account is derived from the Report of the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate, dated 13 May, there printed, pp. 565—569.

Lecture Rooms, the advantages above indicated (2) would, it is believed, be attained.

5. In this case the services of a fit librarian would be required for the proper custody of the books and the keeping of the catalogue, but the funds of the Philosophical Society are not, nor are they likely to be, sufficient to pay the salary of such an officer; all its income being required for the expenses attending its own publications in exchange for which so many valuable works are received, subscription to scientific periodicals, and purchase of other additions to the Library.

6. It would therefore be necessary that the librarian should be paid by the University, and presuming that his services would be required for six hours daily during full Term and certain portions of the Vacations—especially in the months of July and August—his salary might be estimated at not less than £70 per annum, but it is possible that this sum might be somewhat reduced, if any arrangement could be made with the University Library Syndicate for partly employing one of the Library-Assistants, and thus ensuring the services of one properly trained in library work.

7. The management of the Philosophical Society's Library might be entrusted to a Committee of (say) six persons, one half to be appointed by the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate, and the other half by the Council of the Society, but it would be expedient that a few definite conditions should at the outset be agreed upon by the University and the Society, which should not be altered except with the express leave of both.

8. These conditions should among other things define the position of the Fellows of the Philosophical Society as regards the privilege of removing books from the Library, especially in view of access to the room being forbidden when required for examinations¹; and should also pledge the Society as a body to such outlay in the purchase of new works and the continuance of its subscription to scientific periodicals as its income will admit—due allowance being made for its other necessary expenses.

9. It seems inexpedient at present to enter into further details—but if the considerations urged above find favour with the University and the Society—it is hoped that the details required to give effect to them may without much difficulty be arranged in a manner satisfactory to both parties.

The conditions referred to in (7), (8) were next agreed to, under the title of ¹ By Grace, 27 February, 1896 (Reporter, 3 March, p. 542), the use of the room for examinations was discontinued.

Fundamental regulations.

I. That no book be taken out of the buildings of the New Museums, except by Fellows of the Cambridge Philosophical Society¹; and by them only for a limited time, not exceeding in any case seven days².

II. That every book removed from the Library be entered in a register to be kept for the purpose.

III. That in addition to the Fellows of the Society all Professors, Demonstrators, Teachers recognized by the University, and Curators, together with such persons as the Committee of Management may from time to time decide, be permitted to use the books of the Library within the buildings of the New Museums.

IV. That certain books be marked Not to be taken out; provided that books so marked may be taken out by Fellows of the Society during the last hour in any day on which the Library is open; and further, provided that they be brought back during the first two hours that the Library is next open.

V. That it be the duty of the Committee of Management specified in the Report already referred to, § 7, to decide from time to time which books shall be marked Not to be taken out; and to enforce the payment of fines imposed for the breach of any of these rules.

VI. That subject to conditions necessary for the safety of the Library the Fellows of the Philosophical Society have access, so far as is practicable, to the Library, at hours other than those during which it is generally open.

VII. That these rules shall apply of necessity only to the books which are or shall become the property of the Philosophical Society.

Finally (9 May, 1881) Professor Newton wrote to the Vice-Chancellor:

CAMBRIDGE PHILOSOPHICAL SOCIETY,
9 May, 1881.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

In accordance with a resolution of the Council of this Society, I hereby offer to the University the use of the Society's Library on the conditions contained in the accompanying Report of the Society's Council, dated 25 April, 1881, which was confirmed at a Special General Meeting of the Society held this day.

I remain, dear Mr Vice-Chancellor, yours very truly,

ALFRED NEWTON

² For "seven" read "fourteen." Grace, 1 June, 1893 (Reporter, p. 935).

The Report referred to by Professor Newton is in the following terms :

I. That they be authorized by the Society to offer the use of the Library to the University on the following conditions, and to take the necessary steps for that purpose.

- | | |
|--|--------------|
| 1. That the books be deposited in the large room on the ground floor of the central block of the New Museums. | Room. |
| 2. That the University undertake to make provision for the necessary fittings in the New Library, and for the services of a fit Librarian for the proper custody of the books and the keeping of a catalogue. | Fittings. |
| 3. That the Society undertake to expend yearly, as heretofore, such sums in the purchase of new works and subscriptions to scientific periodicals, and in binding, as its income will admit—due allowance being made for its other necessary expenses. | Maintenance. |
| 4. That the management of the Library be entrusted to a Committee of six persons, one half to be appointed by the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate and one half by the Council of the Philosophical Society. | Management. |

Provided that the fundamental regulations for the Library, marked I.—VII. in the foregoing Report, be not altered except with the consent both of the Society and of the University.

Regulations only to be altered by consent.

These documents were embodied by the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate in a Report dated 13 May, 1881, which, as an Amended Report, dated 24 May¹, was confirmed by Grace 2 June.

9. THE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

1. Benefaction of the Reverend Will. Selwyn, 1864.

On the death of the Reverend John Ja. Blunt, B.D. (Joh.), the Reverend Will. Selwyn, B.D. (Joh.), was elected to succeed him as Lady Margaret's Professor, 29 June, 1855. Soon afterwards Professor Selwyn declared his intention of paying to the University £700 per annum, either to augment the salary of the then Norrisian Professor, the Rev. Edw. Harold Browne, B.D. (Emm.), or, should the Norrisian chair be first vacant, for some other purpose connected with theology.

This arrangement was confirmed by the following Grace, 14 May, 1856:

Cum declaraverit Professor Theologiæ ex fundatione Domine Margaretæ se velle (quamdiu dicto munere fruatur) partem quandam redditus sui exinde profluentis literarum sacrarum profectui impendere, atque ideo obtulerit summam 700 librarum annuatim a Domino Procancellario solvendam in augmen stipendii imparis Professoris Norrisiani, quamdiu fruuntur muneribus suis dicti Professores:

Et cum ultra declaraverit Professor Theologiæ ex fundatione Domine Margaretæ se velle (si munus Professoris Norrisiani prius vacaverit) dictam summam annuam profectui literarum sacrarum eo modo impendere quo vobis (ipso consentiente) placeat, vel augmine continuato stipendii Professoris Norrisiani, vel aliter:

Placeat Vobis ut munificentia illa a Vobis accipiatur¹.

In 1864, Professor Browne having been made Bishop of Ely, a Grace was passed (8 December) with the consent of Professor Selwyn, directing that his annual benefaction should be devoted to the building of a Divinity School:

Cum Gulielmus Selwyn, S.T.P., Domine Margaretæ in Sacra Theologia lector, summam annuam £700 durante sua lectura ad studia theologica promovenda, conditionibus gratia vestra 14^o Maii 1856 expressis contulerit;

Placeat Vobis, suadente eodem Lectore, ut dicta summa Scholæ Theologicæ in Academia extruendæ devoveatur, donec opus istud perfectum sit².

This scheme was minutely set forth in a deed of trust (A), dated 13 December, 1864.

The Divinity School, the history of which has been fully related in *The Architectural History*³, was begun in the spring of 1877, and completed in 1879, when (30 October) it was formally conveyed to the University by the Selwyn trustees⁴. When the accounts were made up, it appeared that the building (exclusive of the Literary Lecture Rooms) had cost £11,060. 4s. 3d., and that Professor Selwyn's benefaction had amounted to about £10,706. 14s. 11d.⁵

2. *Benefaction of the Reverend Jos. Barber Lightfoot,

Dr Lightfoot, Lord Bishop of Durham, who died 21 December, 1889, bequeathed part of his library to the Divinity School, as related in the following extract from a letter written by Dr Hort to the Secretary of the Museums and Lecture Rooms Syndicate, 5 June, 1890 :

You are probably aware that Bishop Lightfoot has bequeathed his library to the University of Durham, and to the Divinity School at Cambridge ; and that his executors, in the exercise of the discretion allowed them under the Will, have assigned to the Divinity School the theological portion of the Library, those books alone being excepted which either are duplicates of books already possessed by the Divinity School, or for any other reason are not desired on its behalf. The books thus assigned to the Divinity School, with a few exceptions, have now arrived and been unpacked ; but it is hardly necessary to say that the space still vacant on the shelves of the Library of the Divinity School will go but a little way towards receiving them. We are therefore under a necessity of applying to the Museums and Lecture-Rooms Syndicate, in the hope that they will be good enough to provide the Library with the additional shelves needed for the reception of Dr Lightfoot's munificent and valuable bequest....

According to an estimate founded on a rough list sent from Auckland, shelf-room is likely to be needed for about 1900 volumes of different sizes. Their weight (with the cases) was four tons¹.

3. Benefaction of Sam. Sandars, M.A. (Trin.), 1890.

In the course of the Michaelmas Term, 1890, the Vice-Chancellor received a letter from Mr Sandars, "in which he called attention to the empty state of the niches in front of the Divinity School, and offered to present to the University a series of statues to be placed in them²." The letter was referred to the Divinity Professors, who discussed the proposal with Mr Sandars on more than one occasion. A Grace to accept his gift with thanks passed the Senate 13 June, 1891³; but the statues were not completed until 1898, when (4 June), Dr Swete, Regius Professor of Divinity, informed the Vice-Chancellor that "the scheme had been carried into effect." The following list is appended to his letter :

The accounts of the Queen's executors record payments which fall into three classes: (1) bequests; (2) donations by the executors in the exercise of a discretionary power to carry into effect the Queen's presumed intentions, and to provide for the repose of her soul; (3) payments directed by the King². The following payment, made in Hilary Term, 1292, belongs to the second class:

Elemosina. Item, pauperibus scholaribus de Cantebria pro anima Reginae, per manus W. de Carleton. L. Marc.³

It is to be noted that only fifty marks were paid instead of one hundred as stated in the above statute. This may have been due to want of funds, for in the same accounts we find only half of a definite bequest recorded:

opportunity of borrowing money without interest, founded Chests; that is to say, they gave to the University a sum of money with a chest to keep it in. This chest was deposited in a place of security, and entrusted to wardens appointed by the Chancellor and Masters, who made themselves responsible for the proper administration of the fund contained in it.

The names of a considerable number of these chests have come down to us; but their funds seem to have been exhausted at a very early date, and their names alone have preserved the memory of a benefaction that would otherwise have been entirely forgotten. It might be possible to discover more about their history than is at present known; but, as such an investigation would be archæological rather than practical, I shall enumerate in this place those only of which the history rests on a sure foundation, and which remained in a more or less flourishing condition down to the end of the seventeenth century.

I. Walter Neel, citizen of London, a native of Kent, and John Wythorn, rector of Halsted in Essex, gave £100 in a certain chest, to be called the Neel and Wythorn chest for ever. The statute regulating this benefaction is dated 25 February, 1344¹.

II. William Bateman, bp. of Norwich 23 May, 1344, to his death 6 January, 1355, and founder of Trinity Hall, 1350, gave £100 in a chest called the chest of the Holy Trinity, standing in the Carmelite Priory. The statute regulating this gift is not dated, but as it speaks of the founder as bp. of Norwich, and further mentions Trinity Hall as an existing institution, it must have been drawn up after 23 February, 1350, the date of the royal licence authorising the Master Fellows and Scholars of the Holy Trinity to buy themselves a site, and before January, 1355².

² The original deed is not in existence. It is copied in the Junior Proctor's Book, fols. 58—60; Senior Proctor's Book, fols. 64—66. Unfortunately it is not dated, and the name of the Chancellor who is a party to it is not given.

Exeter
Chest, 1426.

III. Thomas Beaufort, son to John of Gaunt, and duke of Exeter, by Will dated Sunday, 29 December, 1426, on which day he died, made the following bequest to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge :

Item quia mutuam prestare pro Deo et nichil temporale inde sperare dinoscitur acceptum complacitum pariter et ab eo preceptum idcirco presentibus lego et assigno cli ad deponendum in segura cista infra Collegium Regine in Universitate Oxonie, ut scolares indigentes per modum mutuacionis inde releventur. Et volo quod de predicta pecunia in cista reposita, ut premittitur, statuta et consuetudines aliarum cistarum in eadem universitate inviolabiliter observentur, et rogo quod mutuantes, intuitu caritatis et divini amoris pro quibus ista facio velint pro anima mea et Margarete uxoris mee ac pro animabus parentum et progenitorum meorum, benefactorum, et omnium fidelium defunctorum preces offerre devotas Deo. Item sub eisdem forma, modificacione, et modo, ac tenore verborum, lego et assigno cli in segura cista ac segura custodia in aula sancte Trinitatis in Universitate Cantebrigie deponendas¹.

The statute commemorating the gift and regulating the disposition of it is dated 10 October, 1442². The chest was called the Exeter Chest.

Billingsford
Chest, 1432.

IV. Richard de Billingsford, D.D., Master of Corpus Christi College 1398–1432, gave 100 marks, in a chest which he placed in the parish church of S. Benedict. The statute for this chest is dated 5 September, 1432³.

Fenn Chest,
1480.

V. Of Hugh Fenn, whose chest was founded in or about 1480, the only information I have met with is contained in the following entry in the accounts of the University for 1480–81 :

Chest of
chier.

VI. Thomas Bouchier, Cardinal, bp. of Ely 1443–1454, abp. of Canterbury 1454, to his death 30 March, 1486, left £100 to each of the Universities, to be kept in chests, for the support of poor scholars⁵. This money was not paid till after the death of the Cardinal's nephew, Tho. Bouchier, knight, whose Will, dated 3 September, 1512, contains the following passage: "I will that my manor of Aynford be sold, and that cc l. be given to the two Universities of Cambridge and Oxford which is the gift of the Cardinal my uncle¹." The money was received in 1512-13, and a statute was framed in 1519-20.

These chests were afterwards arranged in the Grace Books as follows, and are referred to under the following names:

(1) Fenn and Neel; (2) Billingford and Bowser²=Bourchier; (3) Darlington³ and Exeter; (4) Trinity.

The statute of foundation for the Neel and Wythorn chest (1) is not only the most ancient of these documents, but the fullest. Those of subsequent date, for which it manifestly served as a model, are far less clear and precise, and the text of our copies of them is in some places hopelessly corrupt. A summary of its provisions will therefore give a good idea of the curious system which it inaugurated at Cambridge.

The donors are to be enrolled among the benefactors of the University. For the safekeeping of the chest and its contents three wardens are to be chosen annually, viz. two regent Masters of Arts, and one non-regent, who are to take an oath that they will perform their duties faithfully. They are to keep an accurate account of the capital and accumulations in their chest; and they are on no account to lend any sum to any person in excess of what is permitted in this statute. On the same day as the wardens are appointed, there are to be appointed also Auditors, with whom a Doctor in Theology or in Decrees is to be associated; these persons are to examine the accounts of the Wardens and to prepare a statement, to be laid up in the University Chest, of the result of their researches.

Money may not be lent except on the receipt of a caution of greater value than the loan. The caution may be either a book or an object of value (iocale). Elaborate precautions are enjoined about these cautions, which are to be deposited for a year. If at the expiration of that time the loan is not repaid, the caution is to be sold, the chest to be recouped, and the balance, if any, to be paid to the borrower.

The amount of the loans is fixed as follows: a Master may borrow sixty shillings; a Bachelor twenty shillings; and a Scholar one mark.

³ This chest was in existence in 1464-65 (Grace Book A, p. 48), but the history of the founder and the amount of his benefaction are equally unknown.

3. Benefaction of Matthew Stokys, M.A. (King's), 1590.

Matthew Stokys, Fellow of King's College, and one of the Esquire Bedells, by Will dated 17 November, 1590, bequeathed to the University three houses in Wall's Lane, Cambridge, now called King Street, in the parish of the Holy Trinity, to be called The University Almshouses, for six poor unmarried women, to be appointed by the Vice-Chancellor for the time being¹.

In 1859 the Almshouses had become so dilapidated as to be unfit for occupation, and the leases of the property devised by the founder for the maintenance of the houses and the payment of the Almswomen having long since expired, there was no source of income available for those purposes. The consent of the Charity Commissioners having been obtained, the houses and the site were sold, and the net profits of the sale were applied to the perpetual augmentation of the allowances to the occupants of the Hospital of S. Anthony and S. Eligius in Cambridge².

4. Benefaction of Thomas Hobson, 1628.

By Indenture of feoffment, dated 30 July, 1628, made between Thomas Hobson of the one part, and five persons described as privileged of the University of Cambridge, and named by the then Vice-Chancellor, and six other persons described as of the Town of Cambridge, and named by the then Mayor, of the other part, in acknowledgment of God's mercies and blessings upon his labours, and in testimony of his earnest and fervent wish to do good to the poor of the University and Town, conveyed unto the parties of the second part and their heirs a messuage and tenement, dove-house and site of a dove-house, a barn, and all houses and edifices then built upon the farms, gardens, curtilages, courts and grounds thereto belonging, with all their appurtenances, in the parish of St Andrew without Barnwell-gate in

² Report of Syndicate appointed 26 May, 1859, "to consider what steps should be taken in respect of Stokys' Almshouses in Cambridge," dated 18 February, 1860. It was confirmed by Grace 23 February. Grace Book P, pp. 11—13. See also Registry, Vol. xiv.

Cambridge: Upon trust, that they, their heirs and assigns, with the assistance of the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University, and the Mayor, Bailiffs, and Burgesses of the Town, and their successors respectively, should within the space of four years build, erect and finish one or more convenient house or houses upon the premises, as well for setting the poor people of the said University and Town to work, as for an house of correction for unruly and stubborn rogues, beggars and other poor persons who should refuse to work; and also in convenient time should provide a sufficient stock of wool and flax and other materials for setting of the said poor people of the said University and Town to work, and should from time to time thereafter, well and sufficiently maintain and repair the said houses to be by them erected, and all other the premises, and so of the same and every part thereof; and all rents and profits arising from the same for and towards the uses aforesaid; with a clause of re-entry to the grantor and his heirs in case of mis-employment of the premises, and a provision that, so often as it should happen that any eight of the Trustees should die, then within the space of five months the survivors should, upon request of the University and Corporation, or either of them, or of the Vice-Chancellor and Mayor for the time being, or of either of them, and at the cost and charges of the University and Corporation, convey the premises to twelve other persons and their heirs, six whereof to be named by the University or Vice-Chancellor for the time being, and the other six by the Corporation or Mayor for the time being, only upon the same trusts¹.

By a codicil to his Will, dated January 1, 1630, Thomas Hobson gave to the Mayor Bailiffs and Burgesses the sum of £100, to the intent that they should within a convenient time purchase lands or tenements therewith, the rents thereof yearly arising to be employed and bestowed towards the maintenance of the house of correction and workhouse within the Town of Cambridge, and of the poor which should be set on work there for ever.

¹ Cooper's Annals, iii. 204. Hobson died 1 January, 1630-31, æt. 86. Ibid. p. 230, where a short account of his life, and an analysis of his Will, are given.

The Charity was afterwards increased by part of the produce of a collection made at Cambridge by voluntary contributions, in pursuance of the King's Letters Patent, for the relief of the poor there during a pestilence which occurred about the year 1631; and it has been further increased by additional benefactions from time to time by other persons.

John Bowtell by Will, dated September 22, 1813, gave to the Trustees of the workhouse in Cambridge established by Thomas Hobson, the sum of £500 stock, 3 per cent. Bank Annuities, to the intent that the interest and dividends thereof should for ever be laid out and applied by the Trustees for the time being of the said workhouse, towards placing out poor boys, natives of the Town of Cambridge, as apprentices to learn some useful art, thereby to enable them to gain a comfortable living.

The Court of Chancery approved a Scheme for the management of the affairs of this Charity 4 August, 1852¹. This scheme dealt, among other things, with the University portion of the Spinning-house, heretofore used as a house of correction, for the reception and confinement of common women and prostitutes apprehended by the Proctors of the said University, and committed thereto by the Vice-Chancellor. After the passing of the Cambridge University and Corporation Act, 1894², the University no longer required the use of any portion of the estate; and the Board of Charity Commissioners approved the following scheme for the future regulation of the Charity, 29 October, 1897.

5. Benefaction of John Crane, 1651.

John Crane, an apothecary in Cambridge, who died 26 May, 1652¹, by Will dated 26 June, 1651 (proved in London 23 June, 1652), made certain bequests to the Town and University of Cambridge, and to other bodies (A).

(a) Relief of sick scholars.

This part of Mr Crane's benefaction remained inoperative until 1822, when public attention was called to the state of affairs¹. Since then the distribution of the fund has proceeded with regularity.

In 1866 (18 October), a Syndicate was appointed to examine into the question². They reported (21 November), among other things,

That the annual income of the Charity available for the relief of Sick Poor Scholars, was last year £245. 11s. 8d., and the sum distributed was £166. 7s. 8d. The sums not distributed have been invested from time to time in government securities, and the accumulations are now represented by the sum of £5193. 10s. 4d. Consols. The dividends arising from this stock form part of the present income of the Charity.

In the next place, after mentioning the number of meetings held by the distributors named in Mr Crane's Will, and the methods adopted by them to ascertain what sick scholars need relief, they stated that the fund was in excess of the amount required for distribution, and recommended that application should be made to the Charity Commissioners for leave to spend in each year a sum not exceeding £50 in the training of nurses.

This report having been confirmed by Grace 29 November, 1866, application was made to the Charity Commissioners, who issued the following opinion, dated 14 January, 1875:

The Board of Charity Commissioners...do hereby advise the... Trustees or Administrators [of Crane's Fleet Street Charity so far as relates to the share or proportion thereof applicable for the benefit of poor sick scholars at the University of Cambridge] that subject to and until the further direction of the said Board or some competent Court they may apply out of the income of the said share of the said Charity a yearly sum not exceeding fifty pounds in aid of the funds of some well conducted Institution at Cambridge or in the vicinity having for its object the training of competent nurses with the intent that the services of such nurses may be utilized for the benefit of poor sick students at the University of Cambridge³.

(b) House for the Regius Professor of Physic.

The house and premises on the south side of the Regent walk, devised by Mr Crane for the use of the Regius Professor of Physic, having been used in the year 1724 to provide part of the site for the Senate House and the improvements consequent thereon, a house in Market Street, then called Shoemaker's Row, was conveyed by the University, with the concurrence of Dr Green, then Regius Professor, to Sir Thomas Hatton and three other persons in trust for the Professors of Physic.

No new Trustees having been appointed since that date, and it having become uncertain upon whom the trust estate had legally devolved, it was ordered by the Court of Chancery, 13 July, 1853, upon petition of the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University and of the Regius Professor of Physic jointly, That the Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge be appointed new Trustees of the messuage, hereditaments and premises situate in Market Street in the town of Cambridge in the petition mentioned, in place of Sir Thomas Hatton, Bart., Sir John Hinde Cotton, Bart., Francis Pemberton and Samuel Gatward, in the petition named, all since deceased; And it is ordered that the estate and interest of the said recited persons, in the said messuage, estate and premises, rest in the said Chancellor, Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge upon the trusts expressed in the Will of John Crane in the petition named concerning the messuage and hereditaments thereby devised for the benefit of the Regius Professor of Physic in the said University.

These premises are now leased to Messrs Eaden Lilley. An order of the Court of Chancery, dated 5 March, 1859, allowed the lease to be for a term of 60 years¹.

Item I giue to the Vniversitie of Cambridge my House and Gallerey, wherein I now live, with my stable in Cutlers or Sherers lane, now in my owne hand, for the Physick Professor to liue in or lett so long as he holds the Professor's Place; provided that he lett nor lease it for longer time then he hold the Physick Professor's place: hee putting in securitie to the Vniversitie or the other Professors of Divinity or Law to keepe in good reparaire, to maintaine re-edifie and doe to keepe it all his time; and after his decease, or giueing over his Place, to the next Professor in Physique all the same freely, and soe to succede from one Professor to another in Physick for ever freely. This I doe for that I haue knowne some Physick Professors to wante houses to dwell in but haue bene putt to dwell in meane houses....

Estate or house of annual value of £62 to be bought.

Item whereas I haue appoynted and required and doe earnestly desire my executors to buy threescore pounds a yeare of good Land or Tenement, soe that the Tennants may haue a good pennyworth to pay willingly their rent, but I desire it may be threescore and two pounds a yeare, which I bestowe freely and willingly in manner following. And I desire my Executors to take good care in the setling it in good honest mens hands and able men as Feaffes in trust or as they shall thinke safest to be bestowed. I thinke Wesbeech men very safe, the ten men Corporate of Wesbeech, or, as my Executors shall thinke best; the vse as follows:

The first year's rent to be given to University of Cambridge for relief of poor scholars when sick.

The first yeares Rent being sixtie pound a yeare I giue to the Vniversitie of Cambridge, to be given to poore schollars for their Releife when they are sicke for paying for their Physick, dyet, or other things necessary for them in their sickness, knowing heretofore many haue miscarried for want of meanes to releiue them.

The charity to be distributed by Professors of Divinity, Law, and Physic, the chief apothecary in the town, and the Master of Gonville and Caius College.

This to be bestowed by the present Vice-Chancellor, the three Professors of Divinity, Civill Law and Phisick, and the cheife Apothecary in the towne, for that he knowes the need of most of the poore schollars in that case, desiring the Master of Caius Colledg to ioyne with them to assist them. This comes but once in five yeares to the Vniversitie.

The second year's rent to be given to the town of Wisbeach.

The second yeares renew I giue to the towne of Wesbeech, being threescore pound, to be lent freely to three young men to helpe to sett them vpp, thay putting in good security to repaye it at the twenty yeares end to the tenn men or others in trust at the twenty yeares end; and that then it be lent to other three men in like order, thay putting good security to repay it at the twenty yeares end. And this twenty pound and so every twenty pound to be shifted from one man to another at the expiration of twenty yeares, and this gift to continue vntill there be two hundred pound stock to be lent as aboue, it coming to them but every fift yeare.

Threescore pounds, the third yeares revenue, I giue to the towne of Cambridge to be lent to three young men toward the setting them vp, twenty pounds a man freely for twenty yeares. And this to be disposed by the Vice-Chancellor for the time being, the three Vniuersitie Professors of Divinity, Law and Physick, and the cheife Apothecary, the Maior for the time being, the Recorder and three Aldermen, or the greatest parte of them, whereof I appoynt two of them shall haue the money to be priuiledged persons, and the third a townesman, they putting in good security to pay it at the twenty yeares end, and then the parties intrusted to lend that twenty pounds to another young Man for the like time, vpon like conditions; and this to continue till the Towne hath two hundred pounds to lend to tenn young men towards setting them vp, never letting one man enioye the twenty pounds about twenty yeares.

The third year's rent to the town of Cambridge.

The fourth yeares reuenewe I giue to the Towne Corporate of King's Lynn in Norfolk, there to be lent to three young men in the like order as Wisbeech, and Cambridge doth; this to be lent by the Maior of King's Lynn for the time being, the Recorder and foure of the cheife Aldermen, the reuenewe being twenty pounds a man.

The fourth year's rent to the town of King's Lynn.

The fift yeares reuenews I giue to the towne Corporate of Ipswich, being the towne where Mr Butler of famous memory was borne, and so my own Father, and this to continue vntill the Towne haue two hundred pounds stocke, threescore pounds a yeare coming in every fift yeare; thus to be disposed and lent by two Bailiffs of Ipswich, the Recorder and foure of the cheife men in that body, thay taking good securitie for every twenty pounds soe lent in like order as Wisbeech doth; every towne haueing two hundred pound stocke to be lent freely for twenty yeares, and shifted to new parties every twenty yeares. But the Vniuersitie to haue their threescore pounds every fift yeare, to be bestowed as at first. My intent and meaning is that the threescore pounds a yeare shall continue to every towne afterwards every fift yeare, but the vse changed, that is, as it falls out to come to every towne, instead of lending it to young men or other as before expressed, that, (viz.) these threescore pounds a yeare to be given and bestowed vpon honest poore men that be in prison for Debt, or old women, or the releife of poore men in want, or releive them out of prison for debt, desireing them intrusted in this buisness, as they will answere it before God, that they releiue the most honest, godliest and religious men and women in the said severall townes, that haue lived well and had a good reporte, being fallen in decay by some extraordinarie occasion, and not to giue it to dissembling and hippo-criticall persons....

The fifth year's reuenue to the town of Ipswich.

To the Vniuersitie and Towne of Cambridge one hundred pounds to be lent freely to two honest men fifty pound a peece freely and for them to be the better enabled to buy provision of seafish or fowle the better to serve the Vniuersitie and Towne and to lett them haue it

£100 to University and town to be divided by way of loan between two honest men to buy sea-fish and fowls.

so long as they please, they taking good securitie for the paying it within three mounthes after it shalbe demanded backe.

A codicil, dated Sept. 20, 1651, contains the following passage :

Penalty for loss of any loan.

...Item my meaning is, that if any of them intrusted to lend this twentic pounds a peece to divers men be to careless in doing thereof as they loose the one halfe of the former two hundred pounds, that then the townes formerly bequeathed the like shall haue the whole profite of this my gift bestowed on them for the vse of the poore in them townes, and that towne soe careless to haue no more.

Forty shillings for a sermon.

Item I doe giue forty shillings to every towne where this money is to be bestowed, to haue a sermon that yeare to invite other men to doe the like¹.

6. Benefaction of the Reverend Hen. Latham, M.A., 1902.

The Reverend Henry Latham, M.A., Master of Trinity Hall, who died 5 June, 1902, by a codicil to his Will, which Will is dated 9 March, 1902, made a bequest to the University for the foundation of a fund for the purpose of giving assistance under certain conditions to members of the University or to their widows or children. The conditions of the bequest are set forth in the following extract from the codicil referred to. After making provision for the distribution of certain stocks and shares, the testator proceeds :

...And I direct that the residue of the said Stocks and Shares (hereinafter called the said fund) shall be transferred to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge to whom I bequeath the same absolutely

And I direct that the income arising therefrom shall be applied by the University in giving assistance occasional or annual to Members of the University who have been engaged in University or College work and who may have become incapacitated by age or infirmity or to the Widows or Children of Members of the University who may have been so engaged and have died without making sufficient provision for their families

And I declare that it shall be lawful for the said income to be accumulated by the University and added to capital for any term not exceeding 21 years from my death as may be determined by Grace of the Senate and I direct that the regulations for the administration of the said fund and the distribution of the income thereof and the application of the surplus income shall be in the absolute and uncontrolled discretion of the Senate of the University and may be varied from time to time at the like discretion as occasion may require and I empower the University at their discretion to amalgamate the said fund with other funds which I hope may be bequeathed or given to or provided by the University with similar objects...and I further declare that it shall be lawful for the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars to retain in their existing state of investment any portions of the said fund hereinbefore directed to be transferred to them whether such investments may or may not be authorised by law for the investment of trust funds

This bequest was made known to the University by the Council of the Senate in a report dated 15 February, 1904¹. The bequest was gratefully accepted 25 February².

MISCELLANEA

1. THE MS. COLLECTIONS OF ROBERT HARE¹, 1590.

This excellent antiquary gave to the University three sets of volumes into which he had caused to be transcribed, from the public archives and other sources, a long series of documents relating to the history, rights, and privileges of the University and Town of Cambridge, as follows :

1. Registrum novum monimentorum Universitatis Cantabrigiensis [etc.] in two volumes, large folio, on vellum, with illuminations.

2. A similar collection, in three volumes, small folio, on paper.

3. Do. in four volumes, quarto, on paper. The first and second volumes contain documents relating to the University; the third contains "diversa negotia;" the fourth documents relating to the Town. It is specified that all these are collected out of his 'new Register,' presumably the work in two volumes noted above, and arranged in a new order.

These nine volumes are in the Registry of the University.

In 1590 (2 October) the Public Orator wrote a letter of thanks to Hare for what may perhaps be the 'new Register.' He says :

Libri duo a te ad nos nuperrimè perlati sunt in quibus omnia Academiæ privilegia summo studio unum quasi in locum collegisti. Hos ut in frequenti senatu aspeximus egregiam simul et libertatis nostræ retinendæ spem, et amoris tui in Academiam testimonium assecuti videbamus².

The value of Mr Hare's work was recognised at once, for in 1591 the following Grace, referring of course to the new Register, passed the Senate :

Cum libri monumentorum et privilegiorum hujus Universitatis nuper per ornatissimum virum Magistrum Hare huic Academiæ donati

² Registry, Epistolæ Academicæ, Vol. i.

in privatorum manibus adhuc sint remanentes, nec auctoritate vestra cautum sit ubi et quomodo iidem libri reserventur Placet vobis ut Dominus Procancellarius nomine Academiae dictos libros (ubicunque fuerint) requirat et in manus suas recipiat, sic ut infra spatium unius mensis proxime subsequentis eosdem libros in Cista communi Universitatis reponat, ibi perpetuo servandos, nec inde aliquando ulla de causa removeantur nisi suffragante et consentiente majore parte regentium et non regentium. Et ut haec concessio vestra pro statuto habeatur et in librum procuratorum describatur ante initium proximi termini.

Concessa fuit Martii 26^o, 1591¹.

A further instalment of Hare's work, perhaps the collections which I have designated (2) and (3), came to the University in this same year, for 6 May, 1591, the Public Orator addressed him in a letter which begins as follows:

Libros tuos jam iterum descriptos, alia forma, novo habitu, academiae repraesentatos, prid. non. Maii frequenti Senatu suscepimus, ornatissime Haree, qua laetitia quo studio ipsi optime intelligimus, sed et tu facile conjicies...².

2. BENEFACTION OF WALTER TITLEY, M.A. (Trin.), 1768.

The Vice-Chancellor (Ja. Marriott, LL.D., Master of Trinity Hall) was informed of this benefaction in the following letter:

JERMYN STREET, ST JAMES'S, 6 April, 1768.

SIR,

I am to acquaint you, in capacity of Executor and Administrator to the Will of the late Walter Titley³, Esq., His Majesty's Envoy Extraordinary at the Court of Denmark, for the Information of the University of Cambridge, and your own, that he has left the sum of Five-hundred Pounds Sterling to the said University, at the disposition of the Vice-Chancellor. The Words of his Will, which is written in the French language, are: Je donne à l'Université de Cambridge cinq cens Livres Sterling pour être employés par le Vice-Chancelier comme Chef de la dite Université.

I am with great Respect, Sir [etc.],

E. WESTON¹.

The money was paid to Dr Marriott during his year of office, and invested in the purchase of £561 Consols². Mr Weston's letters, and a deed, dated 2 November, 1768, between Dr Marriott and the two persons in whose names the stock was invested, shew that he was in favour of building "a Spacious Room in some commodious part of the University for the accommodation of the Professors and Students thereof to read and hear publicly therein Lectures in Divinity Law Physic Modern History Mathematics Experimental Philosophy Botany Astronomy the Learned Languages and Music," and a list of subscriptions to supplement the gift was opened 31 October, 1768. It was provided by the above deed that if the room in question was not begun in seven years, the money should be spent as the Will directs. The scheme found but little favour in the University, and only £199. 10s. was promised³.

3. THE STANFORD DICTIONARY, 1881.

In 1881 the Vice-Chancellor received the following extract from the Will of John Frederick Stanford, M.A. (Chr.), Barrister-at-law, who had died in December, 1880:

...Item I do give and bequeath £5000 Consols (3 per Cent. Government Stock) free of all duties to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge if accepted by them on the terms and conditions hereafter expressed (of which University I am M.A. and was formerly a Scholar of Christ's College and Worts Travelling (University) Bachelor) to be by my Executors and Trustees transferred to them into their names to be held by them the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars on trust by them to be applied for the express purpose of carrying on to completion and publication my Etymological Dictionary

¹ Mr Titley's executor was Edw. Weston, Fellow of King's College, B.A. 1723, M.A. 1727. He held several public appointments and was a Privy Councillor for Ireland. He died 15 July, 1770. See Dict. Nat. Biogr. Vol. lx. p. 358.

And they will and shall have vested in them all or any value of such Dictionary now in MS and when complete and may dispose of the same or give it gratis to such Publisher or Society in order to facilitate the publication should they decline to print and publish the same at the University Press on their own account and reserve the Copyright I do not object to the Dictionary being extended to a full and perfect Etymological Dictionary of the English Language if the above University would undertake such a desirable and national work

And should the said Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Cambridge refuse and decline to accept this bequest on the aforesaid condition Then I do desire and request my Executors and Trustees to make offer of the above sum of £5000 £3 Per Centum Consols upon the same terms and conditions to the Chancellor Masters and Scholars of the University of Oxford and should they also refuse and decline the said bequest I must leave my Executors and Trustees to do the best they can in some other way to effectuate my wishes.

The Council of the Senate, after consultation with Professor Cowell, Professor Skeat, and Mr W. Aldis Wright, recommended that the bequest should be declined¹. This report was fully discussed 18 October, and the Grace to confirm it (27 October) was rejected by a majority of 104 votes². A Syndicate was appointed (10 November):

To consider whether the bequest...can be accepted by the University under the conditions of the Will, and if so, to suggest a Scheme to give effect thereto; that they be authorised to take legal advice, if they deem it necessary, and that they report to the Senate before the end of the present term³.

³ Reporter, 15 November, p. 117.

This Syndicate issued a report dated 26 November, 1881, in which they recommended the acceptance of Mr Stanford's bequest, and pointed out in what way his intentions might be carried out¹. The report having been confirmed by Grace 8 December², a second Syndicate was appointed (9 March, 1882) "to prepare a Scheme for carrying out the report" of the former Syndicate. They recommended (30 March) that the work should be undertaken by the University Press, and that an editor should be appointed³. The editor selected was C. A. M. Fennell, M.A. (Jes.)⁴, and the Dictionary was published in September, 1892⁵.

4. MARINE BIOLOGICAL ASSOCIATION, 1887.

In 1887 (2 February) the following letter was addressed to the Vice-Chancellor by Professor Newton :

UNIVERSITY MUSEUM OF ZOOLOGY AND COMPARATIVE ANATOMY,
CAMBRIDGE, 2 February, 1887.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

At a public meeting held 29 November, 1884, in the Lecture Room of Comparative Anatomy at the New Museums, the Vice-Chancellor (Dr Ferrers) in the chair, it was agreed that steps should be taken in the University and Town of Cambridge to further the objects of the Marine Biological Association, and a Committee was appointed to collect subscriptions in aid thereof.

At a subsequent meeting of the subscribers to the Fund, held 25 October, 1886, the following report of the Committee was adopted unanimously :

That, it having been thought desirable that the sum of Five Hundred Pounds (£500) be raised and placed in the hands of the University, under conditions to be determined at a future meeting of the subscribers, for the purpose of enabling the University to become a Governor of the Marine Biological Association, and the full sum named having been collected and invested in Consols, the Committee recommend that the said sum of Five Hundred Pounds (£500) be handed over to the University for payment to the Treasurer of the Marine Biological Association on the conditions following :

1. That in accordance with By-law 17 of the Marine Biological Association the University of Cambridge shall become a Governor of the said Association, and acquire the perpetual right of nominating annually one Member of the Council of the Association to serve for one year, from the annual meeting in one year to that in the following year.

2. That the representative of the University of Cambridge on the Council of the Marine Biological Association shall be appointed in each year by Grace of the Senate on the recommendation of the Special Board for Biology and Geology; but that it shall be open to the Senate of the University of Cambridge at any time to modify this arrangement.

3. That the Marine Biological Association shall signify its acceptance of the above conditions.

The Secretary of the Marine Biological Association has informed me, as Chairman of the Committee, that the Council of the Association has accepted the above conditions.

He writes as follows:

11, WELLINGTON MANSIONS,
NORTH BANK, LONDON, N.W.,
4 December, 1886.

MY DEAR PROFESSOR NEWTON,

The proposal of a Committee formed at Cambridge for the purpose of enabling the University of Cambridge to become a Governor of the Marine Biological Association under the provisions of By-Law 17, commencing "Any University of the United Kingdom," was brought before the Council of the Association yesterday.

I am instructed to inform you, as representing that Committee, that the Council of the Association passed unanimously a resolution assenting to the proposal of the Committee as required by the By-Law; and that on payment of £500 to the Treasurer of the Association in the name of the University of Cambridge, the University will become a Governor of the Association, and acquire the perpetual right of nominating annually one Member of the Council of the Association to serve for one year (from the annual meeting in one year to that in the following year).

The Council have also taken note of the mode of nomination which it is proposed that the University shall pursue, also explained in the communication forwarded to them by you.

I am, dear Professor Newton, Yours very truly,

E. RAY LANKESTER,
Hon. Sec. M. B. A.

I beg leave further to inform you that the Treasurer of the Committee is prepared to hand over to you the sum of five hundred pounds (£500), so soon as the University shall have approved the conditions above stated; and that any balance remaining in the hands of the Treasurer (arising from accumulated interest) will be handed over to the Treasurer of the Marine Biological Association (in accordance with a resolution of the Committee) as a contribution to the Library Fund of the Association.

I remain, dear Mr Vice-Chancellor, Yours very truly,

ALFRED NEWTON,
*Chairman of the Committee*¹.

The By-law of the Association above referred to is as follows:

“The payments to be made by the Members shall be as follows:— A Governor shall pay £500, a Founder £100, and an Ordinary Member shall pay £1. 1s. annually. The annual contribution may be compounded for at any time on payment of £15. 15s. Any University of the United Kingdom, on the payment of £500 to the Association in the name of the University and for the purpose of acquiring the right herein specified, shall, if the Council of the Association assent thereto, become a Governor of the Association, and acquire the perpetual right of nominating annually one Member of the Council of the Association to serve for one year (from the Annual Meeting in one year to that in the following year), and any resident Member of the University subscribing £100 or more to such fund of £500, shall, in virtue of such subscription, become a “Founder” of the Association.”

This offer was accepted and the subscribers were thanked by Grace 24 February, 1887².

5. COLLECTION OF SIR ISAAC NEWTON'S MSS., PRESENTED BY THE EARL OF PORTSMOUTH, 1888.

In 1872 (6 November) the following Grace passed the Senate:

The Earl of Portsmouth having entrusted to the University a valuable collection of Sir Isaac Newton's Manuscripts, with a view to their being examined and (with the exception of certain portions indicated by his Lordship) presented to the University; That the Vice-Chancellor, Professor Stokes, Professor Adams, Professor Liveing, and H. R. Luard, M.A., Registry of the University, be appointed a Syndicate to examine the MSS. and make such arrangement and separation as would best carry out Lord Portsmouth's intentions¹.

In 1888 (26 May) this Syndicate reported as follows:

They have very carefully examined the collection, have divided it under such heads as seemed most appropriate, and have prepared a detailed Catalogue of the whole. This Catalogue has now been printed, and the Syndicate beg leave to recommend that it be published by the University.

The books and papers retained by Lord Portsmouth are marked in the Catalogue as returned to him. Some of these have been already returned and the remainder will be sent back shortly. The portion of the collection presented by Lord Portsmouth to the University is ready to be transferred to the Library as soon as a place is found for it.

In bringing their work to a termination the Syndicate wish to express their sense of the great interest and value of the collection, and of the great liberality of Lord Portsmouth in thus bestowing the scientific papers of Newton on his own University. It will be necessary either to bind, or to do something in the way of mending, a considerable portion of the papers, as they have suffered much from the ravages of fire and damp. As the greater portion of the miscellaneous correspondence is retained by Lord Portsmouth, copies of the more important of these letters have been made, by his permission, and placed with the portion of the collection presented to the University. With this has also been placed a copy of Brewster's Life of Newton, in which the letters printed from this collection have been corrected after careful collation with the originals. For the history of the papers and all details respecting them, the Syndicate beg leave to refer to the catalogue.

The Syndicate recommend that Lord Portsmouth's generous offer be accepted and that the thanks of the University be returned to him for his most valuable gift².

This report was confirmed by Grace, 12 June, 1888; and on the same day a letter of thanks to Lord Portsmouth, written by the Public Orator, was ordered to be sealed³.

6. OTHER GIFTS.

- a. Egyptian Mummy, given by the Hon. Geo. Townshend, 1743.

The Orator's letter to thank Mr Townshend was ordered to be sealed 26 April, 1743¹. The mummy, now in the Fitzwilliam Museum, is of an unknown person of the late Roman period, about A.D. 350.

- b. A Statue, said to represent Glory, given by Peter Burrell, B.A. (Joh.), 1748.

This statue, executed at Florence in 1715, by John Baratta, was originally placed in the Senate House. In 1748 an attempt to remove it, on the ground that it had been placed there without authority, was frustrated, and instead, Mr Burrell was thanked for his generosity (16 December)². In 1807, on the arrival of the statue of Mr Pitt, it was removed to the Law School (16 January)³, where it remained until 1885, when it was taken to the Fitzwilliam Museum⁴.

- c. Marbles brought from Greece by Edw. Dan. Clarke, LL.D. (Jes.), 1804.

In 1804 (2 November) the following Grace passed the Senate:

Cum nonnulla antiqua monumenta ab Edvardo Daniel Clarke, LL.D. et J. Marten Cripps, A.M. liberaliter munificeque huic Academiae donata in vestibulo bibliothecae publicae collocata fuerint, reique adeo litterariae usui et ornamento facta sint Placeat Vobis ut Domino Pro-cancellario concedatur potestas pecuniae e cistâ communi desumendae, quae impensis in re istâ exsolvendis suffecerit⁵.

⁵ Grace Book A, p. 458.

This Grace seems to be the only record of this important gift. The principal statue, then believed to represent Ceres, is said to have been placed in the vestibule of the Library, 1 July, 1803, "with all due forms and honours¹."

- d. A copy, in bronze, of the Warwick Vase, given by His Grace the Duke of Northumberland, Chancellor, 1842.

The Orator's letter of thanks was ordered to be sealed 2 July, 1842². The Vase was placed in the centre of Senate House Yard.

- e. Casts from the Ornaments of the Alhambra, given by Sir Grenville Temple, Bart., 1842.

The Orator's letter of thanks was ordered to be sealed 19 October, 1842³. The English version of the Grace states that the casts are "presented to the University."

- f. A copy, in bronze, of Flaxman's Shield of Achilles, given by Messrs Rundell and Bridge, 1842.

The Orator's letter of thanks was ordered to be sealed 19 October, 1842⁴.

- g. The coffins of Pa-kepu, a water-carrier at Thebes, given by H.R.H. the Prince of Wales, 1869.

The thanks of the University were given to His Royal Highness by Grace, 14 October, 1869⁵.

- h. Benefaction of Sir John Fre. Will. Herschel, M.A. (Joh.), 1872.

In 1872 (17 April) the Vice-Chancellor published to the University the following extract from the Will of Sir J. F. W. Herschel, who died 11 May, 1871 :

i. Designs for the Library; made by Cha. Rob. Cockerell, architect, and presented by Mr Fre. Pepys Cockerell, 1887.

This valuable gift consists of about 160 plans, studies, sketches, and working-drawings, relating to the various designs which were made and abandoned between 1829, when the first competition took place, and 1836, when Mr Cockerell's design was selected by the Senate¹. It was accepted by Grace, and Mrs Cockerell thanked, 10 March, 1887². In 1900 Mrs Cockerell gave a large framed drawing in water-colours, signed "C. R. C. April 13, 1836," representing the east façade and the south side of his design for the Library. Mrs Cockerell wished that this drawing should be considered as the gift of her eldest son, Robert Pepys Cockerell³. In 1902 a further series of plans, etc. was given to the University, and placed, as the others had been, in the Library.

k. Memorial to the Reverend Hen. Richards Luard, D.D., (Trin.), 1892.

In 1892 (12 December) the Vice-Chancellor published the following letter⁴:

2, S. PAUL'S ROAD, CAMBRIDGE,
9 Dec. 1892.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I desire, in the name of the subscribers, to present to the University the new clock which has been recently placed in the tower of Great S. Mary's as a memorial to the late Dr Luard.

¹ A detailed description of it, by J. W. Clark, M.A., will be found in the Reporter, 22 February, 1887, p. 432.

² Ibid. p. 533.

³ Ibid. 23 October, 1900, p. 85.

⁴ Ibid. 13 December, 1892, p. 282.

I had the advantage of receiving the advice of Lord Grimthorpe in regard to all the details of the mechanism, and Mr Dew Smith of Trinity College was kind enough to superintend the work of fixing. I am much indebted to both, for the assistance they have so readily rendered in this matter.

Believe me to be, [etc.] WM. CUNNINGHAM.

This gift was accepted with thanks, 15 December¹.

10. THE SEALS, 1580.

A. The Seal of the University.

The Seal at present in use was designed by Matthew Stokys, one of the Esquire Bedells, in 1580, when (9 December) the following Grace passed the Senate:

Novum sigillum commune

Conceditur 9 Decembris ut sigillum nunc oblatum per Mattheum Stokys bedellum veteri magis insigne vestra auctoritate approbetur et pro communi sigillo universitatis habeatur, sic ut deinceps singula publice academie nomine obsignanda hoc sigillo solo obsignentur et vetus commune sigillum cancelletur⁷.

This seal is a pointed oval, four inches long by two and a-half inches wide, of silver, originally provided with a handle at the back, but this has been long since removed. The centre displays a seated figure of the Chancellor between two other persons, who are apparently, from their dress, Masters of Arts, and each holds a book. It is possible that these are the Proctors, for the book carried by one of the two figures is evidently the Statutes, held as now by chains attached to the covers. The Chancellor is seated on a sort of throne of debased design, and wears his gown and furred tippet; his cap, however, is square instead of round. Above the Chancellor's throne is the trilingual Holy Name, and above the head of each of the figures beside him is a shield of France Modern and England quarterly. In base is the present shield of arms of the University dividing the date, 1580; and above it a large scroll inscribed * MARS MUSAS *. The marginal legend is:

+ SIGILLVM * CŒ * CANCELLARII * M̄ROR * ET * SCHOLARIV̄ * VNIVERSITAT * CANTEBRIGIE, that is: Sigillum commune Cancellarii Magistrorum et Scholarium Universitatis Cantebriegie.

On the back of the seal is a marginal inscription recording the donors of the material and of the design:

GVILIELMVS * FARRAND * PROCVRATOR * DEDIT * MATERIAM
MATTHÆVS * STOKIS * BEDELLVS * DEDIT * FORMAM * 1580 *¹

B. Seal of the Chancellor.

This seal is no longer in use. The making of it is recorded in the following Grace, which passed the Senate 16 December, 1580:

Novum sigillum officii

Conceditur 16 Decembris quum sigillum officii domini Cancellarii valde parvum sit et vetustate pene consumptum ut ex argento eiusdem sigilli et aliorum duorum remanentium quorum nullus nunc est usus, novum pro officio Cancellarii et eius deputati sigillum conficiatur ad descripcionem et formam quas Mattheus Stokys bedellus assignabit².

The seals broken up on this occasion would be the old Chancellor's seal, and the two earlier University seals, the existence of which is known from impressions of them attached to ancient documents.

¹ This description is borrowed from The Seals and Armorial Insignia of the University and Colleges of Cambridge, by W. H. St John Hope, M.A. 4to. Lond. 1881. Part I. It is much to be regretted that this valuable work has not been completed.

² Grace Book Δ, fol. 134.

This seal is a pointed oval three inches long by two inches wide, of silver, evidently the work of the engraver who executed the Seal of the University, described above. In the centre is a figure of the Chancellor standing, clothed in gown, fur tippet, and square cap. He holds a book in his right hand, and is announcing from a pulpit the words DOMINVS PROPE EST. In base is the shield of the University dividing the date, 1580; and from each of the upper angles of the shield issues a sprig of laurel. Above the Chancellor's head is a crowned shield of the Royal Arms, France Modern and England quarterly. The marginal legend is:

+ SIGILLVM * OFFICII * CANCELLARII * ALME *
VNIVERSITATIS * CANTEBRIGIE *

On the reverse is a marginal inscription:

EX . DONO . D . EDW . LEEDYS . IVRIS . CIVILIS . DOCTORIS .

and in the centre the letters M. S. doubtless for Matthew Stokys. There was originally a handle on the back¹.

11. THE MACES.

The three Maces for the use of the Esquire Bedells were presented by George Villiers, first Duke of Buckingham, on his election to the office of Chancellor, 1626².

The Yeoman Bedell's Mace was probably presented by Thomas Rich, Earl of Holland, who succeeded the Duke of Buckingham as Chancellor in 1628.

Neither gift was accepted by Grace.

12. THE VICE-CHANCELLOR'S CUP.

This cup, intended for the use of the Vice-Chancellor during his term of office, was given in 1598 by Robert Devereux, Earl of Essex, who had been elected Chancellor in that year. The hall-mark shews that it was made in 1592-3. Round the edge of the bowl is the following inscription :

² Fuller, ed. Prickett and Wright, p. 311. The subject of the four maces has been thoroughly investigated by A. P. Humphry, M.A., in a paper printed in Camb. Ant. Comm. Vol. iv. pp. 207—218.

ROB. COM. ESSEX. COM. MARESCH. ANGLIÆ. CANCEL. CANT. ACAD.
DEDIT. PROCANCEL^o. SVCCESIVE. A. RR. ELIZ. 40. 1598.

No Grace to thank him can be found, but in a collection of letters preserved in the Registry is a letter to him dated 2 November, 1598, in which the Vice-Chancellor and Senate express their gratitude for benefits received. The cup is not expressly mentioned, but it may be assumed that it is included in the rest¹.

XIII.
FINANCE

1. CAPITATION TAX.

In 1825 (7 December) the following Grace, proposed by the Library Syndicate, was allowed by the Caput, and passed the Senate:

To increase the Funds of the Library by a quarterly contribution of one shilling and sixpence from each Member of the University, excepting Sizars¹.

In 1860 (27 April) the Council of the Senate proposed the following scheme of taxation for general purposes:

That all persons who have taken the Degree of Doctor in Divinity, Law, or Medicine, Bachelor of Divinity, Master of Arts or of Law, be required to pay to the University in every year the sum of twelve shillings, including the sum of six shillings, payable, as heretofore, for the support of the University Library: such annual sum of twelve shillings to be paid to the Vice-Chancellor by four equal quarterly payments on the usual quarter-days, the first of which shall become due at Midsummer, 1860.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 10 May, 1860, but not without opposition².

In 1866 a Syndicate appointed 14 April, "to consider the question of a capitation-tax, how large it ought to be, and to what purposes it ought to be devoted," issued a report (9 May), in which, after enumerating the existing taxes, namely: six shillings to the Chest, six shillings to the Library, and two shillings and eightpence towards the expenses incurred by the provisions of the Cambridge Improvement Acts, they say :

² Grace Book P, pp. 22—24. The numbers were: Placet, 30; Non Placet, 17.

The Syndicate are of opinion that in the place of these separate taxes for specific purposes, one uniform charge should be made upon all the members of the University ; that the amount should be paid in the first instance to the University Chest ; and that provision should be made out of the monies in the Chest for a contribution to the Library Funds, for paying the portion of the University Quota charged to members of the University, and for other purposes.

As a result of these views they suggest "that a uniform capitation-tax of seventeen shillings might be charged upon all the members of the University without distinction." This report was confirmed by Grace, 31 May, 1866¹.

In 1893 the Financial Board suggested that the above tax, so far as the undergraduate members of the University were concerned, should be increased from seventeen shillings to two pounds a year. Their amended report, dated 17 May, 1893, concludes with the following recommendation :

That every member of the University who is matriculated after the end of the Lent Term, 1894, be required to make a quarterly payment to the University Chest on the usual quarter-days in respect of each quarter during which or any portion of which his name is on the Boards of a College or Hostel or on the List of Non-Collegiate Students : that in respect of the quarter in which he is matriculated and in respect of each succeeding quarter up to and including the quarter in which he is admitted to his first Degree the payment be ten shillings (in lieu of the payment of four shillings and threepence prescribed by Grace of 31 May, 1866), and in respect of all other quarters the payment be four shillings and threepence².

This report was confirmed by Grace, 1 June, 1893³.

2. ENDOWMENT FUND.

In 1897 the Vice-Chancellor (Charles Smith, M.A., Master of Sidney Sussex College) invited the principal officials of the University, with a certain number of members of the Senate, to attend a private meeting at Trinity College Lodge on Thursday, 4 February, "to consider the Financial Condition and Requirements of the University, and the desirability of bringing the subject before the notice of the graduates of the University and of the public generally." The meeting was largely attended, and soon afterwards a statement of the financial condition and requirements of the University was circulated, with a letter written by His Grace the Chancellor.

In 1898, at the suggestion of the Vice-Chancellor (Alex. Hill, M.D., Master of Downing College), it was decided to form an Association, to be called The Cambridge University Association, consisting of members and friends of the University, "whose primary object shall be to procure the better endowment of the University as a place of education, religion, learning, and research." The objects of this Association will be understood by the following extract from its rules :

(a) To make known to the public by means of published reports or otherwise the general claims of the University for increased financial support, the present needs of such existing departments as are hindered by lack of funds, and the prospective requirements of such new departments of learning or science as it is desirable to provide for.

(b) To stimulate by means of meetings, communications through the press, and otherwise, the interest of the country at large in the work and progress of the University as an institution of national importance.

(c) To enlist by means of its corporate influence and the personal influence of its members the active sympathy of persons of wealth and position who may be disposed to become benefactors of the University.

(d) To foster among its members by means of its periodical publications and assemblies, and the formation of Local Branches in various parts of the Empire, a spirit of loyalty to the University and a sense of common responsibility for its due maintenance and advancement.

In 1899 (1 February) a meeting was held at Devonshire House. The Chancellor presided, and various speakers set forth the immediate necessity for according large pecuniary assistance to the University.

As a result of this meeting, and of the efforts of the Association, the Endowment Fund, the details of which are printed below, has been gradually formed. As many subscriptions are accompanied by conditions, the gifts have been sorted under the heads thus indicated, arranged in alphabetical order.

APPENDIX

1. LAND AT NINE WELLS, SHELFORD, AND ELSEWHERE,
IN CONNECTION WITH THE NEW RIVER, 1834.

In, or shortly before, the year 1610, the University and the Town paid for the conveyance into Cambridge of one running stream or current of water arising or running from the springs or fountains commonly called the Nine Wells, situate in or near the bounds of Trumpington...down to the ford commonly called Trumpington Ford, and from thence by a watercourse ditch or channel newly and lately made, partly in the fields, and partly in the Town of Cambridge, and through the...common drain or sewer called the King's Ditch, into the river and high stream there, to the end as well for the cleansing...of divers and sundry drains and watercourses belonging to divers and sundry colleges and halls and houses of students within the University as also to scour and cleanse the drain or ditch above-mentioned by the water running continually or for the most part through the same¹.

This indenture further states that Mr Thomas Chaplyn, lord of the manor of Trumpington aforesaid, had demised to [the same parties] all the soil of the new channel or watercourse which was parcel of his soil...and also for the necessary use of cleansing and scouring the said new channel ditch or watercourse and for the better amending and repairing of the banks thereof...six feet of the soil, if there be so much, in every place on each side immediately adjoining such channel ditch or watercourse...¹

This stream, commonly described as the New River, supplies the conduit in the Market Place, erroneously referred to as Hobson's Conduit, his share in it being limited to a bequest of land for maintaining it, with £10 for heightening it² by half a yard or more, if convenient.

² Ibid. p. 235.

In 1834 (22 May) the royal assent was given to "An Act for inclosing lands in the Parish of Great Shelford in the County of Cambridge," in virtue of which the Commissioners were required to allot to the University and Town jointly, on payment of a competent sum, a close surrounding the Nine Wells, and other lands adjoining to the watercourse. The clauses of the Act, printed below (A), explain what was to be done. The University appointed a Syndicate 15 October, 1834, "to take such steps on the part of the University as they may think necessary respecting the Nine Wells," and recommended that "a sum not exceeding £150 be placed at the disposal of the Vice-Chancellor for the purchase and inclosure of land in the neighbourhood of the Nine Wells, under the Shelford Inclosure Act." This was accepted by Grace 29 October, 1834¹; and it appears from the Audit Book for 1834-35 that the sum actually paid was £125. 5s. 0d.

THE SQUIRE LAW LIBRARY.

It has been related already that the erection of a Law Library was one of the purposes for which Miss Squire left her estate in trust; and that a design for such a Library was approved by the Senate 7 June, 1900². In a subsequent report dated 13 May, 1901, the Law School and Library Buildings Syndicate recommended, among other things, that a deed should be executed "between the University and the Trustees under the Will of the late Miss Squire to provide for the erection of the proposed Law Library³." This recommendation was confirmed by the following Grace, 6 June, 1901:

5. JOHN WINBOLT PRIZE, 1904.

In 1903 the Vice-Chancellor received the following letter from Mrs Winbolt, offering to found a prize in memory of her husband John Steddy Winbolt, M.A. of Trinity College:

27 October, 1903.

DEAR MR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

I wish to offer for the acceptance of the University a sum of £500 in order to found in the School of Engineering an annual prize in memory of my husband and to be called by his name.

I have consulted with Professor Ewing who has drawn up for me a skeleton of conditions to serve as a basis for the regulations which should be drafted for your approval...

I am, Mr Vice-Chancellor,

Yours faithfully,

C. J. WINBOLT.

The matter having been referred to the Council of the Senate, they consulted the Special Board for Physics and Chemistry, who stated that they would regard with satisfaction the establishment of the prize, and then issued a report dated 18 January, 1904², in which they recommended the acceptance with thanks of Mrs Winbolt's offer, and suggested regulations, one of which is that the prize be called the John Winbolt Prize.

6. BENEFACTION OF THE REVEREND VINCENT,
HENRY STANTON, D.D., 1904.

In January, 1904, the Vice-Chancellor received the following letter from Dr Stanton, Ely Professor of Divinity:

TRINITY COLLEGE, CAMBRIDGE,
Jan. 15, 1904.

MY DEAR VICE-CHANCELLOR,

The Senate last June accepted the proposal of the Special Board for Divinity to add to Part II of the Theological Tripos a new Section on the Philosophy of Religion and Christian Ethics, the first examination in which is to be held in June 1906. We may hope that some students will begin to prepare for this examination after the present Academic Year, and the question of providing for any who may do so the advice and teaching which they will require must soon be taken into consideration. I think that some of the existing staff of Divinity teachers in the University may be able and glad to give assistance in certain of the subjects included in the Schedule. But it is also very desirable that courses of lectures should be given from time to time by some one who is an expert in philosophy, in a way that those who have been much occupied with Theology, Biblical Criticism, and Church History can rarely succeed in being, and who has also given special attention to the subject of its relation to religious belief.

I wish to make over to the University a capital sum which will produce about £100 per annum, for the purpose of endowing a Lectureship in the Philosophy of Religion, if the Senate will accept the offer. I think that for this stipend some competent man could always be found to give a full course of lectures in one term of each Academic Year.

I believe that such lectures would prove attractive to others besides students for the new section of the Theological Tripos. But as it is primarily my intention to provide for the instruction of the latter, I am disposed to make it a condition that the subjects and times of the Lecturer's courses should have to be approved by the Special Board for Divinity. Other points, such as the mode of appointment to, and the length of tenure of, the lectureship, I am willing to leave to the decision of the Senate. But I venture to hope that it may be possible for the first Lecturer to be appointed before the end of next Easter Term.

Believe me,

Yours very sincerely,

V. H. STANTON.

This letter having been referred to the General Board of Studies, they issued a report¹ (17 February) in which they proposed that Dr Stanton's generous offer should be accepted, and that the new Lecturer should have the status of a University Lecturer subject to certain regulations², which had been approved by Professor Stanton and by the Special Boards for Divinity and for Moral Science. They further suggested :

That the Lecturer should be connected with the Special Board for Divinity, and that in each year he should in advance submit a statement of the subjects of his Lectures both to the Special Board for Divinity and to the Special Board for Moral Science. The General Board observe that in the Schedule for Metaphysical and Ethical Philosophy in Part II of the Moral Sciences Tripos recently issued provisionally by the Special Board for Moral Science the Philosophy of Religion is included as one of the subjects of examination.

This report was confirmed by Grace, 28 April, 1904, and the Vice-Chancellor was empowered to convey the thanks of the University to Dr Stanton³.
